Stuart Platten, a young man, on August 7th, appeared before the Yarmouth magistrates, Mr. T. J. Saul presiding, for committing a breach of the Wild Birds Protection Act. Mr. H. P. Frederick, who prosecuted, said that the offence charged was attempting to shoot a couple of Dunlin, but it was found that it was just outside the borough jurisdiction. It would be necessary, therefore, to amend the summons to one for using a boat for the purpose of shooting wild birds.

Jary, the Breydon watcher, said that on August 5th he was in his boat and heard a couple of shots from the Five Stake Drain, and saw the birds fly up. He got his glasses, and saw a boat coming up under the river wall with sail up. He landed, and walked toward the approaching boat in which defendant was. When witness was within 25 yards a couple of Dunlin came straight toward defendant, who fired and missed. After tacking for some time he went to pick up a wounded Gull, and witness then spoke to him. Defendant said he had let the bird go, and suggested that he should square the matter with a half-crown. Dunlin were in the protected schedule, and the only birds that could be shot now were Duck and Snipe. Witness could not say defendant shot a Gull, but there was no one else shooting about there. He had not warned defendant.

In the box defendant produced a shooting diary, which stated that the period of protection ended on July 31st. The magistrates examined this, and the clerk said that clearly it was not very reliable.

Defendant said he only fired at one bird, and he did not know what it was. He picked up the Gull to see what was the matter with it. Finding its wing broken he let it go again. He had only bought the gun two days.—The Chairman (Mr. T. J. Saul) said that people who bought guns should find out what they could do with them before they went out and blazed away at everything they saw. It did not make any difference whether defendant shot at one bird or 20. As it was the first case of the kind it would be dismissed on defendant paying the costs.

Watching the Dipper.

The following is taken from one of Jeffries' delightful Nature books:—"Like the trout, the Colley always feeds at the rapids, and flies as they swim, from fall to fall. He was bobbing up and down, his legs bent, and his rusty brown body went up and down, but as I was hidden by a hedge he gained confidence, suspended his curtsying, and began to feed. First he looked all round the stone, and then stepped to another similar island in the midst of the running water, pushing his head over the edge of it. Next he stepped into the current, which, though shallow, looked strong enough to sweep him away. The water checked against him rose to the white mark on his breast. He waded up the rapid, every now and then thrusting his head completely under water; sometimes he was up to his neck, sometimes not so deep; now and then getting on a stone, searching right and left as he climbed the cascade. The eddying water shot by his slender legs, but he moved against it easily, and soon ascended the waterfall. At the summit a second Colley flew past, and he rose and accompanied his friend."

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards. Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Wheezing and Caping.

Novice.—The bird has probably been subjected to a draught or a chill by some means, or it may have become more than usually susceptable to weather changes on account of the oncoming moult. See she is now properly protected from any chill or draught; do not give cold baths until she is quite recovered; and keep her in a nice cosy and airily warm place. Do not, however, go to the other extreme of overheating her. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape; give a pinch of hemp twice a week, the same amount of maw seed as often, and twice a week a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry on it. Give also a spray of chickweed or a plantain stalk or two daily. A tepid bath may be given occasionally in fine weather. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and five each of syrup of squills and paregoric, well shaken together in each ounce of water, every second day, and on alternate days fifteen drops of Chemical Food. If the bird is not considerably better at the end of a week discontinue the squills and paregoric in the first mixture and give instead the same amount of whiskey and glycerine, and three drops of oil of encalyptus. Shake this thoroughly when mixing, and continue giving it every second day for a fortnight, or until the wheeziness is quite cured.

A Wicked Hen.

Pte. B. McA. (South Africa).—Beyond saying that both birds are quite young, you give no indication of their age, and if their youth is of too tender a description, that would account for their not breeding. To have a fair chance of success the birds should be over their first moult, and nearing twelve months old at the least. If your birds comply with these conditions, and the cock is in good song you should have patience, and with a little more judicious feeding, as given below, you will doubtless succeed yet. If the bird is not in song, then I should be inclined to doubt its sex, and mate the hen to a vigorous cock in stout song forthwith. You should endeavour to keep them in a fairly quiet place, where they will not be disturbed by people passing by them continually, but with plenty of light and fresh air, but no draughts. Discontinue the seed mixture you are giving, and feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, twice a week give just a pinch of hemp seed, and every second day a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, until the hen has gone to nest. A similar quantity of egg food or bread and milk may be substituted for the sponge cake if you wish, but care must be taken to keep them always perfectly fresh and sweet. Give a liberal supply of green food daily and keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and plenty of gritty sand on the floor. Given these elementary general conditions, the birds should soon go to nest if the summer is not getting too far advanced and the birds are a true pair. The latter point I am a little inclined to doubt.

Disordered Bowels.

J. M.—Your feeding is not of the best description, but is scarcely bad enough to account for the persistent constipation, which is what troubles the bird, in spite of the fact that the droppings are thin; that is, providing your seeds were of good quality, I would, therefore, recommend you to see that the seeds you use are quite sweet and good. Stop giving inga for the present, and do not give any more until about January next. Feed on a staple diet of Canary seed only, and give separately a small teaspoonful of dry summer rape twice a week, half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and three times a week a small piece of bread dipped in milk, squeezed nearly dry, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give all these extras alternately, so that the bird gets a different item each day. To each ounce of drinking water give as much Epsom salts for three consecutive days as will cover a sixpence, and after that five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week, and on the intervening days fifteen drops of chemical food. Give a few plantain stalks daily, or a small spray of tender chickweed instead; but do not give any other green food until quite well.

An Injured Foot or Leg.

A. M. M.—I hardly think the bird's toe can be dislocated, as in that case you must see the displacement of the joint quite clearly in the absence of any swelling. As the treatment already advised has not succeeded, I think it is more than likely that the injury does not lie in the foot at all, but probably the effect of a fracture in the upper portion of the leg near what would generally be called the hip, but is in reality the knee. A fracture of this part is not infrequently caused in catching a wild bird which dashes against the wire, or in releasing a bird that has got a claw fast in the wires. In all such cases the best thing to do is to keep the bird very quiet, and leave nature to repair the injury. In most cases a cure takes place, and sometimes a very excellent one, by leaving it severely alone, and allowing the bird to sit quietly on its perch until it begins to move about more freely on its own account, by which time the power will be found returning to the claw, which will eventually become quite serviceable again.

Is it Bird Fever?

M. M. I.—It is quite possible you may have bird fever among your birds, and I would strongly advise you to have a post-mortem on the next that dies, in order to be quite satisfied on this point. If you then found that this suspicion was correct, your best plan would be to isolate all healthy birds in clean and disinfected cages at once, and send to our manager for Dr Clarke's handbook on the subject, which explains more fully than is possible here how to deal with this terrible disease. Prevention is the only real remedy. As regards the general treatment of your birds, feed them as advised to "I. S.," but add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the bread and milk advised there. Do not give egg food until you are satisfied there exists no septic infection or any other foods; in fact, save those mentioned, which will be quite a sufficient diet. See the birds are not exposed to any damp, draughts, or chills, and examine cages carefully to see if they are infested with red mite. If they are, those pests must be annihilated. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same amount of chlorate of potash in the drinking water, well shaken together, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. Give a little green food daily, either chickweed, plantain stalks, or watercress.

Treatment for Bird Fever.

M. Hodgson.—The very best course you can adopt is to send 7d. to our manager for Dr. Clarke's treatise on Septic Fever, and study its contents well. Therein you will find all that is worth knowing on the subject as regards its origin, development, and treatment. Cure, there is practically none, and the best means of prevention and disinfection are pointed out in far greater detail there than is possible to give here. Meantime, keep all cages and appliances thoroughly clean and disinfected. Feed plainly on a seed diet, with just a little green food daily, and two or three times a week a very small piece of bread and milk—not more than they will consume in a couple of hours. Do not place any healthy birds quite near one that is ill, nor in a cage in which one has died, until you have seen how to deal with them from the book mentioned. You will need to thoroughly overhaul your room several times before next spring to stand a fair chance of eradicating the infection. 2. The time it takes bird fever to develop varies according to the vitality and resisting powers of the individual, as well as the environment. A bird has been known to exhibit symptoms of the disease on the second day after exposure to infection; on the other hand, it may be a fortnight, or longer, before any symptoms appear.

Treatment of Roller.

G. W.—Seeing you are a novice I cannot give you that insight which would enable you to be certain of the bird's sex; so the best thing you can do is to ask some experienced fancier friend to look at it and tell you its sex. Am a little inclined to think it may by chance be a cock, but, as you have been told, the chances are greatly in favour of birds purchased as yours was being nothing but hens. You will find instructions for sexing birds in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," published at the office of CAGE BIRDS, price 7d., post free. In addition to the staple seed diet you are giving, give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and twice a week a tea-poonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg food, or a small piece of bread dipped in milk. You may give all the last three items alternately for variety, but not altogether. As long as the bird is well and healthy, why give any tonic? Leave well alone, and do not begin to give birds drugs without good reason. Keep cage and perches quite clean, and strew the floor with gritty sand. Give a little green food daily.

Brevities.

Swelling Under Eye (A. Armes).—The substance is probably a small tumour, and if not apparently much inconvenience to the bird I would advise you to leave it alone. Unskilful interference with these things is very apt to make the thing much worse instead of better. If it is a valuable bird, you should show it to a veterinary surgeon, or even a friendly-disposed medical man, either of whom might be able to immediately diagnose and remove the cause, being on the spot. If you do not do this touch the spot with a camel hair pencil dipped in tincture of iodine once, and anoint sparingly two or three times a week with Zam-Buk ointment, or carbolised vaseline.

Feeding a Roller (T. D. R.).—For a staple diet give a mixture of two parts good sweet Canary and one part summer rape seed. In addition, give half a teaspoonful of hemp seed twice a week, and three times a week a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake. Every day give a small spray of green food as long as the weather allows it to be used, and during the winter substitute a little sweet fruit of some kind, or a bit of raw carrot occasionally. Keep a supply of gritty sand in cage, and give the bird a bath daily in warm weather, and twice or three times a week at other times.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

E. H. Punter.—"Next Sunday" is rather late in the season for Goldie-Bullie Hybrids to be hatching out. You are lucky the hen Canary has not gone off into moult. Still, domestic duties seem to keep them back, it is true, and she may rear them all right. If she shows signs of "turning it down," however, when the young are a few days old, remember that you can easily hand-feed them, if you don't mind the trouble and have the time (or someone who will do it for you). For this purpose the egg-food made sloppy moist with new milk would answer excellently. Give the hen, to feed with, canary and summer rape seeds, and lightly cracked hemp seed, with a little shelled sunflower and maw seeds. Offer seeding green foods, such as chickweed and shepherd's purse, freely—but strip off all coarse leaves. If you cannot get this, give young lettuce and watercress leaves—but not freely until the youngsters are three or four days old. She may also relish a little soaked rape. Don't give these things all at the same time, but offer them at various periods through the day—nothing like variety to induce hens to "pack" their babies. Egg-bread, made by well mixing one and a-half to two crushed Osborne biscuits (or equal quantity of stale bread crumbs) with the yolk of a hard boiled (ten minutes) egg, must, of course, also be freely offered; mix in the white, too, when the young are four or five days old, doubling then, the quantity of crushed biscuit.

Greypates.

Query.—The best time to buy Greypates depends on circumstances. If you are going to pick them, October and November onwards is the best, for then they are showing a bit of colour, and you can gain some sort of notion as to the amount of blaze they are likely to carry. If you are having the birds sent you, then almost any time during the season will do. Until about the middle of September, however, there is always danger of getting Greys which are too young to properly eat hard seed and look after themselves; Goldies are apt to breed so late in the year. Another point, it is always best to buy during a spell of fine, dry weather. Birds, and young ones especially, caught during wet periods, are bad to get on dry seed, and die much more frequently. So far as I have seen, the young Linnets, etc., coming to hand this season are vigorous, and strong, and do well. All Greypates are the better for a little wild seed when being got on to the ordinary seeds. Most will eat the various thistle seeds (these are very valuable), ripe grasses (such as knot-grass, rye grass, etc.), cornflower seed, seeding groundsel, sometimes chickweed, and shepherd's purse. Offer in addition, summer rape and charlock seeds, soaked until beginning to burst, and dabbed dry in a cloth; also hemp lightly cracked every morning. Then you must offer niger, maw, teazle, and canary seeds ad. libitum, while some appreciate a little "pin-head" oatmeal. If you deal with many birds at once, it is economical to give the cracked hemp, the niger, and the teazle in separate vessels. I prefer both food and water vessels to be inside the cage, and the latter should be a long, wide (front to back), and not very high one, with a canvas top, if possible. Note reply to "H.M.," for other hints, and advice should any go "soft."

Feeding Fresh-caught Linnets.

H.M.—Newly-caught Linnets are best kept in a long, low cage (if with a canvas top so much the better), with seed inside (water, too, at first). An old bird, or better still, a steady old hen Canary, to show them the "way of things," is very helpful in the cage. Perches about on a level with the food troughs. After they have got over the first "shock" of captivity, they can be caged off singly with safety. Here are a few hints on the feeding; newly-caught Linnets must have some "soft seeds" to feed upon. These are conveniently found in seeding shepherd's purse, plantain, chickweed, charlock, groundsel, knapweed, thistles, and the like; also soaked summer rape and charlock, given when just commencing to germinate (or sprout) must be supplied. They should be offered maw seed, linseed, canary, summer rape, charlock, teazle, and lightly cracked hemp (fresh made every day). After a few days the cracking of the hemp can be discontinued; offer it whole. Should any of the birds go "soft," separate them at once from their companions, and for two days, and afterwards for a time on every second day, let them have water made slightly saline with sulphate of soda—a teaspoonful dissolved in half a pint of water. A good wild seed mixture (such can be cheaply bought) is a good thing for fresh-caught birds to pick over. Respecting Goldfinches, see reply to "Query," this week. I don't care for old hen Goldfinches to put with newly-caught birds. I find they generally "chivy" the strangers about, and monopolise the dainties in the food line, and the food-pots generally; an old hen Canary is best.

Another Goldie-Bullie Hybrid.

Anxious.—Three pounds is not a big price for a young cock Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid, providing he is good in size, and shape—a promising bird. It takes a very good one now-a-days to score in keen competition; there are so many of them about. I like to see a bird shed its plumage quickly—even though it falls away so suddenly as to leave the sides of the beast temporarily bare: for it is a good portent of a moult soon over and easily got through. You certainly ought to have colour-fed the bird if you were intending exhibiting it. I have laid stress upon the necessity of doing so many times during the past few weeks. In our issue for August 8, in reply to "Brum," I told how the colour-feeding might be carried out. I am afraid you are too late now seeing that new body and blaze feathers were coming when you wrote your letter. One needs to commence giving the colour-food before the birds have shed a feather. You could get him on at once, of course, as a kind of forlorn hope. Privet and blackberries are great helps to colour-production, but are more suitable for the Bullfinch than for Hybrids, as they need to be given in large quantities to have any effect; only pepper will give the necessary intensity of colour requisite in exhibition Hybrids. Marigolds and nasturtium flowers are useful colour aids, too. You will find hints on feeding in other replies this week.

Lark's Broken Leg.

A. Tweedale.—It was an unfortunate accident. A broken leg, however, must be treated at once; you cannot do any good after days have elapsed since the injury happened. Now, if you had only had CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL by you (cost but sixpence), you could have turned up the correct treatment at once in the chapter therein dealing with bird diseases. Briefly, the leg should have been held in position a little cotton-wool wrapped round, then a "splint" made of a quill toothpick (split to size) bound over this. Removed after an interval of 14 days, the leg would doubtless have been found quite sound again. Nature is often very kind, however, and I have frequently known cases where broken legs have healed sound and alright without any treatment whatever. I trust this has happened in your own case.

Moulting Goldfinches.

Novice.—A Goldfinch can be got quite fit to show after its first moult, but like all the other Finches is not really at its best until two years old. Some Greys, however, especially very late hatched ones, do not come up fit for exhibition during their first year. You will have to see how your youngsters turn out. I certainly prefer to moult a full-coloured bird; then you know what you are working on. Where you got your idea from that exhibition Goldfinches have to be colour-fed I do not know, for I have always, consistently stated the contrary. Tanning, or depth of brown on the chest (also back) and sheen on a Goldfinch, are not produced by any feeding or other methods. In other words, if the Goldie is not naturally good in tanning and sheen, no treatment of its keeper can make it so. But if a Goldie is naturally rich in tanning and polished in plumage, then certainly the skilful fancier can bring out those points in the moult to a degree of perfection never (or exceptionally rarely) seen in the wild bird. Birds that are pale in chestnut, and dull in coat, are generally buffs, and these are not the birds to select to moult for exhibition purposes, though it is true that we occasionally see a buff get high up in the prize list in keen competition but such has to be a remarkably good specimen in other exhibition points. Colour-feeding avails a Goldfinch nothing at all, as, curiously enough, it spoils the blaze colour; a bird that needs pepper feeding is not worth its salt. Regular use of the bath, or regular gentle spraying, is the one great thing to perfect the sheen on a bird. Correct feeding, of course, is essential plenty of ripe teazle, maw, linseed and canary, with now and again a feed of hemp and niger, and lightly cracked sunflower; also, most important of all, ripe thistle-heads and hard-head in abundance, with seeding groundsel, and any other wild-seeds they show a partiality for. Grubs found in the tops, especially in those which look decayed, blight from sow thistle, tiny mealworms, and hive ants' eggs (I have birds very fond of these), or the dried ants' eggs damped with new milk, are also invaluable items (some birds will eat a little prepared high-grade insectivorous food). This treatment should enable you to stage your Goldies in trim good enough for any competition, providing only that the birds are good enough in themselves. Towards the close of the moult give niger a little more freely. Don't offer much hemp until the bird comes up in colour.

More Hybrids.

Quabour.—1: I hardly understand this question, as for show purposes there is only one "kind of colour-feeding," and that is by means of cayenne pepper—the sweet, or tasteless pepper being generally used. Other colouring agents do not enrich the birds' colour sufficiently. If I have not caught your meaning, please repeat the question more fully. 2: Such a dark Linnet Mule as you describe ought to stand a very fair chance on the show bench, if well colour fed. The colour-feeding would have the effect of disguising the tendency to run a little light in the centre of the breast. 3: The stock seed mixture of all Hybrids should be a fairly plain one, for many of them I find very liable to get too fat and "wheezy." I use the following myself, all round:—Canary four parts, teazle (it is important to get this fresh and well ripened) three parts, summer rape and charlock one part each, by measure. During the moult I add one part of linseed. At other times I give a little linseed, hemp, maw, niger, good wild seed mixture, mixture No. 2 recommended to "A Friend" this week now and again, to get or to keep them in good condition, while the Bullfinch and Greenfinch crosses I supply with occasional feeds of sunflower and safflower seeds. When possible I let them have thistles and hardheads, seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed and other suitable wild plants, with young watercress and lettuce leaves when the latter are unobtainable, and a little dandelion in the spring. Here you have a pretty full menu. 4: A very dark green is by far the most serviceable all-round shade for the insides and wires of show-cages of British Birds and Hybrids. Some kinds, however, look well in either a very light blue or green. You should visit a good show, and use your own judgment.

Linnets and Greenfinches.

H. H. Wood.—One of the best possible seed mixtures for Linnets is: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, summer rape and charlock one part each, linseed half a part, by measure. During the moult add one part of hemp, and towards the finish of the moult increase the proportion of linseed to one part. Also give a little maw seed now and again, and a little niger, too, while wild seed mixture is very much relished, and can be given more freely—especially during the moult. Seeding green-food, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, knotgrass, plantain, etc., is very good for them, and these things, too, require to be given more freely during the moult than at any other period. In fact, it is a free supply of them, and a free use of the bath, which put colour into, and gloss on to, the plumage. These wild seeding plants should be gathered fresh as often as possible, and the more minute, crawling insect life there is about them, the better for the birds. Linnets also like thistle and hardheads. On such a diet they will come on to song at the earliest possible moment after the moult is over. To "force" them, use the two mixtures advised "A Friend" this week. Greenfinches will thrive admirably on the same treatment as Linnets, but should be given sunflower and safflower seeds either in a separate vessel, or one part of each added to the stock mixture. They appreciate the same wild seeds, and are very fond of sunflower heads containing seed (gathered out of the garden).

Treatment of Goldfinches.

A Friend.—My queriists seem Goldfinch and colour-feeding mad this week, I can't tell you how to "make" your Goldfinch eat colour food (egg and pepper). If I had to make you yourself eat say, whale blubber I expect I should have to starve you on to it. And doubtless you will have to do this to your Finch. The danger is that if you try to starve him (judiciously, of course) on to it, he may "go back" and die. A bird it is intended to colour feed should be got on to soft food well before the moult begins. You might try him with sweet pepper mixed with crushed seed. In any case you would have to start with very little at first, and gradually increase the quantity of the colouring agent. Crushed sunflower seed (shell blown away) being both oily and a good food, is a good vehicle; prepare afresh each day. To a teaspoonful you would mix a quarter teaspoonful of pepper, which would represent full strength, and should be eaten up every day. The correct (and only) way to "colour feed" a Goldie is to wait until the body feathers are through, when the blaze will still be in quill; then give the pepper, which changes the blood with colouring matter during the time the bird is "darkening down" (otherwise "coming up") in colour. If given right through the moult, pepper smudges and spoils the beautiful colour contrasts found in the Goldie's plumage, and the fed bird is thus badly handicapped when competing against good non-fed specimens. Some "old hands" stir a portion of colour food (sweet pepper) into the drinking water. This is the seed mixture I am using at present during the moult for my own birds; teazle six parts, canary four parts, linseed two parts, safflower one part, summer rape and charlock a half part each. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily one one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger two parts, hemp and maw one part; (2) thistle three parts, dandelion two parts, sesame, lettuce and gold of pleasure, one part each. All are mixed by measure. I also, of course, give the various wild seeds beloved by the Goldie.

Brevities.

Feeding Linnets (J. Pygall).—You will, in this issue in reply to other queriists, find full information concerning the feeding of Linnets. "Pip" on the tail is usually an imaginary disease, the supposed "pip" being in reality the bird's moult, and quite indispensable to it.

Shepherd's Purse (W.H.).—Yes; the specimen you send is shepherd's purse right enough. It is not in the ripe stage; then it turns golden brown.

Siskin Bullfinch Hybrid (C.E.G.).—I believe the Siskin-Bullfinch cross has been achieved. Have never seen young from it, however, so can offer you no description of the plumage. I sincerely trust you have really produced it, though, of course, the "mixture in an aviary side of the matter leaves room for doubt. You will have no difficulty in deciding the parentage when the youngster has thrown off its nestling plumage. Take care of it.

Burdock, etc (Fancier).—Respecting burdock, note reply to "A.G.S." this week. The head you send are not from any plant that I myself use for birds, so I cannot say what birds it is good for, if any. You would do well to confine yourself to the well-known wild plants, or those, at any rate, you see birds feeding from.

What Weeds? (A.G.S.). The prickly one is bur dock. I have not much faith in it, personally, for I find Finches care next to nothing about its seed, preferring the thistles every time. It is bitter and "medicinal" in taste. I never bother to gather it. The other weed is not one that I have ever used, so can say nothing for or against it.

Goldfinch Going Bald (German Band).—Get a small pot of horse ointment from a chemist, and gently anoint the bald head (lightly) with this daily. Discontinue when you feel new quills pushing through. Give the bird a change of food. Let him have thistle-heads in plenty (or fresh gathered seed, if you can't get out to obtain them), hardheads, seeding groundsel, etc. To the packet seed mentioned, you should add a good sprinkling of hemp and maw seeds.

Linnet Mule Moulting (W. H. Martin).—No doubt it is a vagary for which age is responsible. Your Mule, according to your own account, may be anything over 15 years old, and this is a goodly toll of years. You could certainly help the bird considerably in its moult by getting from a good chemist a bottle of Parrish's Chemical Food, and adding six or seven drops to its egg-bread daily. Commence with two or three drops, and increase the strength gradually. Or you could stir a small teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water (using a glass or pot vessel only) every day. Give as much maw and hemp seeds as he cares to eat.

Moulting Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid (Mark).—1, Colour-feeding is essential to success on the show bench to-day; 2, "Flighting" a young Hybrid is quite unnecessary; 3, a slight crossing of wings is no particular detriment. When the bird "fills out," after moulting, this may be remedied. Hybrids, remember, are always better at two years of age, and onwards.

Siskin, etc., Queer (Anxious).—I should say your Siskin is suffering from the effects of too much hemp seed. Give him only canary and teazle, with a little charlock and summer rape. Let the Mule have the same, and give both birds in their drinking water (two tablespoonfuls) for two days a small teaspoonful of fluid magnesia, fresh daily. Give the Siskin another dose (if it seems necessary) after a day's interval on plain water. A daily fly in a large cage or aviary, or round a room, would benefit them; likewise a daily feed of ripe thistle-heads.

More Clear Mules (Peru).—It is only a fortnight or so ago I was telling a correspondent how very uncommon clear Linnet Mules were. You should look that answer up. Are you quite sure you have not by some means or other fallen into an error, and that this clear Mule is not in reality a Canary? I hope it is as described of course, for your sake.

Robin Canary Mule (P. P.).—Really, this caps all. A Robin-Canary Mule, eh? I quite agree that it is "a novelty." I am afraid, in fact, it is too great a novelty to be true. Such a bird has never yet been bred, and I don't think ever will be. I should like to see it (photographs are no real help). What do you mean by Robin? Do you refer to the Redbreast, or are you calling a Goldfinch (this was once done by a party who claimed to have bred "Robin-Mules") by the name of "Robin"? Perhaps you may care to send further particulars.

Mule Breeding (J. Sellars).—This year Linnets, got nice and steady, should make practically sure Mulers next season. A Goldfinch may be any age from one year upwards. It is not a matter of age, so much as disposition of the bird. If one of the Linnets turns out a hen, she would be a good mate for the odd cock Yorkshire; this way of mating is said to be a good one for light Mules.

Goldfinch Dying (H. L. Howard).—If the bird was eating hard seed, that would be "well on seed" as dealers interpret this term. The fact that the bird died so quickly hardly proves that it was not. You omitted to give one seed which all fresh-caught Goldfinches should have, viz., niger seed. You might get some allowance, if you mentioned the facts to the seller. Goldies are very often ticklish customers to get to live. My advice to you is to try another, when better luck may quite likely be your portion. You want to make certain it is reaching both seed and water.

Linnet Ailing (J. Brown).—You should get a small quantity of dandelion juice (taraxacum) from a chemist, and for three or four days stir a small teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, until the bird's bowels have been freely moved. You might discontinue the hemp, linseed and niger seeds for a time, and give maw-seed daily, and the ripe shepherd's purse, chickweed, etc., too. The Linnet would no doubt benefit by a fly round a good, big cage.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Best Cage for Budgerigars.

Novice.—The best cage for Budgerigars is a garden aviary, but I suppose this is almost begging your query. Well the semi-box type cage is the best, that is, one having the bottom, back, and only half the ends and top wood, the remainder wire. I consider the minimum size should be 2½ by 1½ by 2 feet high, and as much larger as your convenience will permit. These are hardy species and should be kept in some airy situation, yet not in draught. The yellow are not quite as robust as the green, yet sufficiently so to winter out of doors in a roomy garden aviary. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seeds, and a few oats, cuttlefish, greenfood and grit. Either kind is equally easy to keep in condition, and both require exactly the same treatment. Personally I consider the green variety the handsomer of the two; of course the yellows are worth nearly double the green when it comes to a question of the disposal of the young, while the cost of upkeep is the same for both. Which is simply your individual taste. The booklet, "Budgerigars, and Cockateels" published at Cage Birds Office, would help you.

Referring to Budgerigars.

A. H. (1) I cannot tell you if it will be safe to put another pair of Budgerigars into your aviary till I know its dimensions. However, providing it is not less than 4 feet long, and is of suitable depth and height, you can safely do so. Budgerigars are gregarious, and usually breed more freely where several pairs are kept together; in fact, they may be kept together in any numbers, providing they are not overcrowded, and there is a sufficiency of breeding hucks, also that there are no odd birds. It may however, upset the sitting hen to introduce others at present, you had better wait till the young leave the nest. (2) I do not care to hazard an opinion. Egg-binding usually arises from letting birds nest which are in indifferent condition, or from lack of shell-forming material, or from a chill. Prevention is better than cure; during the breeding season supply green food liberally, and see that there are old mortar rubbish, cuttlefish, and crushed egg-shells (from table) continuously in the aviary. I have never had a case of egg-binding except during a bird's long illness, when those in charge omitted to keep up a supply of the above.

Grey Parrot and Aviary Queries.

P. R. E.—I should give ripe fruit regularly, also the chemical food for a couple of months at least; if there should be any signs of constipation a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, or making the drinking water saline with Epsom Salts will give relief. Such a condition of things as you describe often occurs with Parrots during the first moult, and up to being through the second moult in this country; but providing their health keeps good, they usually grow out of it. Give the chemical food almost continuously while the moult continues. Yes, the birds should do well in your garden aviary; do not overcrowd, but put in, say, two pairs yellow and one pair green Budgerigars (obtaining each pair from a different source), and pairs each of Rosellas, Cockatiels and Blood-rumps. You will need at least six hucks for the Budgerigars, and as many logs or nest boxes with concave bottoms for the Parrakeets. These will all thrive on practically the same diet. It is probable that with the exception of the Budgerigars, they will take at least a year to settle down before nesting.

Is Poplar Poisonous?

Constant Reader. Surely your informant is speaking from experience or he would not make such a definite statement; if such is the case, most certainly respect his advice. If you remove the sprouts as they appear it will ultimately kill the tree. Poplar is not a tree I should plant in an aviary, but if it was already there I should not remove it unless I knew it had actually occasioned losses to some other aviarist. I know at least one aviary in which it is growing, and have never heard of any losses attributed to that cause. Good plants for an aviary are:—Black and red currant bushes, climbing roses, honeysuckle, wild clematis (travellers' joy), box, fir, arbor vitæ, and elder; and under same sow canary, meadow grass, millet, and sunflower. Also get a packet of mixed wild seeds (as sold), and mingle these with the rest so as to make a mass of jungly growth. Finish the aviary inside and out with rainproof nest-boxes and husks, and in such an aviary Finches, Buntings, Grosbeaks, Doves and Quails will thrive and flourish, and many of them will delight you with reproducing their kind.

Paying the Price.

It is very evident that this bird has taken some sour food, or got hold of something of a semi-poisonous character. Possibly the distemper was still damp when the birds were put in, and they nibbled at the woodwork, etc. The distemper you name, while perfectly safe when once thoroughly dry, would yet set up such symptoms as you describe if the birds chewed it off the wood in a semi-dry state. Again if you are in the habit of supplying soft food to your other birds, some scraps possibly got scattered about in odd corners, and when picked up by the birds, this would set up internal irritation, and possibly inflammation. Again, the branches you have put in may not have been dead, and these may have been responsible for it. I mostly use pea or bean sticks, and get from my nurseryman the prunings from fruit trees; all these are perfectly safe, but I am doubtful of several of those you name. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (two tablespoonfuls), and also put it on a course of chemical food. For greenfood, at present give only grass in the ear. I should advise you to separate it from your other birds, and let it have a few sips at a little milk sop for about a week, but do not continue this as a regular item of the diet. I should certainly advise a post mortem if the bird does not recover.

Parrot with Cold.

J. W. J.—Give the bird one dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful soaked into a piece of bread biscuit, or sponge cake, or anything similar of an absorbant nature that the bird will eat. Get the following mixture from your chemist—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts. Give one teaspoonful of the mixture in 4 times its bulk of water and each day for a week at least do not give any other drinking water till the above has been consumed. Also spray the bird's nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline. Of course the above will give very little relief if you are not dieting correctly. As regards the parasites the remedy is dusting it with pyrethrum powder (especially under the wings), or spraying it with quassia solution; while the weather is so congenial I prefer the latter. Spray it every other day till they disappear. It might hasten matters if the pyrethrum powder were dusted under the wings on the days between the spraying. Diet: Seed mixture (refer to query column in recent issues), plain biscuit, nuts, ripe fruit, cuttlefish and greenfood—a leaf of fresh lettuce is as good as anything. Do not give table scraps, tea, coffee or milk sops, or any kind of animal food. As soon as the cold yields put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, well colouring the drinking water with same for, say, three or four weeks.

A Mopy Parrot.

Miss H. L. A.—I must confess to being very much afraid of the symptoms you name in connection with a newly-imported bird. At present there is not much you can do, save guarding strictly against draught, keeping the bird warm, yet not in a vitiated atmosphere, and the cage strictly clean, and avoiding unwholesome food such as table scraps, slops, etc. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (two tablespoonfuls), and repeat dose after an interval of three days. In between (and continue for a month at least) well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Your diet as stated is satisfactory, but I should persevere in trying to get the bird on to a seed diet. Keep a tin of the seed mixture as under continually in the cage, and after the bird has eaten up the first supply of boiled maize, let an interval elapse before giving a fresh supply; as it eats more heartily of the seed mixture gradually lessen the quantity of boiled maize. Drop the Chemical Food over the boiled maize—20 or 30 drops will not be too much. Seed mixture: Get 1 pint each of canary seed and oats, and half-a-pint each of wheat, dari, hemp, maize and sunflower seeds, well mix, and keep a supply in cage as above. Its abnormal appetite and mopy condition point to its being out of condition, and it is impossible to say with a newly imported bird what course the indisposition will take. You can only exercise care as above, keep it as active and interested as possible, and let its diet be as varied as possible with ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, etc. If symptoms become more pronounced, repeat query at once.

Brevities.

Newly Imported Grey (Amateur).—Yes, the features indicate that it is quite a young bird. I should not attempt in any way to hasten the moult, but let nature take its course; the temperature of any ordinary living-room will suffice, but it must be kept out of draught, and at the same time not kept in a vitiated atmosphere. Yes, I should think it had a very good chance of living. Keep a continuous supply of seed in cage; it can also have ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, but do not give tea, coffee, etc. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in cage. When moult commences, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, by making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with same.

Cutting Nails of an Amazon (E. W.).—Most certainly the nails of any species which are overgrown should be cut. If the bird is tame it can easily be done with a pair of sharp pincers, but do not cut back too far. It is easy to detect the overgrown portion; there is a vein running down the nail, and if this be cut into it will bleed badly; this should be avoided, and though with a bird having dark nails it cannot be seen yet with a little judgment it should not be difficult to discern how far to cut back. However, you will be quite safe if you take off just sufficient to prevent them catching in the wires of the cage. Any local fancier or vet., would cut them for you, if you do not care to attempt it yourself.

About Budgerigars (H. B.).—(1) If you wish to put them out of doors this year they should be procured at once; otherwise you must delay purchase till the spring. Of course, if you get them from some amateur who keeps and breeds his birds out of doors, they can be purchased and put out of doors at any time. (2) Yes, I should say they would be as described. However, if you have more than one pair, by all means get each pair from a different source; then the young reared will be unrelated, and can be safely left to interbreed. (3) This is a matter for the Editor; it is against rules, and it would not be fair for me to recommend any one advertiser. A careful perusal of our advertisement columns should enable you to pick out the actual breeders. You would find "Budgerigars and Cockatcels" a most helpful booklet; it is published at CAGE BIRDS Office.

Grey Parrot Improving (S. Seward). — Am glad to hear the treatment has been successful; the bird will soon be in a normal condition again. Continue treatment and chemical food; this is an excellent tonic, and will certainly help the bird to recover strength. Give ripe fruit daily, and while genial weather lasts spray it two or three times a week, guarding carefully against draught till it is dry. Keep its food varied as per previous reply, and regulation diet given weekly in this column. If there should be any slight relapse you had better renew full treatment again, and repeat query (with full details) at once. The danger lies in letting the bird drag on, hoping for improvement. Hope the improvement will continue.

Treatment for Grey (Dunfermline).—(1) Procure a fine sprayer similar to what hairdressers use, and spray the bird with it twice a week, sufficiently to well damp the plumage; use chilled water. Keep it carefully out of draught till dry. (2) Two parts each canary seed and oats, and one part each maize, wheat dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep a supply always in cage. Also give ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts, and greenfood, say a leaf of lettuce and other salads, as in season. A piece of clean cuttlefish should hang in the cage, and strict attention be paid to cleanliness. A perusal of other replies in this and recent issues should help you. Don't give table scraps, slops, etc.,

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (F. S. B.).—The death of this bird was caused by bird fever, and it is quite possible that the same disease is responsible for the loss of the many others which you speak of.

Canary (C. Ashman).—Liver disease, malnutrition, anæmia, and general wasting away. It is probably hereditary and incurable.

LEGAL.

Answered by A BARRISTER.

Canary—1. The first post card they wrote does not bind them, and a contract arose only when you wrote to the effect that they could have the house. It would have been better if you had accepted, by return of post, their proposal to take the house. If your two letters were not delivered to them, there is no contract. 2. It looks from their neglect to answer your letters that they did not consider themselves bound by the post card. A good deal depends upon what passed between your wife and the two when they looked over the house. Consult a solicitor.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Canary Query (Dorando).—You do not send your name and address (as per rules); you place a halfpenny stamp on your letter instead of a penny one, thus letting us in for a penny surcharge; and then you want free advice! Really, you reduce us to tears.

A Notice (A. McDowall).—We can only print such notices with the sender's name attached to them.

A Question (J. Raynes).—You are a day late, but we will do our best in the matter.

Judges' Names (J. B. V. Murdoch).—Thanks for your courtesy in repeating the information. We have given the matter attention.

Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food (W. S.).—You can certainly use this food with Java, Zebras, Cut-throats, and similar foreign birds when breeding. You could mix some best quality hard eggs with it, if you pleased.

Lark Singing etc (A. H. Fletcher).—An article on Lark for Contest Singing, by that old hand, Mr. Allaway, appeared in our issue for June 8th, 1907, a copy of which number can be sent you on receipt of sixpence—if a sheet out of print. Your other question I dealt with in our correspondence columns.

Roller Canaries (E. Thompson).—We thank you for your letter, but surely you must see that it is quite impossible for us to "guarantee" the boasts of every advertiser and his statements. We provide a means of protection in the deposit system, and traders who do not take advantage of this are not looking after their own interests. A true Seifert Roller is one that excels in those notes and tone perfected by Seifert in his strain of birds, and would cost as many pounds as the shillings you state such are to be obtained for. Unfortunately, such terms as "Seifert," "Trute," etc., have degenerated now into mere trade terms, and their meaning is lost except to those who go in for and understand, the highest class of contest singing Rollers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WHERE DOES THE COLOUR COME FROM?

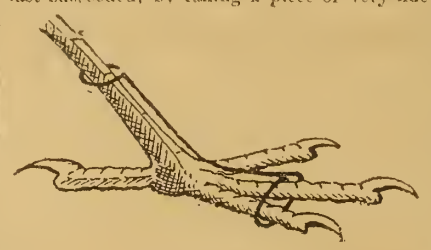
SIR,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable journal to reply to H. W. In answer to his question I may say that what hens I shall have to part with are already promised to fanciers I know personally.

JUST PAST THE NOVICE STAGE.

A PIED LINNET WHICH OPENS AND SHUTS ITS CAGE DOOR.

SIR,—We have all heard of the clever Goldfinch, Siskin, Redpoll, etc., that draws up its own seed and water. I am going to tell you of a clever Pied Linnet which I have. I bought him from a gentleman who told me that the bird had not long been caught and that he believed he was quite a young one, else being a pied bird somebody would have seen him and shot him down as a curiosity before then. He dashed about his cage at first in rather a wild manner. The cage is an all-wire one, about one foot square. I soon discovered that the bird's apparent wildness was only restlessness, and by being very quiet when cleaning out his cage I soon gained his confidence. My weakness in the bird line (of course, I have no others) is, that I always want to see my birds out of their cages and having a good fly. So, although I had not had my pied dickie more than a few days—and a young bird too—I opened his door and watched results. He was in no hurry to come out, but stood in the doorway taking a general survey of the room. His first fly was to the window and bump went his little head. This very much distressed me, so I pulled the curtains over the window as much as possible. I began to wonder (it being a recently-caught bird) if I had done a foolish thing in letting him out. I left the room for a few minutes to get his seed and water, and on returning, lo and behold, he was back again in his cage, and I only had to shut his door. I tried the same thing again each morning, and he was always very eager to get back to his cage. This I think shows plainly enough that cage-life to a bird cannot be very distasteful after all. Now comes this pretty Pied Linnet's real cleverness. I had let him out for his usual fly and on returning found the bird in his cage and the door shut to but not latched. This set me thinking, had the bird shut the door after him? Surely, never. I know there are some clever birds about, but this seemed marvellous for a timid Linnet. Then it dawned on me that I must have put the door to without latching it; and he had, as it were, wedged himself in. It struck me that I would try this the next morning, and I stood some distance off watching. But no; he would not go near the closed door. So for fear of spoiling his usual way of entering I opened the door. But I was determined to take what advantage I could of his cleverness and so tried leaving the door on the latch again, with an extra lot of hemp seed on his food. Then I left the room for a good hour. On returning, there he was, eating away at the hemp seed and the door closed. This I continued for a week, and I crept back into the room one day to watch him, and it was a really pretty sight. He would fly round the front of his cage and push his little beak along the wires until he came to the one that was the end of the door; then, with his leg, he held it open, making himself astride in the opening, and in he hopped. The closing of the door after him was always a bit of a scare for him as he looked round as though he wondered what would happen next when it shut-to. I have now made the door close with less noise. Every day now he lets himself in. He does not now mind anybody's being in the room while he performs so long as he finds they keep their distance. He is in splendid health and moulted out much whiter last year.

F. BRAMMER.



BIRDCATCHING, AND THE PERSECUTION OF BIRD-CATCHERS.

SIR,—An one who is passionately fond of our British birds, I write to congratulate Mr. George Fenn upon the stand he took against a powerful society whose attitude towards bird-catchers, as a class, reveals a tyranny and unreasonableness that ought to be checked. The impertinence and ignorance of the R.S.P.C.A. inspectors are only equalled by their colossal ignorance of bird life. When these officers cannot find a case of law-breaking in regard to the close season, they invariably turn their attention to the "cruelty" which they allege is practised upon the bracebird a well-trained performing bird that wears a soft, kid harness, which is as easy-fitting as a pair of braces, and infinitely more comfortable than a lady's corset. This bird delights to stand on a fluer stick in the open air where, in the case of the Goldfinch, it is treated with such delicacies as fresh thistle-seeds, and the seeds of the knapweed, and where it enjoys itself far and away better than if it were kept in a house, imprisoned in a fine drawing room brass cage. The officer generally swears, on oath, that when he, a stranger in uniform, approached this bird it fluttered and flew about, opened its mouth, and tried to get free. This is a misleading statement, and one calculated to give the impression that the bird spends its time in vainly trying to extricate itself from some cruel instrument of torture. The tamest of old birds will often flutter about when a stranger goes near it, and I have known hand-reared cage birds dash wildly about when their owner approached them wearing his top hat—a strange head-gear. So little do these officers know about bird life that they cannot distinguish between a fresh-caught specimen and an old and trained bird that is not absolutely steady under extraordinary circumstances; and so it follows that, magistrates fine the poor old catcher and order his birds to be liberated—call birds that cannot get their living in the open and consequently die through this crowning act of mercy—and his nets to be forfeited. All this treatment of the bird-catcher and his apparatus is based on crass ignorance. I have known a good many of these men in my time; I mean "the professionals," and not the casuals, and I unhesitatingly say that cruelty is not their game, as it would defeat their aims, which is to preserve their birds' lives and to keep them in the finest condition, as long as possible. Their knowledge of the habits and natural food of wild birds peculiarly qualifies them to treat their birds properly, to feed them sensibly and to prevent them by every cleverly-devised scheme from doing themselves injury "by fluttering and panting to get free." It is the trained catcher that knows how to meat a bird off properly, and how to bring it into song and keep it in vigorous song for a reason-space of time. Compare his treatment of his pets with that meted out to Canaries in grand cages that are hung in draughts in the windows of villas. These poor creatures never get a change of diet from one year's end to another—the same old seed with a lump of sugar, often a dirty cage, and stale water and red-mite abounding, are the conditions under which too many of them live their short and miserable lives. I will say nothing about the dogs that yelp from morning to night, tethered to a small kennel, outside of which stands a bowl of water with a lump of sulphur in it (a brick is quite as soluble in water as ruff sulphur), or about poor old pussy which has to live for a week on a pint of milk in the kitchen when the family is away on holidays. These cruelties are practised by the very people who contribute towards the S.P.C.A.! No doubt the society has done excellent work in regard to horses and cattle, but its officers are absolutely at sea as regards birds. Much nonsense is talked about the birds "loving their freedom." Horses, camels, fish and hosts of other things sent to minister to the needs of man would, if they could speak, probably prefer to be absolutely free. Are not birds sent for our use in the same way? They cheer the sick with their songs, they are the dearest of pets and they can be tamed and treated so kindly and intelligently until, without a doubt, they live far longer in captivity than in the open air, where the ravages of wind and weather, of thirst and of hunger, and also where the attentions they receive from other birds and animals that prey upon them, reduce their numbers far more effectively than it is possible for the hand of man to do. Many birds return to their comfortable homes after they have been set free by their owners. This hardly harmonises with the prevalent idea that all wild birds would gladly obtain their freedom if they were allowed their choice. Magistrates and county councillors are misled by the R.S.P.C.A.'s officers, who pounce upon the bird-catcher as frequently as possible, because against them, owing to the ignorance of the magistrates, the officers can most easily obtain a conviction—yes, and a "conviction" is the officer's breath of life; without it he must appear inefficient. The suggestion that a license should be obtained for catching as for fishing is, in my opinion, a good one, as it would result in clearing the field of a few undesirable amateurs. I write in defence of the professional catcher, than whom there is no keener naturalist, and against whom the charges we hear are quite unfounded. The C.B.U. ought to protect the professional catcher, who might do worse than appeal, through your columns, for subscriptions to get an intelligent lawyer briefed to defend him when he is charged with cruelty, etc. We owe much to the catcher, who supplies us with specimens of our British birds as pets, and also for avicultural purposes, and I, for one, will willingly subscribe my little share to afford him reasonable protection. I congratulate Mr. Fenn upon the check he has given these over-interfering people. The police are lamentably ignorant in regard to birds, and they often exceed their duties in dealing with persons who, in their opinions, are transgressors of the law. "Roughs" indeed! Bird-catchers are not "roughs."

BIRD LOVER.

TO DEAL WITH TOES WHEN OUT OF PLACE.

SIR,—I have had a lot of trouble with a young bird which had one of its front toes bent back. I tried all sorts of ways of tying the two toes together, but the threads or tubing always came off. I have, however, at last succeeded, by taking a piece of very fine copper wire and bending it first round the leg, then bringing the wire on the top of the foot, finally bending it round the centre toe and the bent one. The sketch shows the idea, though for the sake of clearness I have shown the loops very large and loose. The copper wire should first be heated red hot, then plunged into cold water to soften it and take out any "spring." I hope this "tip" may be useful to others.

A CLEAR REDPOLL-CANARY MULE.

SIR,—As I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since the first copy was published, and an exhibitor of birds, I thought it would be interesting to your readers to know that I have had the good luck to breed this season a clear Redpoll-Canary Mule, which is now four weeks old. The father of it is the same bird that sired the variegated Redpoll Mule, and the foul yellow, which I exhibited last show season, winning 4th Manchester, 2nd Warrington, 2nd Widnes, and which was also exhibited at the Palace in February. I had two nests of eggs from this pair of birds. First nest, four eggs, spoiled by the Redpoll; second nest, four eggs, three hatched out. One youngster was dark, one lightly variegated, and one a clear. Two died at ten days old, leaving only the clear one. I hope I shall have the luck to moult it for the coming season. I might say that the mother of the Mule is a lightly cinnamon-marked Norwich hen, which is nearly white in colour. Wishing your paper and readers every success.

I. HAMPSON.

THE SEXING OF YOUNG STARLINGS.

SIR,—I have read up a good many books on birds but have not seen any certain information in the books to enable me to sex those that I have. A few "old birdy men" have told me there is a very easy way, viz., by the eye—the cock's eye being quite dark, but the hen's having a white ring round it. Now, if this is so it seems strange that it is not mentioned in any of the leading books on British birds. I have so far failed to detect any white rings round my Starlings' eyes, so would conclude they were cocks, but owing to the enormous white spots on the breast I fancy they are hens, though they sing all day. But then I am told all young hen Starlings sing all day, so that again is no guide. I should also like to know whether hen Starlings will learn to talk as well as the cocks, or whether it is best to liberate them when one is sure of their sex? I find them most interesting birds so far (they are now 3½ months old and are rapidly "coming into colour") I trust some of your readers will be able to enlighten me.

"SPANGLES."

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—The correspondence re "What constitutes a Clear?" has proved a very interesting one to me, the more so on account of owning a bird which last year did a fair amount of winning in unflighted classes, under such judges as Battye, Wellings, Vardy, Payne, Barnes, Robson, Roe. Time after time this bird was reported on as being a clear still at the same time it possessed the dark underflue. Which way to enter it when the next show season comes round, I am now at a loss to know, with so many differences of opinion. A clear to my idea must be absolutely clear, and the dark underflue, or invisible ticked birds, should be treated as the visible ticks, and shown in the ticked classes. But there are so many different opinions. Why don't the C.B.U., or some other governing body, take the matter up and settle the question once and for all and so do away with the faking or plucking, which is certainly done in some cases rather than run the risk of having birds disqualified? The reason I mention the judges' names (should this letter catch their eye) is because I for one should be very thankful to hear what they have to say on matter, as I consider them some of the leading lights. I hope the matter will be thoroughly thrashed out, and a general understanding come to.

LANCASHIRE LAD.

SIR,—Mr. C. E. Silk is quite right in stating that I agree with his suggestion that birds with "invisible" ticks should compete among the Clears, in the Clear class. But the remainder of his letter I fail to understand—either I must have worded my first letter very unfortunately, or Mr. Silk must have read it hastily. With regard to Mr. Woolhouse's bird, Mr. Silk writes: "Nine judges out of ten would have disqualified his bird in the Clear class if they had seen the tick. Mr. W. evidently had himself, and he entered the bird thinking the judge, after selecting the best for the money, would look for the tick. But you can see by Mr. Weston's letter that he does not intend to look for them." Now this is an entire misconception of the case. The bird in question had no tick for either judge or Mr. Woolhouse to see. It had no mark at all on the surface of its plumage. It had dark underflue only. Surely Mr. Silk does not call dark underflue a "tick." Further, in my first letter I distinctly stated (lines 7 to 13) that I examined this bird to try and discover a surface tick or mark, also (in the last five lines) that if I couldn't see the tick on a bird after close scrutiny, I wouldn't try to dig it out. Yet Mr. Silk says that from my letter it is plain I do not intend to look for them (i.e., ticks). How he reasons this out beats me entirely. I have never said, nor intended to say, any such thing. What does "close scrutiny" mean? My point is simply this: that birds without the slightest mark on the surface of their plumage ought to compete in the Clear class. I will try to deal with the subject at greater length next week.

G. E. WESTON.

SIR,—Mr. Geo. Gardner is quite in error, as the question is not set upon a clear bird above all others, but on an absolutely clear bird against a clear bird with dark underflue. Mr. Gardner says: "Mr. Woollard places such a high estimate upon a clear bird out and out as to warrant him personally in counting dark flue against a bird should there be two birds of equal merit, as a good clear is much harder to get, and much more rare than a bird with dark underflue. But it is here where confusion would come in, and I am sure he will see that his own contention that a judge has no right to make rules to suit himself, would oust him of his right—in the face of a rule which said, 'dark underflue not to be a disqualification'—to make that same underflue count against a bird when pitted against an absolutely clear bird." Now I am sorry I cannot see it as Mr. Gardner does, as he seems to think there is no difference between "disqualification" and "count against." Anyway, I should place the Clear bird first, as it is the most rare of the two (I don't mean "apologies for birds in Clear dress," as Mr. Gardner puts it, as there are lots of apologies about). I may say I have seen schedules read thus: "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification, but to count against the bird according to its extent." Now, I have given my way, which I think would make a difficult job easy. Perhaps Mr. Gardner will kindly let us know through your columns how he would place the birds mentioned (remember, both birds of equal merit). Mr. Gardner says wise men use the green blood now; they know its value (admitted); they risk the dark underflue, but when they get a clear without it, it generally possesses merit. There you are, that's the bird! I don't care what material is used to obtain it (two greens if you like, and this has been done with success; I am speaking from experience, not theory), so long as you get it; but when it is obtained, let it have its due. I think the aim of most breeders of this variety is to obtain a good clear (yellow preferred), but should they happen to obtain a bird of the same merit and marked to perfection, I think perhaps they would like it even better than the clear.

A. WOOLLARD.

SIR,—I was pleased to read the interesting letters re the above in your last issue, and am in accord with Mr. A. Wollard when he says that a bird possessing dark underflue is not a clear. Supposing, for instance, someone had entered such a bird in the clear class, and that during transit to the show, or through some other cause, he lost a few feathers. What was invisible before would now plainly become visible; the bird would then be disqualified at once. What a chance for the unscrupulous exhibitor! During one part of the show season the bird could be shown as a marked bird, and when his outward feathers had grown again in the latter part of the season, Lo and behold! the clear. So I trust judges will not follow the example of friend Weston. I agree with Mr. Silk that a conference of some kind should settle the matter before the coming show season. It would prevent exhibitors losing their entry fees and save much disappointment. Should this controversy bring this about I shall not begrudge my small loss at Clapham, but on the contrary, feel well repaid.

LARK SINGING CONTESTS IN BIRMINGHAM.

SIR,—Can any reader help me with the necessary information as to when and where shows or Larks singing competitions are held in Birmingham? I have a Lark that I should like to try in a few contests for singing.

A. H. FLETCHER.

WHAT OF THE SEASON?

SIR,—For the benefit of fanciers kindly let me have a small space in your valuable paper for the undermentioned question: Is this not an exceptional year for the moulting of old birds, both British and Canaries, without artificial heat (i.e., birds bred or born before 1908)? At present I have four Canaries and two British birds which (with the exception of head and neck) are clean through the moult. This is my third year in the keeping and breeding of Canaries, but I have never had this experience before. I know of others who are in the same boat as myself, and yet others who are finding things just the reverse. Therefore, I should like to have the opinions and experiences of others respecting the above matter.

BERT.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB PATRONAGE.

SIR,—Your correspondent, Mr. Pope, asks who are making him their cat's paw? The question is really superfluous, but I will quote his own words: "It is at their request I am writing this letter." He will probably reply by saying that he has a perfect right to carry out the wishes of his members. That is quite correct, so long as their desires are compatible with his position as secretary. Any secretary who allows himself to be persuaded into an act which is no part of his actual duties is being turned into a cat's paw. Even the exalted position of secretary to the most important society in the West of England does not carry with it the right to interfere with the conduct of the S.Y.C.C. or any other society. It is not for me to discuss the S.Y.C.C. Committee's business in the Fancy Press, but without any breach of confidence I may state that in allotting the club's patronage they only carried out the expressed desires of the members, and for this they are called mean and unfancierlike. For cool, calm, effrontery, this is hard to beat. It would be interesting to learn if those who instructed Mr. Pope to write to the Press acquiesced in the use of those words?

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS.

By C. P. ARTHUR.

(with additional notes by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., and W. Laskey).

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

How to Keep, Feed, Breed, Tame and Teach to Talk.

A handbook which should be on every bird-lover's book shelf. Two full-page illustrations.

CLASHING OF SHOWS IN SCOTLAND.

SIR,—The 31st. October brings once again Arbroath Cage Bird Show and Dundee and District Club Show clashing together. Dundee and District open show is held on November 28. Would it not be possible for Dundee and District to alter the date of their club show, to give Arbroath show a chance to live, seeing it is the "furthest north" show for Scotch Fancy Canaries, and that Saturday, 31st October, is the only open Saturday? It would be for the good of the Fancy in general, and Arbroath is a capital outing for Dundee fanciers, while Arbroath cannot have a successful show without their assistance. I do not see why Dundee and district should not have their show on a Wednesday knowing they have a huge lot of their prizes from shopkeepers, etc., who are on holiday on Wednesday and would have a chance of seeing Dundee birds. I trust the Dundee committee will alter their date and assist Arbroath in their uphill struggle to hold an open show.

J. S., ARBROATH.

THE USE & VALUE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—In last week's issue you published a letter on the above subject from the pen of Mr. G. B. Daniels. I read that letter with mingled feelings: I read it again, and then again, for the third time, when my feelings refused to mingle. So I thought it best to try and put a few lines on paper and so give outward expression to the various thoughts that consumed me after the third perusal of this remarkable and contradictory letter. Meadow saffron (colchicum autumnale) is grown chiefly in Gloucestershire, whilst a fair amount is grown in Hampshire and Oxfordshire. It is sometimes mistaken by the inexperienced observer for the autumn crocus. The saffron has only six stamens and three styles, whilst the crocus has only three stamens and one style. The saffron, or colchicum, is used largely in cases of gout, creating a warmth in the stomach with a glow and outbreak of perspiration all over the body. Not being a medical man, I do not know what particular effect it has on birds causing them to shed their feathers, but, that it has this effect, I am firmly convinced from a long practical experience. As I have possibly been the principal advocate of the use of saffron for the purpose of breaking birds into moult in this (Liverpool) district, it is perhaps only right that I should write in its defence. I may not be able to convince Mr. Daniels, but I know I shall have the support of a good many practical fanciers. Mr. Daniels speaks of fanciers moulting 50 to 100 on twopennyworth of saffron and feeding them for six or seven weeks. This, on the face of it, is ridiculous, and yet Mr. Daniels argues from this basis, that saffron is no good. It is like the man who argued that washing a bird was no good simply because he could not get his bird clean by sitting on it. It is on a par with this to say that saffron is of no use simply on the strength of twopennyworth to 50 to 100 birds! Mr. Daniels has invited medical men to give their opinions on this subject, and I hope we will have some interesting correspondence on the matter. Personally I am quite prepared to stand on my own practical, and of course, intelligent, experience. Mr. Daniels says he is now going to test this theory. Would it be rude to say to Mr. Daniels that he might advantageously have applied the test before writing his letter? If Mr. Daniels will make what I call a proper saffron mixture and test it carefully, I am sure he will write his next letter on this subject in a less sceptical tone. Take the following: 6d meadow saffron, 1oz. tincture of gentian, 1oz. dandelion juices, and 1oz. glycerine, and make up to half a pint with rum Dose, 1 to 12 in soft-food and give one teaspoonful of the combined liquid and soft food to each bird every alternate day until the birds are thoroughly broken up into moult, and then stop it. Don't make the mistake, Mr. Daniels, of feeding the birds on this for six or seven weeks; if you do you are more likely to cremate them than moult them. When the birds are about half way through the moult substitute 1oz. amoniated citrate of iron for the saffron, and give twice weekly until moult is thoroughly finished and the birds fined down. There is a certain variety of Canary not quite unknown to Mr. Daniels, that can not be colour-fed but can have its natural colour very much improved by scientifically feeding it with the saffron and iron mixtures. This particular form of iron is in itself a powerful colouring agent in connection with this particular variety of bird. Saffron, whilst containing a great deal of colouring matter, is of very little value as a colouring agent in ordinary colour-feeding; its effect is too evanescent to be of much use. Although of no particular value as a colouring agent, it yet assists colour by ensuring a quick moult. However, if Mr. Daniels' letter has only called the attention of novices to this aid to moulting it has served a good purpose and justified its existence. S. HADWIN.

Some Observations on the Bunting Family.

By WALTER LOWNE.

Though some species are common, this is an interesting family. The Buntings are favourite birds of mine. Eleven different British Buntings are recorded, but only six are recognised by the National British Bird and Mule Club as being eligible to compete for prizes at shows held under their patronage.

The Beautiful-plumaged Yellow Bunting.

The first and foremost of these is the Yellow Bunting (Emberiza citrinella), which generally holds its own in good competition; that is, if it is an exhibition bird. There are numerous specimens kept by fanciers which will never make show birds, either in respect of size, shape, colour markings, or steadiness, the last-named being of great importance. Buntings in general are of a very restless nature, and require much care and attention before being brought to exhibition pitch of condition.

The plumage of the adult cock is very striking. It has beautiful dark head markings, which contrast admirably with the rich colour of the body. To suit the eye of some exhibitors these birds are colour-fed; and to my mind this does not improve their colour when it is overdone. But in present day competition (which is very keen) one must be in the fashion to win.

I remember that when a boy on my nesting expeditions I was almost always sure of finding a nest on a certain moss-covered bank overhung with honeysuckle and brambles in a country lane. One was sure to see what we called a "Guler" or "Yellow Hammer" (with its familiar note) flitting in front of one. And this told a tale of a nest being in the vicinity, with its beautiful veined eggs. These nests were a joy at first sight to the bird-nester.

These birds collect in numbers amongst Greenfinches and others in winter, and frequent stack-yards for the purpose of feeding on the grain that can be found.

The Corn and Cirl Buntings.

Another member of this family of birds is the Corn Bunting (Emberiza miliaria). It is also called the Great Bunting and the Bunting Lark. If a good specimen is staged on the show bench it finds a strong but by no means superior opponent in the Yellow Bunting. And he deserves all he can get at the shows, as he is very wild; I do not know of a wilder bird kept in captivity. I have kept Corn Buntings for many months, but with bad results, feeling compelled to give them their liberty again.

They are fine bold birds, and are to be met with all over the country, but not in large numbers. They generally perch on the uppermost branch of a thorn fence, pouring forth their unmusical song, which consists of a number of short repetitions of the same note, terminating with a long one lower in tone.

On first rising on the wing it allows its legs to drop as if broken. To the casual observer at times it is quite a puzzle to distinguish the bird. I have heard it remarked at shows that those birds appeared to be a small kind of Thrush. This was no doubt owing to their brown body colour and breast markings; but there is no resemblance whatever in the beak which is often apparently overlooked.

The Cirl Bunting (Emberiza cirlus) is very rare in some counties, but is frequently met with in the south of England. As an exhibition bird, a good steady specimen generally takes a place in the prize-list. The birds are very pretty and have a nice contrast of colour and markings.

They can be bought at a very reasonable price. Some specimens will be found to steady down in a very short space of time. As to their habits in a wild state I can say nothing, they being very rare in the district in which I live.

The Charming Reed Bunting.

The Reed Bunting (Emberiza schoeniclus) is one of the commonest and most numerous of the Bunting family. It is to be found in swampy districts and along the margins of rivers. The species remains with us all the year.

In the spring they are to be seen climbing the reed stems, pouring forth their welcome notes, to the evident pleasure of the ornithologists who visit the haunts of these merry little chaps.

With its black cap and gorget, and its conspicuous white collar, the Reed Bunting on one's approaching near it, only flies to another bed of reeds a few yards further on, and seems to do so without any fear of the intruder. In winter the margins of the black feathers are edged with brown, which gives the bird the appearance of being rusty in colour.

The Lapland Bunting.

(From a sketch by W. Lowne.)

Their nests, built of the herbage and grasses from the banks of rivers, are usually quite low down amongst the reeds and undergrowth, but high enough from the ground to guard against the possibility of the overflow of a high tide. The eggs are generally five in number, but sometimes there are six. They are streaked and veined as those of most of the Buntings' are, but are of a darker shade than the others.

These birds make very favourable additions to the bird room, and are more easily tamed than many of the other Buntings.

At many of the shows classes are provided for "Hen Finch, or Bunting," and one of this species stands a good chance as a show bird in such a class. In fact, I have seen one of these birds (a hen) put in front of superior specimens in a class for any sex of Buntings, the others in the same class being all cocks. Perhaps it appeared something out of the ordinary to the judge, and rather than award it an inferior card, he placed it well in the money, much, no doubt, to the disappointment of the exhibitors showing specimens deserving higher honours.

Two Winter Visitors.

The Snow Bunting (Plectrophanes nivalis) is a winter visitor, making its appearance here at about the middle of October, and leaving us again at the end of March. The Snow Buntings are more numerous in some seasons than in others. On their arrival they assemble in flocks by the sea shore and the adjoining sand hills and open spaces. At times they betake themselves more inland to the marshes.

The adult males with their white wings show conspicuously amongst their darker mates, and are more noticeable when flying. This species makes a good exhibition bird when in its wild plumage, the wings being much purer in whites than is the case with the hen, whose plumage is mottled at the shoulder. In the winter the beak is of a bright yellow, but this becomes dark in the summer, giving the bird quite a dull appearance. The legs are quite black, and if the bird is moulted in a cage the plumage becomes mottled. And, to my mind, a bird which has been so moulted is inferior to those which are fresh caught. Some of these birds are wild [illegible] but there are a few except[illegible] other species) that can be put [illegible] show bench after being caged a [illegible]

The Lapland Bunting (Calcarius lapponicus), another winter visitor, is a native of the most northern parts of Europe. There are several instances of their appearance in this country, which occurs generally at about the time of the arrival of the Snow Bunting. It is the most rare of the Buntings I have mentioned.

Some seasons pass without a single specimen being recorded in my district (Yarmouth), but during the autumn of 1907 several were taken in clap nets. But these were mostly young males. Although some specimens escape the bird-catcher, they are seldom seen here after December.

The adult cock is a handsome fellow when in full spring plumage, with his black gorget and chestnut collar. The specimens vary very much in size. A cock bird I have in my possession measures in length six inches and three-quarters, whereas a hen in the adjoining cage only measures six inches and one-eighth, while some young cock birds I have recently measured measure only six inches and a half.

They seldom attain their full colours till after the shows are over. I remember, however, seeing one at the Crystal Palace show a few years ago which was very forward in its change of dress. It secured first prize, and was quickly claimed at the nominal price at which it was catalogued!

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

BIRDY circles are experiencing a very quiet time at present, members' shows, of which we have had a good many, being relegated to the background for a few weeks, waiting such time as is required for the birds to array themselves in their new clothes, ready for the winter months. Many societies will have their usual "preliminary canter" the week before the first open show, and until then we shall have to be content with seeing the birds in their own rooms, and comparing notes as to who is going to force the pace at the shows.

THE matter of curtailing the number of shows (or, rather, curtailing the length of time to which the Yorkshire Union shows extend) is receiving the attention of a large number of Yorkshire fanciers at the present time, and many suggestions and ideas have been brought forward. Very varied the latter are, running from the possible to the very impossible! One of the latest of the feasible notions is that the Yorkshire Union should run two competitions, with two sets of shows, each set to be composed of, say, ten or twelve shows, those having one competition at their show one year, and the alternative competition the following year. In my humble opinion this appears to be a scheme that is workable, the only fear being that two shows held on same date, if in same district, would hardly be a good thing. The large number of societies in quite close proximity supplies the drawback.

JUST for curiosity, let us take the 27 societies forming the Union. Eighteen of these are all within the circuit covered by the Bradford City tramways (and the heaviest fare is 3d.). Hence the problem: would it be wise and to the benefit of the Fancy to run two shows on the same date at such close quarters? Of course, there are always two or more ways of looking at a question. Many will think, well, if there are two shows on the same date, it will give somebody a chance—there will be so many more prizes to win and so many more classes to show in, and the best birds can only be at one of the shows, thus giving others a look in among the 1st and specials. Others will ask: Will both shows pay? Societies have not a big amount of money to throw away as a rule. But with the large number of fanciers and the great number of birds they have, there are quite sufficient to fill both shows, and more sufficient, if we could get them out. There's the rub! Ideas and suggestions are wanted; the more the merrier. The council of the Y.U. will give them due consideration, and the fittest will survive.

Notes on the Border Fancy Canary.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. S. Hadwin (Liverpool), before the members and friends of the Altrincham C.B.S. on June 30th.

The Border Fancy Canary is now so well known, and its type and general characteristics so clearly defined, that it is hardly necessary to go into its history. Suffice it to say that for more than fifty years, this variety has been established and very largely bred. In its earlier days it was mostly confined to Cumberland and the border districts, but it is now well known throughout England, Scotland, and Wales, and to a lesser extent in Ireland.

Naming the New Arrival.

Starting its career under the name of the 'Common Canary," it was not long before its breeders recognised that a bird possessing such beauty of grace and outline deserved a better name.

Then arose a very heated controversy as to what the bird should be called, the Cumberland fanciers claiming the right to name it themselves, as they were the original breeders; but to this the Border men would not agree, and for a time the bird was known in one part as the "Cumberland Fancy Canary," and in other parts as the "Border Fancy Canary." Finally the differences were settled, and the name "Border Fancy" was agreed to by all the parties concerned.

The Border Fancy was not in its earlier days quite so good in type as it is to-day; at all events it was not so uniform in type. But the formation of a club with its consequent standard of points has brought about a much greater evenness in this respect. What is now known as the Scotch Border Fancy Club to distinguish it from the English one, is probably the largest specialist club in existence to-day, and there is no doubt it has done splendid work in popularising this variety, especially in Scotland; but there has been an idea for some time amongst English breeders of the Border that the Scotch type of bird was a little too strong in build and very often too long, although it retained the general characteristics of type, quality, and jauntiness.

Reducing Stoutness.

The English Border Club was formed very largely for the purpose of combating this tendency to stoutness and length, at the same time recognising the need of organising the Fancy in England. And that it has succeeded, a glance at the classes at the various shows held under its patronage will convince the most sceptical.

During the past year some magnificent classes, and some gems of the very first water have been seen, even the Scotchmen recognising that if they want to win in England and Wales, under English judges, they must show smaller and more dainty specimens than those in favour on the other side of the border. The Border Fancy is, even more than the Norwich a bird full of natural colour of a rich, deep, soft tone. And the bird being one of extra fine quality of feather, this rich softness of colour is shown to the best advantages, there being no doubt that a fine quality specimen will show up colour much better than a hard or coarse-feathered specimen will do.

The Border Fancy Described.

The Border is the smallest of the Canary tribe, its main features being type and quality. Without quality a Border is nothing. It is this neatness of feather, this soft richness of colour, that makes the Border Fancy Canary the most dainty looking variety on the show bench. Even those who think there is nothing in a Border cannot help admiring its sweet daintiness. The head is small in proportion to the body, neatly rounded, with a short, fine quality beak. The neck should be not full but showing a suspicion of mould. The body should be nicely rounded, running clean from shoulders to tip of tail, both on back and breast. Two great faults in a Border are hogbacks and heavy chests. The wings must be short, and carried nicely along the sides, nesting evenly at the tips.

Channel-backed specimens are to be avoided; also cross-wing birds. The Border being so small, the slightest variation in feather or form is very noticable. The legs should be of just sufficient length to give the bird an easy carriage, showing scarcely any thigh, and the shank and feet should be clean and fine in quality. The size of the bird must not exceed 5½ ins. in length; the plumage must be carried close to the body and be free from even a suspicion of breast or thigh frills, giving to the birds a smooth marblelike appearance. The tail should be closely packed and narrow, well filled in at the roots and proportionate to the wings. The colour should be natural, and rich, soft, and level throughout. The bird's position should be semi-erect, say about half way betwixt that of the Yorkshire and that of the Norwich, while the carriage must be gay and jaunty, with a free carriage of head and body, sluggishness being a very bad fault.

Of course general health and condition must be seen to as in other varieties. In judging even marks, type and quality must be the first consideration, evenness of marking to follow. You will see from the foregoing description that type and quality must take first place; size is not needed, and, in fact, the difficulty is to keep the birds small enough.

Breeding for Clear and Marked Birds.

The Border family is, like that of other varieties, divided into classes for show purposes Clears, ticks, variegateds, even marks, Greens, and Cinnamons being the usual names given to the classes. The two Border clubs make it a condition of patronage that classes shall admit all varieties.

In breeding for clear birds, care must be taken that clears are not paired to clears to such an extent that colour is lost. Plenty of clear birds will stand mating together for a year or two, but it is always advisable to have a fair percentage of dark blood in the strain so as to keep up the colour. As size is not required in this variety, type, quality, and colour are the only things to be bred for, so that the birds that are good show specimens are also good stock specimens.

In introducing the dark blood, it is best to do so from the cock side, the cock having a much greater influence on colour than the hen. Of course a percentage of ticked and variegated birds will be bred in that way, but this is not a drawback, seeing that plenty of classes are provided for them, and these marked birds will provide plenty of colour for future use. They will be found very useful for crossing with the clears and also for occasionally putting into the Greens.

How I Commenced in the Foreign Bird Hobby.

By W. E. ALLEN.

Having had handed to me one day a copy of CAGE BIRDS, with instructions to read, learn and inwardly digest the same, I certainly did read it, and also learnt it; but as to the digesting part of it I cannot say so much. I know I thought it a very interesting and instructive paper, so much so that I made up my mind to take it in every week, although at that time I had never kept a bird. But imagine my surprise when I went to shop after shop and got the same answer: "Sold out." So I thought the best thing to do would be to order one to be kept for me every week. Any one, by the bye, who reads these lines would be well advised to do the same, as it saves both time and disappointment.

I Make My Decision.

After taking the journal in for a few weeks, quite a bird fever came over me, and I determined to try my luck at breeding. But what birds could I go in for, knowing nothing about them? I asked.

Mr. Allen's Outdoor Aviary.

So I studied my paper, and as there seemed to be fewer people keeping foreign than British birds, I decided to go in for the former. But being only a working man, and having little to spare for birds (the wife and youngsters coming first, of course), how was I to get them? Scanning my paper over, I saw there were several people advertising for different household goods; so, having one or two things that I had no use for, I thought it a good idea to have a change, little dreaming that I should be successful so soon. Imagine my surprise again, after putting an "ad." in CAGE BIRDS, to get several replies the day after the paper was out.

I selected one that offered me two pairs of Budgerigars, one pair green and the other yellow. I bought a Quaker Oats case and a piece of wire, and made a cage for my new birdie friends.

I Build Myself an Aviary.

About a week elapsed and my birds arrived. I must say I was delighted with them; they well repaid me for the little trouble I had been put to; but somehow I was not satisfied with the cage. I wanted to see them fly about more naturally, as if they were at home. So, having a sheltered corner in the garden where the usual rubbish is thrown, such as old tins, brooms, pots, pails, etc., I thought I could improve the garden by building an aviary; so it will be seen I had got the bird fever bad. The more I went into the hobby the more I wanted to do. I often wished that CAGE BIRDS came out every day.

I studied the replies column of my paper and being handy with a few tools, soon had quite a nice little aviary built. It was situated in a corner so that I was able to utilise two walls, one running the entire length and the other at the end, so that, all I had to do was to make the roof, front and one end.

In measuring up I found I had a space 3ft. wide by 12ft. long, which I divided into three. In the first division against the two walls I raised a floor 18in. from the ground. This, when I had put a matchboard roof on covered with felt, made a nice bedroom free from damp. The next 4ft. of roof I covered with glass, and with some cement and sand made a nice level floor of the division where I put the birds' food, water, etc. By this means it is very easy to keep the aviary and the birds clean, which are very important things. The last division is quite open, having simply a wire roof. The floor of this part I have divided down the centre, one side sand to make a path for walking on, the other mould, with grass and other seeds sown in it, which the birds seem to enjoy very much.

Perches and Plants.

The perches are all old tree branches, with a few thin twigs on which the birds delight to perch and swing. In the partition of the covered part, I have a sliding door, which I keep out all the summer, so that the birds can enjoy a full 12ft. flight.

The uprights are made of 3in. by 2in. wood, and are covered with ½in mesh wire on both sides, as in the hot weather Budgerigars are very fond of sleeping on the wire, so that by fixing it both sides you save your birds from cats. I think I have been visited by nearly all the cats in the neighbourhood; some of them will go away disgusted with the whole arrangement, but others need to have a little help in the shape of a garden syringe.

Along the front of the aviary I have planted some ferns, as well as some creepers, to climb up in front of the uprights, so that it looks quite nice with the birds flying about inside.

Something About Budgerigars.

Now with regard to the inmates, from the two pairs of Budgerigars that I started with I have increased the number of birds, until at present there are thirty. They are all wintered out of doors, and so are strong and healthy. Of course, I have to sell the young ones, so as not to get my stock too crowded; at the same time to sell them helps to buy the food. This food, I may say, is very simple, consisting of Canary, millet, cuttlefish, water and greenstuff. Lettuce and spray millet the birds are also very fond of. It is quite a sight to see perhaps a dozen birds all pulling at one piece of food at the same time.

These birds do not bathe, but roll in the grass. This is where I find an outside flight handy after a shower of rain; it is quite interesting to see the birds running in the wet grass with their wings open, and rolling themselves about like children quite enjoying themselves.

For nests I use cocoanut husks hung close up to the roof of the covered part. They want no material for nest making; clearing the husk out themselves, they soon have it ready for the eggs, which are white and almost round. I have had as many as eight eggs in one nest.

Care must be taken that the young do not fall out of the nest before they can fly. A good preventative is to stretch a piece of canvas across under the husks, so that the birds cannot fall far enough to hurt themselves, and can easily be put back again in the nest.

Always keep a bowl of best oats with their food when there are any young to be fed. At the time of writing I have four birds in the nests with five, three, seven, and eight eggs respectively. It is not well, I find to let them breed in the cold weather.

The Moulting of Foreign Birds.

The inexperienced keeper of foreign cage birds is often puzzled a little at the way many of them naturally moult, and the way in which their seasons vary in comparison with those of our native wild birds and Canaries. The latter, indeed, have been so long bred in these latitudes that their moulting season is practically coincident with that of our own wild birds. With foreign species, however, it is different.

The natural seasons in many cases are strikingly different from ours, so that in the case of our Antipodean birds our moulting season more nearly coincides with their mating season, and when the birds are brought to this country the change to accommodate themselves to the altered circumstances must of necessity be made by the individual rather than, as is sometimes the case, by a gradual change through several generations. It is, therefore, no wonder that we should find some difference in the moulting of these birds.

It is no uncommon thing to find numbers of small foreign birds beginning to moult almost before the summer has commenced. Yet this is not a soft moult, nor an unseasonable one, even if it is known that other specimens of the same species defer their change until the beginning of autumn. The explanation is almost sure to be in the fact that these early moulters are more recently imported birds, and have not, in consequence, had sufficient time to adapt themselves to our season.

Then, again, some specimens moult so gradually and almost imperceptibly that many fanciers are deceived into believing that no moult at all has taken place. This is a fairly common error, especially with novice Parrot keepers, as these birds are much addicted to this very gradual moulting.

There also seems to be a very laudable, yet none-the-less mistaken, desire to help the birds through, which is in actual practice synonymous with administering something in the way of medicine. Now, this is just what the novice bird keeper, no matter what branch of the hobby he favours, should make a point of avoiding. To give birds nostrums of any kind without an urgent need for them is little short of folly.

Policy of Non-interference.

"Let well alone," is an adage which every aviarist should observe to the full. As long as a bird is well and appears to be suffering no inconvenience it is invariably the wisest policy to let Nature take its own course and its own time. This is, of course, assuming the moult to be a normal one, and not the outcome of the birds being subjected to draughts either continually or occasionally or to the birds being badly infested with insects.

Fortunately, one can easily decide this last point, for an infestation with insects is only too obvious when a close examination is made, and in the first case the birds themselves will show quickly enough that something is wrong, even when the cause is not readily noticeable by the owner. Instead of the bird being bright and healthy and in its normal health, it is either consistently dull and lifeless, so to speak, or has intervals of brightness interspersed with periods of depression and sleepiness. It will then be necessary to remove the cause, and it may be further advisable to give a short course of some food-tonic and stimulant to help the birds to throw off the ill effects. A teaspoonful of compound hypophosphites stirred in a small teacupful of water, and either given to the bird to drink instead or water or a small piece of bread or plain biscuit soaked in it, squeezed nearly dry, and given to the birds to eat, is one of the very best remedies in such cases.

In giving these things to foreign birds one has to use discretion, and sometimes a good deal of scheming, to get them taken. With many species of Parrots and Parrakeets it is almost useless giving them in the water, as the birds drink so little that it may be some days before they had consumed any appreciable quantity of the remedy. In these cases it is best to give a little bread or biscuit soaked in the liquor each day for the time being, or to even sprinkle a few drops of the syrup about a small piece of sponge cake, or boiled rice, or, in short, any particular food of this kind which the bird is known to be very partial to.

Then this method would utterly fail with the majority of small seed eaters, which eschew all such luxuries as soft food. In these cases water is partaken of more freely, as a rule, and will form a suitable vehicle, but in the few cases where water is consumed very sparingly a useful method which succeeds tolerably well is to soak a little Canary, millet, and rice in the liquor until thoroughly saturated, then drain it, spread on a tray to dry off the surplus moisture, and give a little of this seed to the birds daily as long as it may be required, regulating the quantity given by the size of the bird. If necessary to do so remove the birds' usual seed for an hour or so, and then give them this prepared seed.

Beyond giving a generous diet of the usual seeds and foods in as much variety as the birds will usually take, and a plentiful supply of green or half ripened seeds and grasses, and ripe fruits, no other especial treatment will be necessary.

A Middle Course.

Another method of putting up the birds for moulting is perhaps the best all-round plan to adopt as it is a means of utilising the best points of both the other systems to the fullest possible extent, at the same time giving the breeder all the control that is necessary. In this plan the birds may be allowed the run of the flight cages until they are beginning to cast feathers.

Needless to say, they will be given the colour food daily, about half the full strength, before this happens. But when they begin to drop feathers, then it will be necessary to cage up all that are to be specially fed for show birds. These should be caged in couples in the usual moulting cages, or failing a supply of such cages, breeding cages may be utilised for the purpose, each couple being placed in one compartment, and one-half of the front of the cage covered with some light material.

Each couple should consist of two hens or two cocks, as it is best to avoid the indiscriminate mixing of the sexes. The principal object in caging the birds in couples is that they will almost, if not quite, invariably take the colour food better. This may appear somewhat strange, but it does not alter the fact, which may be readily demonstrated by anyone. There is a large amount of Shylock's nature in feathered creatures, and when two or more birds are caged together, each one seems fully bent upon getting his or her "pound of flesh." Even a bird which, when caged alone, does not seem at all keen about eating the soft food with colour, will, when caged with another which does eat it, appear to vie with it in getting its due share, and "a bit over."

Their natural greed, selfishness, or call it what one may, will cause any healthy bird to compete with its comrades in the consumption of anything that is offered them. Thus, it will be seen there is a distinct advantage in keeping them caged in couples. Groups of three are less advantageous, but where cages are at a premium may be the best that one can do, and if a little extra foresight and observation are carried on, might be made very serviceable.

*A Rare Garden Visitor.

One day last summer a rare visitor came to our garden. It was a stray Canary. Father taking a cloth tried to catch it, but it was in vain. The cloth was safely thrown over the Canary, but the bird escaped through a hole in the cloth which father had not noticed in his hurry to use something to catch the bird with. When it had gained its freedom the bird flew high up in the air, as if it enjoyed being away from its cage, from which it had evidently escaped.—Sent by J. Smith (age 11), 28, Jubilee Street, Luton, Beds.

*A Rescued Sparrow.

My father is a great lover of birds; in fact, we all are. One day when father was building an aviary in the yard a young Sparrow flew right under his coat. This rather startled father, and he stood up quickly, but not quick enough to prevent a strange cat from also leaping at him and grasping the bird in its teeth. Father, however, was one too many for the cat. He caught it as it was about to spring away, opened its mouth, and took the bird which was almost dead with fright and gave the cat a sound smack, driving it away. Then he took the bird into the house until evening. By that time it had quite recovered. The parent bird must have seen what was going on, as it constantly haunted the back yard wall. The young bird in the meantime seemed to know its parent wanted it, as it tried to get out through the window. Father opened the window, and we all had the satisfaction of seeing it join its parent and fly away.—Sent by Jessie Cornwall (age 13), 38, Princess Street, North Shields.

The Two Jackdaws.

A friend of mine has two Jackdaws, which he got from a nest in an old poplar tree. It was found in a large hole. He took them home, caged them, and soon got to know of their mischievous tricks. They used to run after the cat and catch its tail; and then would often kill other birds. When they saw the fowl-house door open and heard a hen cackling, they would fly and stock the eggs. Their master's name was Jack, and they would go and call Jack, and master Jack would give them a lump of meat each. The cat would then try to take it, and very often a fight would take place. Sometimes they would stop in the house, and when the people were out they would begin to pull the things about. They were like two robbers. One day they got into the shoemaker's shop where the stove was burning. The cobbler on going out did not think of the Jackdaws, and when he came back the room was full of smoke, and the poor Jackdaws were smothered.—Sent by Tom Cook (age 11), Barewood, Pembridge.

Wild Bird Life.

A flock [illegible] noisy crie[illegible] fly to the cor[illegible]n (continued). one big batch. [illegible]ow with can see them plain[illegible]mber we are well hidden [illegible] bushes of the hedges. [illegible] clumsy bird, but is certain[illegible] able to perch and feed upon [illegible] corn. He appears to fly into [illegible] and clutching with the feet ge[illegible] manages to get a foothold, and wi[illegible] many wing flappings retains his posi[illegible]tion. The weight of the birds breaks the stalks, which are then more easily rifled, and the ripe golden grain is beaten and scattered in all directions. After the birds are gone, examine the ground carefully, and it is at once apparent that more is wasted than eaten. Sparrows and Greenbirds may be useful, and no doubt are so during the early summer months, but during harvest, just for a few weeks, they are far too numerous. The grower of the corn has not only his own birds to contend with; all the Sparrows from the surrounding villages and towns flock into the field. They rifle and destroy his crops, and he has not even the satisfaction of knowing that they did good to his land in the early spring and summer months, for then the majority were in the gardens and orchards of the villages. All the winter, spring, and early summer, our own garden has been infested with Sparrows and Greenbirds, but now not one is to be seen. It is almost deserted by birds, save for a perky Whitethroat, a Willow Wren, or a few wandering Titmice, the remainder having gone to the harvest.

Instinct or Intelligence?

One hardly knows where the distinction between intelligence and instinct in birds can be drawn. The Thrush cracking a snail on a hard stone, suggests adaptive intelligence, but a Jackdaw trying in vain to get a long stick into a nesting hole too small to hold it, shows a want of intelligence, although his instinct tells him sticks are required as a foundation for his nest.

A Wrongly-accused Mimic.

Down by the brickfield pools of water have accumulated, where the clay has been dug for brickmaking, and common reeds have rooted in the shallow parts. And here the Sedge-bird may be heard during the long summer's day and far into the night. This alert, prettily-mottled bird is credited with the power of mimicry, but the writer confesses he can hear nothing of it. For although the Blackbirds, Robins, and a host of other songsters warble in the adjacent hedgerows, the Sedge-bird does not appear to have borrowed any of their notes. His is a very penetrating song, and in the silence of the night it may be heard at some distance.

Magpies Past and Present.

Little family parties of Magpies may now be seen in the woods and along the edges of the cornfields. They are very shy and difficult to approach, excepting in the very early morning soon after daybreak. This is no doubt the very best time to study the ways of all wild creatures; they are then least suspicious, and by a little careful stalking, one may get within a reasonable distance of the most wary. Through persistent persecution Magpies have undoubtedly changed considerably in their habits. They are no longer the saucy, prying birds of the homestead, but have become suspicious, and are given to pilfering, shunning the presence of man, who is their most dangerous enemy.

ONLY A DESPERATE MAN

would risk getting his Exhibition Birds into a mess like this.

Yet it has made many a man desperate to read something like this in "Cage Birds": "2nd, Smith, grand bird, would have won if in condition of first"; or, "only needed a wash to have won"; or "just beaten for polish," etc., etc.

So this desperate man determines to "tub" his birds. Quite right, too, but DISASTER will be his portion unless he knows the wrinkles and secrets of the art.

HE SHOULD READ THE ANNUAL FIRST.

In "Cage Birds Annual" is a wonderfully helpful article, fully illustrated from photographs, which in simple, direct manner, will tell you how to Wash and Prepare your Birds for Exhibition. Send your sixpence now, and learn the secrets of the "Old Hands" before the show season is upon you. CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL will tell you in addition a multitude of things worth knowing about Birds and the Cage Bird World.

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

An account of some pretty and hardy species, with information on their caging and feeding.

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

that isn't what it seems finds no place with me. I do not sell you American cotton netting and call it thread, nor jute lines for hemp. Everything I sell is guaranteed to be exactly as described and advertised, and is sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless perfectly satisfactory to you your money is promptly refunded in full without question or comment. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾-inch mesh thread, 3 yards long, 4/-; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all are actually 5½ feet deep and strike 4 feet. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up complete with birch stave poles, birch pegs, and Russian hemp lines, with everything complete ready for immediate setting. Sparrow nets fitted complete on 19 ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; ditto on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 16 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and best on the market, and are guaranteed to catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. Mr. Jeffreys, the well-known Nightingale expert, and winner of CAGE BIRDS' recent essay competition, says: "I find your net traps the best I can get, and I always use them for Softbill catching." Loose netting, exactly same as my clap nets are made from, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep 3d. yard, 9 feet deep 4d. yard, post free. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. Round or square topped call cages, as supplied to hundreds of catchers and dealers; my price 3d. each, 2/6 dozen. Genuine Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made; does not run in sun nor freeze in winter, and will hold a Hawk or Rook on hottest day in summer; ½-lb. 6d., ¾-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Solid hemp pull lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, carriage paid. These lines are specially spun and finished without snarl or back twist, and are strong enough for boat lines. See following few testimonials; thousands more open for inspection any time. "Lower Hooe, near Plymouth, August 16th.—Sir,—Please send ½-lb. birdlime, as I had fine results from using your lime last season.—Yours, H. Burridge." "13, Pump-st., Nottingham, August 18th.—Sir,—Received pull line safe, and am very pleased with it and your way of doing business.—Yours, Mr. Harrison (48 years a Linnet catcher)." "Garth View, Builth Wells, August 10th.—Sir,—Please send ½-lb. birdlime. A friend of mine will want some after he sees this, as we cannot get any good lime anywhere.—Yours, John Hyde." "10, St. George's-passage, Kent-st., Portsea.—Sir,—Please send following loose netting for clap nets. I had some from you two years ago which is just as good now as the day I had it, and I think it marvellous value for the money.—Yours, J. Devine." Mr. Gubley, the well-known catcher of Holbeach, says: "Please send following nets, as your netting is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS, in commenting on netting and lines used in making my nets, says: "They are of the very best quality, and nets made from such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users and stand a great amount of wear and tear." Everything required by catchers kept in stock. Please send stamp for full printed list and sample of netting, and compare sizes, quality, and prices with those of other makers. One Trial solicited. See British Bird column for further advert.

BEST BIRD LIME, TRAP CAGES.

Guaranteed best lime in England; no running in the sun. W. Vick, Hay, writes; Send 1lb. lime, I caught over 1,000 birds, including Thrushes, Larks, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Linnets, etc., with last tin; splendid stuff for all weathers 1/8 lb., 1/-½lb., 7d. ½lb sample tin Trap cages 1/-; double 1/3; sure catch every time.

J. SANDIFORD, BIRD SPECIALIST, PRESTON, LANCS. Established 1879.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

THE LANCASHIRE LINNET KING.

I inform all readers of this paper that I have caught over 600 Linnets since the 1st of August, 1908. To make sure that you get a Lancashire bird, buy direct from the catcher. I have the largest stock of Linnets in Preston; all my own catching. I have been the largest catcher in this town for over 30 years. My birds all warranted cocks, well on seed, and in pink of condition, three for 1/6, six for 2/6, 12 for 4/-; specially picked, 8d., 10d., 1/- each. I hope to give satisfaction to everyone. Write to me and you will find me straightforward. No fancy prices, nor yet hens for cocks.—Peter Brade, Bird Stores, 89, Hammond-st., Preston.

FRED ALLEN "THE HUMAN LINNET."

Big fine young cock Linnets, singing beautifully, 1/-, 1/6 each; cock Linnet, taught specially by myself, with contest cage, and instructions how to feed, only 2/6 lot; real bargains. Anyone purchasing two of the above will receive free of charge the secret of how to make them sing at one another. To show fanciers—I have the largest young cock Linnets ever seen, very tame, will make sure winners, only 1/6 each. If not as represented will honestly return cash. Please give me a trial order and you will never regret it. Note, my birds are on seven full days' approval; cash or deposit. If your birds are off song or ill, send P.O. 6d. for my receipt. If my remedy fails to cure them I guarantee to return cash.—Fred Allen, Bird Specialist and Taxidermist, The Aviaries, 13, Granville-place, Lincoln-rd., Leeds.

HAVE YOU NOTICED

that all birds I send out are sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or on CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, on the distinct understanding that your money is returned in full if birds fail to prove entirely satisfactory. There is no dodging or unmentioned conditions about my method, you return birds, and I promptly and cheerfully return full cash—see? I claim to be the originator of this system in connection with wild birds, and have never traded under any other conditions during the whole 18 years of my business career. Grand lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 6/6, 12 12/-; specially selected larger cocks for show or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call-bird regularly, 3/6; splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in pink of health, every one warranted a cock, and most of them red-breasted, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; no hen Linnets stocked; young cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; splendid lot young cock Skylarks, in song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each, all very steady, and right sort for making champion songsters; hand-reared cock Larks, that have won contests, and can win again, 20/-, 30/-, and 40/- each; hand-reared cock Song Thrush, singing, 2/6; two-year-old hand-reared Thrush, probably loudest songster extant, but now moulting, 5/-, worth 50/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6; cages of every description in stock; dealers send stamp for full list of sizes and prices. See following few letters:—"194, Chorley Old-road, Bolton, August 10th.—Sir, please send three Linnets. I had one from you last season, which proved a beauty for song. Yours, J. Crane." "19, Coningsby-road, Fir Vale, Sheffield, August 15th.—Sir, received Goldfinch safely, and can assure you it gives every satisfaction. I shall not forget where to place my future orders. Thanking you for selection, yours, H. Nelson." "284, Duke-street, Dennistown, August 8th.—Sir, birds to hand to-day, and all seem to be in good condition. Many thanks. Yours, D. Weatherhead." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, Acklington, August 8th.—Sir, I received all birds in fine condition, and am well pleased with them, for they give every satisfaction. I am really surprised at them, for the money believe me you deal fair. Yours, T. Farrington." "2, Lumley-terrace, East Hartlepool, August 5th.—Sir, received Goldfinch, and am quite satisfied. He is a nice bird for the money. Yours, F. Thompson." Hundreds similar letters open for inspection. All birds sold by me are guaranteed exactly as advertised. All are properly netted in Worcestershire by professional catchers employed regularly by me, and all properly on hard seed, and in perfect health and condition before sent out. A perusal of the "Wanted" column of this paper will show that I do not advertise for Goldfinches, etc., from any part of country, and then advertise them for sale as Worcestershire birds. I have more Worcestershire birds through my hands in a season than all other dealers together (denial challenged). If you want genuine cocks for your money, send to me, as I guarantee sex in every instance, and sell cocks as cocks, and hens as hens, not hens for cocks. Established 18 years. See Appliance column for all catchers' appliances.

HARRY ALLEN,

and champion of all champions, and patronised by all the leading exhibitors. Mule breeders and contest singers. I lead, others follow. Just watch me for winners this season as I am in form, and I pay attention to my business. I think I have given all the other so-called Linnet Kings the hardest knock in their lives. Now, gentlemen, I have the following for sale: Some grand house-moulted Linnets, as straight as arrows, 7/6, 10/6, 15/6, with beautiful polished cage, and my book of secrets as presented to each purchaser of the above. These birds are all singing grand; these are taught by the champion Linnet of the world. Young cock Linnets, singing grand, with a polished contest cage and my book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 1/-. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Beautiful Linnets, singing grand, the same as I have supplied most of the largest clubs in England, 1/-, 1/6, 2/- each. These are from the same place as my champions. They are the talk of Leeds for length, colour, and size. I have some beautiful Larks, singing grand, with a beautiful polished cage, with instructions how to feed, 3/6 the lot; fit for any drawing-room. I sold over 50 of these last week. Larks, singing grand, 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, all steady birds. Young cock Canaries, singing grand, 4/-; splendid Goldfinch Mules, 5/6 each; cock Linnet Mules, 5/6 each; my book of secrets, 1/6 each; grand Lark cages, 1/6; contest cage, 1/6; same as the champion Linnet of the world is in; best birdlime in England, 1/- gill, 2/- pint; this is not salve, but the real stuff, and anyone buying this if not satisfied their money returned. Linnet whistles, the best in the world, only 6d. each; right for catchers and contest singers. I have sold hundreds of these. Four packets of my special mixture, 1/-. I thank you one and all for your kind patronage. All my birds are on seven days' approval; cash or deposit. Please send at once for the above to Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

MATTHEWS,
THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED LINNET KING.

Exhibitors, Mule Breeders, Contest Singers.—I don't want audacious or ridiculous prices, nor do I advertise the champion if I am not the champion, but I say I am one of the largest Linnet fanciers and trainers in the world; also I occupy the largest stone buildings in England, specially built for training, selecting, etc. When you come to visit me you don't find an old hay shed or empty bedroom, or an old hen coop. Just go round to all the champion Linnet Kings' aviaries, and then come and see mine. You will never be more surprised in your life, as all of them say the same when once they have seen mine. I have the largest stock in the world, bar none. Contradiction defied. Don't be gulled. The only man that sends out on seven days' approval, year round. Read CAGE BIRDS for proof. Send you cash to the editor; your orders to me. That is all I want. Linnets, Linnets. PARROT PROBLEM solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at on rrisk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week-end contest was held on August 30th, when 21 birds sang: 1, 3, Lauriman; 2, Binner. Judges, Messrs. Jennings, Jackson, and Allan.—W. DEAN, sec.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULE.

Wellingborough (N.B.B. and M.C., L.P.O.S.).—September 30th and October 1st, Central Hall.—Judges, Messrs. W. Vardy, R. J. Howe, and F. Howe. 21 open classes: Nor. 12, Cinn. 1, A.O.V. 1, Limit 2, Mule 1, Brit. 11, and For. 3. Prizes, 10/-, 6/-, 3/-, and specials. Fee, 1/6. Entries close September 21st to W. HOWE, 9, Barclagh-road, Wellingborough.

BATHEASTON.

A small exhibition of cage birds was held on August 13th in connection with the local show at Batheaston. CANARY: 1, Mrs. Fowell; 3, vhc, Lanham. BRIT. (6): 1, 3, Mead; 2, Swift; res, Russell; hc, Crane. FOR.: 1, Bell; 2, Gillen. LOCAL CLASS: BRIT.: 1, Mrs. Pritchard; 2, res, vhc., Mrs. Foiwell.

LLANGOLLEN.

There was one class for cage birds provided at the local agricultural show held at Llangollen on August 14th. It proved an interesting one, and judging from the attention paid to it on this occasion, the Society will do well to extend the section in future.

CANARY (4): 1, Miss Hughes, fine large green crest-bred, excellent shape and feather, in good condition; 2, Roberts, another fine crest-bred, yellow and head-marked, beautiful colour, nice shape; hc, Little, Humphreys, former a nice colour-fed Norwich, full of quality, latter a Buff Yorkshire, good type, stands well.

THE SHOWS.

ACKWORTH.

Three classes for cage birds were provided at the show held in Ackworth House Grounds on August 13th. The exhibits, if few in number, were, considering the lateness of the season, of very creditable quality. Mr C. Pickering, the secretary, had everything in capital order, and looked well after the birds. The awards were placed by Mr. W. H. Silvester.

CAN. YELL.: 1, 2, Taylor. BUFF: 1, 2, Taylor. BRIT.: 1, 2, Beetham.

KENILWORTH.

The 15th annual show was held on August 13th, the venue being the Castle Grounds. It was a decided success, and the cage bird section, while it could not boast large entries, certainly contained some really nice birds. The arrangements had all been admirably carried out by the officials, Messrs. Thornett, the Hon. Sec., W. Herns, the Chairman, and a good committee. Mr. T. Gilbert judged, and appeared to give every satisfaction.

NOR. NAT. COL. YELL. (1): 3, Mrs. Jeacock (1st and 2nd prizes withheld). A.O.V. (5): 1, 3, vhc, Hall; 2 (withheld); hc, Jeacock; c, Lucas. A.O.V. OR MULE (2): 2, Hall (1st withheld); No. 572, we. FOR. (3): (1 withheld); 2, Styles; hc, Webb. CHILDREN'S: 1, E. Smith; 2, Miss Smith; res, Barnet.

RADSTOCK.

Several classes for cage birds were provided at the local show held at Radstock, Somerset, on August 13th. The paucity of the entries was evidence that the moult was still in progress. The birds staged, however, were creditably good, and the exhibition proved a very attractive one. Judging was in the hands of Mr. W. G. Bull, whose awards gave every satisfaction.

YORKS. (8): 1, Pitman; 2, hc, Lane; 3, Pope; vhc, c, Horler. BRIT. (6): 1, Woodland; 3, Palmer; vhc, Millard; hc, Bond Bros.; c, Milson. MEMBERS' CLASSES: YORKS. YELL. EAST BOWLING & DISTRICT B.F.A.

The fifth competition show of the 1908 season was held on August 22nd, and some very good youngsters were staged. The entry was moderate, only 42 birds being entered by about nine exhibitors. Mr. L. Dykes (Bolton Woods) officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction.

KINGSWOOD (Bristol).

This annual show was held on August 26th in very bad weather. Cage birds were small in number, and we confess we expected to find a much better turnout of exhibits; but, considering the lateness of the season, this is not to be wondered at, perhaps. The attendance was well up to the average, and many fanciers put in appearance. Mr. Hill, the hon. sec., and his staff had everything in excellent order, and are to be congratulated on their able and successful management. Mr. W. H. Manley judged.

NOR. (2): 3, vhc, Lewin, 3rd nice fine head and chest, good carriage of wing and tail, nice colour, a yellow; vhc, a buff of lovely shape, feather, and quality, neat tail and well packed flights. YORKS. (2): 3, vhc, Morgan, 3rd yellow, grand type, full of nerve, good carriage of wing and tail, feathered like glass; vhc, nice position, showing plenty of thigh. GOLDFINCH, ETC. (4): 2, Winstone, nice Bullie, good colour and condition; 3, Hendy, good Goldfinch, nice blaze; vhc, Rowe and Hancock. BRIT., LARGE: 2, 3, vhc, Bond Bros., 2nd nice Cornish Chough, good leg colour, nice bill, lovely polish; 3rd, nice Red-backed Shrike. MEMBERS' YORKS. (3): 3, vhc, hc, Morgan.

TROON AND LOANS C.B.A.

The annual show of cage birds was held in the Unionist Hall, Troon, on August 29th. It was a success taking into account the fact that cage birds are now deep in the moult. The event reflected great credit upon the executive, namely: The Hon. President, Mr. Adam Wood (Portland); the President, Mr. Thos. H. Walker (Crosbie Tower), and the Vice-President, Mr. Fullerton (Loans). The association were fortunate in having Mr. John Ferguson as secretary. He is the right man for the position, and it is to be regretted that fanciers did not support him with a much larger entry, more especially the fanciers of Glasgow, where it was the trade's holiday. The weather had put on its very best behaviour, being all that could be desired. The show was well patronised by visitors, and it gave the well-to-do classes, who do not usually look in at a bird show, the opportunity of availing themselves of so doing. The executive, including the committee, spared no efforts to make the show a success, and they are to be congratulated upon the result. The exhibits were nicely arranged around the hall; the floor space was somewhat limited, but the best of humour prevailed among visitors. Mr. J. F. Dewar, the popular judge from Edinburgh, officiated, and the exhibits were placed as near as it was possible in the order of merit. The Scotch Fancies were not numerous, but were of fine quality. The Norwich were of prime quality, and the Border Fancies were strong. There were some nice Goldfinches, Linnets, Mules, and Hybrids, as well as foreign birds.

SCOTCH FANCY, CK. (7): 1, 3, Paton, 1st grand model, erect, fine round prominent shoulders, clean front, nice droop, rare position, admirable action; 3rd, erect grand front and body, fine droop; 2, 6, Pearson, 2nd nice yellow Piebald, erect, fine drive, good type all through; 4, Holden, grand size and style in moult, will be heard of again; 5, Cameron. HEN (5): 1, Holden, ideal hen, fine long body and wing, solid back, good reach and drive; 2, Cameron, erect, fine drive and neck, good body, stylish; 3, Park, very stylish hen, good body and wing; 4, Paton, fine size and action. NORWICH CK. (5): 1, Laidlaw, handsome clear, grand size and substance, lovely feather for time of year; 2, Hendry, fine, stylish bird, nice shape and rare feather; 3, Henderson, another good all-round bird, fine feather, plenty of substance; 4, Adair; 5, Livingstone. HEN (5): 1, Adair, a beauty, rare size and substance, fine quality throughout; 2, Sanderson, grand size and substance, not equal to first in feather; 3, Lindsay, nice and chubby. BORDER FANCY, CK. (5): 1, Murdoch, very neat exhibit, rare, jaunty carriage, sweet shape and condition; 2, Montgomerie, in fine condition, splendid shape and carriage; 3, Gibson, really good style; 4, Dick, nice jaunty carriage; 5, Findlay, 6, Livingstone. HEN (10). 1, Kean, finely moulded, splendid carriage, good feather, very young; 2, Findlay, larger but not equal to first for shape and carriage; 3, Monteith, very neat and trim, fine style and carriage; 4, McDougall, good style and carriage; 5, Withers, 6, 7, Monaghan, good quality. CK. A.O.C. (5): 1, Montgomerie, fine compact, splendid jaunty carriage, a beauty; 2, Findlay, very neat, nice jaunty carriage, good feather; 3, Monaghan, in lovely condition, fine style, splendid carriage; 4, Jamieson, good stamp; 5, Scoular. HEN (3): 1, Findlay, regular beauty, fine size and shape, good quality; 2, Murdoch, rare quality, jaunty carriage, fine feather; 3, Kelly, good style. BRIT., GOLDFINCH (4): 1, McCulloch, very shapely, nicely tunnel breast, good blaze, grand wings; 2, Hendry, good shape, nice breast and blaze; 3, Sanderson, lovely stamp; 4, Cram. SIR GOLDIE (3): 1, Young, nice size and shape, rich bold face fine body colour, well marked breast, good wing bars, and A1 moons; 2, Findlay, similar to 1st, another gem; 3, Hendry, not equal in feather, but good stamp. LINNET (9): 1, Durnie, grand shape, rich nutty brown throughout, well laced; 2, Doolan, another fine Linnet, lovely shape and colour, fine lacings; 3, Young, shapely, good colour and nicely laced; 4, Dunsmuir, nice Linnet, but not in best of condition; 5, Scoular; 6, Forrester; 7, McCulloch. DARK MULE (3): 1, Doolan, fine, large shapely Mule, easy first, will be heard of when through the moult; 2, Hendry, really nice exhibit; 3, Steel, nice stamp. LIGHT OR HYB. (3): 1, 2, Cunningham, 1st in lovely condition, will be hard to beat, 2nd in lovely condition; 3, Reid, nice bird. SISKIN, ETC. (9): 1, Young, lovely Siskin, rich in colour, finely marked; 2, McGavin, Redpoll, real beauty, fine shape, in fine condition; 3, Scoular, another fine Redpoll; 4, McOrmiston, a beauty but not equal to others in feather; 5, Findlay; 6, Henderson. BRIT. SMALL.: 1, Cowan, a beauty, staged to perfection; 2, Cumming, another fine exhibit; 3, Anderson, really fine bird; 4, Rae; 5, Morrison; 6, McQuiston. LARGE: 1, 2, Cowan, pair of beauties, staged to perfection; 3, McQuiston, well known. FOREIGN, SMALL (3): 1, Morrison, a beauty, well staged, much admired; 2, Irvine, very nice specimen; 3, Cowan, fine exhibit. LARGE: 1, Cumming, a beauty worth his position; 2, Tait, another lovely one; 3, Wallace, in good style; 4, Anderson; 5, Livingstone. GIFT CLASS: 1, 2, Cowan; 3, McKean. SELL. (10/-): 1, Paton; 2, McDougall; 3, Hendry; 4, Cram; 5, Sanderson; 6, Cumming.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The second next feather show of Canaries was held on Aug. 27, in the Temperance Hotel, and was a very successful one. The chair was occupied by Mr. W. Landers. There was a capital exhibition, and the awards of Mr. R. F. Rennison, who judged, appeared to give satisfaction. During the season there have been five table shows held in connection with the society, formed scarcely a year ago, and the results have been satisfactory, principally in the care of birds. For British birds and Canaries, H. P. Staig wins the silver medal given by Mr. R. F. Rennison; R. F. Rennison the silver medal given by Mr. Jos. Robinson for British birds; and W. Miller the special prize given by Mr. Wm. Landers. This, the first season of the society has been attended with considerable success, in a great measure due to the exertions of their honorary secretary, Mr. R. F. Rennison, an enthusiast in Fancy development in all its branches, and who has spared no pains or labour in his endeavours to help this young society. He has an able assistant secretary in Mr. W. A. Broadley.

NOR. YELL.: 1, Miller; 2, 3, Staig; vhc, Wake. BUFF: 1, spl for best bird in show, Miller; 2, Staig; 3, Wake; vhc, hc, Tate. BORDER FANCY: 1, Miller; 2, 3, vhc, Landers. MULES: 1, Miller. A.O.V.: 1, Boswick.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

* Caring for Helpless Birds.

One day President Lincoln and a friend were walking together in a field when they found a little bird fluttering in the grass. It had fallen out of its nest in the bushes and could not get back again. The great and gentle-hearted man stopped, stooped down and picked up the little thing, putting it back into its place. It was a noble deed. Even helping one fainting Robin into its nest again ennobles a life.—Sent by Edith Shepherd (age 9) 11, Buckley Brook Street, Rochdale.

* A Quarrelsome Tit.

My father keeps a good number of birds, and a few weeks ago added to them the Great Tit, which he put in the aviary with the other wild birds. But they all seemed to be afraid of him, as he would persist in flying after them. One morning my father went in to feed them, and was surprised to see that one poor little Linnet was not only killed, but had been every bit eaten by the Great Tit. The bird would have had the rest if it was not taken out at once.—Sent by Ruby Chinn (age 10), Sub Post Office, 2, Wesley Street, Camborne, Cornwall.

Sharing the Nest.

A curious incident in bird life was recently watched with much interest at Chittlehampton, a little village about (five miles from South Molton. A Blackbird had built a nest, and in due course an egg was deposited. On the day following that when the first egg was laid by the Blackbird a grey Thrush was seen sitting in the same nest, and she also laid an egg. This procedure went on alternately until ten eggs had been deposited—five by each bird—and the two hen birds took daily turns in sitting on the eggs. Considerable interest was taken in it.—Sent by M. Palfreyman (age 12), Cooks Cross, South Molton, N. Devon.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

From St. Andrew's.

The approach of the event which arouses the highest enthusiasm among local fanciers at St. Andrews, viz., their open show of cage birds is now causing them to get their youngsters into condition to stand the test they are usually put to at that time. I took the opportunity (having some spare time) of looking up some of the Scotch Fancy breeders to see how fortune had favoured them through the season. Mr. Watt I found at home, and he had a pair fine birds to show me, two yellow pied cocks and a buff pied hen which ought to do well after a good moult; also two fine yellows, one of each sex. Mr. Auchterlonie has been more fortunate than in previous years, having now twenty on the sticks, amongst which I noted as very promising a nice, upstanding yellow cock, a yellow pied hen, two buff cocks, and a nest of four yellow pieds, which were but newly on the spar and looking fine. The vice-president had among his stock (which he informs me is larger than it has been for many years), sixteen birds which he has got out of two pairs. These include a yellow and a yellow green cock, which bear the stamp of winners. The president has not done quite so well as formerly. However, he ran out four birds of a nice stamp, one of which might well retain him the honour of cup holder gained last year. Mr. Berwick, I regret to say has been most unfortunate in only securing a single bird out of four pairs of a high standard which he had together. But he accepts the situation like a true fancier, and hopes to do better in future. Taking a survey of the situation here, all that is now left to be desired, is keen competition from the outside world.—ST. ANDREAN.

Penzance and District F.A.

I have made enquiries as to the breeding results in this district, and find that they vary a good deal, the Canary results being rather unsatisfactory. But some of our Mule breeders have had an exceptionally good season. Four of them have 80 Mules (doing well) out of the total of 98 Mules bred. The Norwich breeders have a total of 197 youngsters, Yorkshire breeders 143, and Roller breeders 3. Two of our members have succeeded in getting Goldfinches to breed in cages, one having reared two young ones, and the other one. Also one of our members has succeeded in rearing four Norwich Canaries, 9 Goldfinch, 6 Linnet, and 2 Greenfinch Mules from one cock Canary, 1 cock Goldfinch, 1 cock Linnet, 1 Greenfinch, and 4 hen Canaries. There is no doubt that the Fancy is making rapid strides in this district, and I hope that a good many of the young breeders, as well as young birds, will be heard of again before the show season ends. The following is a list of breeders' results:—T. Whells, 4 Norwich, 15 Goldfinch, and 12 Linnet Mules, and 2 young Goldfinches (reared in cage); W. C. Bodinnar, 4 Norwich, 9 Goldfinch, 6 Linnet, and 2 Greenfinch Mules; J. H. Murley, 1 Norwich, 14 Goldfinch, and 4 Linnet Mules; G. Semmens, 8 Sib-bred, 7 Norwich, 5 Yorkshire, 6 Goldfinch, and 12 Linnet Mules, and 1 young Goldfinch (reared in cage); D. Williams, 4 Norwich, 12 Yorkshire, and 8 Goldfinch Mules; J. H. Bryant, 6 Goldfinch Mules; G. H. Hall (hon. treasurer), 3 Goldfinch Mules; J. Caine, 12 Norwich and 1 Goldfinch Mule; W. H. Batten, 12 Norwich and 26 Yorkshires; W. J. Kelynack (chairman), 3 Rollers; R. Gendall, 27 Yorkshires; R. Fox, 30 Norwich; P. T. Chirgwin (president), 18 Yorkshires; J. P. Milton (vice-president), 4 Norwich; W. H. Bottrill, 12 Yorkshires; W. H. Nicholls, 11 Yorkshires; P. Williams, 12 Norwich; W. Clift, 16 Yorkshires; J. Harvey, 11 Norwich; H. Mail, 8 Norwich; Llewellyn, 30 Norwich; R. Jenkin, 9 Norwich; T. Barnes, 8 Norwich; A. Caddy, 15 Norwich; T. Pearce, 6 Norwich; F. J. Richards, 16 Yorkshires; and S. Datson, 7 Norwich.—J. PEARCE SAMPSON, hon. secretary of the Penzance and District F.A.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

The monthly meeting was held on August 20th, at Holy Trinity Schools. The evening being very stormy affected the attendance, but a fair number of members turned up. The following business was then gone through. The action of the secretary in applying for Yorkshire Canary Club's patronage was approved, and the patronage accepted. It was also agreed to accept the patronage of the Kent County C.B.A., and to put on the necessary classes. The following gentlemen were elected members:—Messrs. Lyons, Gurney, and Frostick. It was decided that a discussion on bird pests be added to the agenda for November 19th. It was also decided to accept the offer of the president to use the board outside room, and that Mr. Jones be asked to do the writing on same. A vote of thanks to Mr. Hartland for arranging the concert at the young stock show, to the artistes who helped at same, and also to Mr. Wood for use of boards, was passed. It was decided to lend the staging to the Greenwich C.B.S. if they required same for their show. Mr. Best being unable to be present to give his lecture, a discussion on red-mite was opened by Mr. Collins, Messrs. Meades, Lyons, Newnham, Pawley, and several others contributing. This brought the evening to a close, the secretary having announced a profit of 17s. on the young stock show.—W. PAWLEY, Hon. Sec.

TWITTERINGS.

Messrs. Ogden Bros., the well-known breeders and exhibitors of Yorkshire Canaries, ask us to notify their change of address from 4 to 15, Ashwood Street, Tong Street, Bradford.

I have had splendid success this breeding season, writes Mr. F. Whiting (Bungay). This is due mainly to taking CAGE BIRDS as my guide. I wish the paper every possible success.

I saw a Sparrow, which was distinctly Cinnamon in shade, in one of the London parks the other day, writes a correspondent. No doubt others have seen it in or near the same place.

I beg to inform you that I am removing to more commodious premises, writes Mr. A. H. Dibb. On and after September 7th my address will be 134, Westgate, Bradford, and my telephone number, 1692.

I have just received from Montreal (Canada), inquiries for several 1908 Norwich and Cinnamon Canaries, writes Mr. J. Bertie (Mapperley, Notts), birds that can win at the Canadian shows.

A Cormorant, it is reported, was caught at Bishops Stortford recently. The bird was in fine plumage and about three-parts grown. It was quite wild, and fiercely attacked its captor, Mr. C. E. Elbourne, with its beak.

OBITUARY.

MR. HAMPTON (Plumstead).

It is with deep regret that I inform you of the death of a promising fancier, Mr. Hampton, of Liffler Road, Plumstead, at the age of 38, from cancer on the liver, writes Mr. W. Pawley, hon. sec. of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. Mr. Hampton, although having kept birds for some years, was only just preparing to enter the exhibition arena. He was a keen fancier, and those who went to Wanstead Park with the Plumstead C.B.S. will remember him as the friend in the corner. He leaves a widow and family, who, I am sure, have the sympathy of all our members. The funeral took place on August 26th.

Kindly note that I have changed my address, writes Mr. E. Thorp, from Oxford Street, Loughborough, to 44, Stanley Road, King Cross, Halifax. I shall be pleased to welcome any fanciers who care to call on me.

I have resigned the joint-secretaryship of the Long Eaton and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. E. Barker (Long Eaton), so that all correspondence in connection with the society should be sent to Mr. J. Turner, 35, Market Street, Draycott, who is now the hon. sec.

Our monthly meeting night, writes Mr. Robt. Blore, hon. sec. of the Jarrow and Hebburn and Dis. C.B.F.S., has been altered from the second Wednesday in the month to the second Tuesday. Mr. J. T. Carrick having resigned the office of secretary, I have taken his place. Communications relating to the society should therefore be sent to me at 28, York Street, Jarrow-on-Tyne.

The success of the season—Ramsden's Pure Pepper. The finest quality and best colour ever seen. No other pepper equals it. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials received this season from delighted users. Sold with a full and complete guarantee under the Food and Drugs Act. The only pepper on the market advertised with such a guarantee. Buy Ramsden's Peppers, and know you have the best.—(ADVT.)

The September meeting of the Wimbledon and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Smith, the hon. sec., has been postponed on account of the holidays. Our members will kindly take note of this.

At the next meeting of the British Roller Canary Club, on September 8th, writes Mr. J. W. Norris, the hon. sec., we are to have a translation from the German by Mr. J. C. Schluter, the subject being "Koller, Glucke, and Flute." Fanciers interested are welcome to attend.

The following judges have been appointed for our annual show, which is to be held on October 31st, writes Mr. J. S. Napier, sec. of the Arbroath Scotch Fancy C.B.S., for Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. Stewart (Glasgow); for Norwich, Mr. W. Hampton (Brechin); for British and Foreign, Mr. J. Lyon (Aberdeen).

The gold medal given by Messrs. Harry Boyle, Ltd., of Blackburn, for the Linnet gaining most points in all singing contests, in connection with the Blackburn and Dis. Linnet Society, writes a local correspondent, has been won by Messrs. W. B. and D. Beatley, of Great Harwood, who also took second position with another bird.

Owing to business changes, writes Mr. Walter Reynolds, hon. sec. of the Highgate, Hampstead, and Dis. C.B.S., I am leaving London and am going to Nottingham. My address will be 11, Birkin Avenue, Hyson Green, Nottingham. All future communications respecting the society should be addressed to the assistant secretary, Mr. Neal, 163, Junction Road, London, N.

The executive of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A. have completed arrangements for the show in Glasgow on September 19th, writes Mr. Thos. Smith, hon. sec. The entry form was issued to each member on August 31st, and is returnable by September 11th. Should any member not have received one, a postcard should be addressed to me at 56, Minard Road, Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

Users of colour feeds note there is no feed just as good as "Royal Red," nor ever will be. I give you absolute proof. Crystal Palace show, 1908, every 1st prize and championship diploma in open Norwich classes, and every 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in open Cinnamon classes were moulted solely on "Sandiford's Royal Red," and had never even seen any other colour feed. When buying, insist on Sandiford's. (ADVT.)

Many thanks for the honour you have bestowed upon me by putting the picture of my unflighted Buff Norwich in your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. C. H. Cooper (West Ham). I can assure you it was a surprise to me. It is a life-like picture of him. I might say he took 1st and two specials, and a drawing of himself for best Norwich in show presented by Mr. H. Norman, which I shall always honour. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, and at the same time thank Mr. Norman for such a splendid likeness of my bird.

The members' show in connection with the Malton, Norton, and Dis. F.S., to be held on September 24th, will be held in the Parish Room, Norton, writes Mr. Geo. M. Horsley, the hon. sec. A very nice cage-bird classification has been arranged, with Mr. J. F. Smith (Scarbro'), as judge. The prize money is on the sliding scale, and a very good show is anticipated. Anyone wishing to become a member can do so by sending the subscription to the secretary. The annual fee is 2s.; and membership is open to all within a 15-mile radius of Malton Post-office.

A Brain "Tick"-ler.

Why are some kinds of ticks like the Police?

We offer no prize for the solution—obviously it is because when wanted they need a deal of finding.

What's Wrong, Wombwell?

Whatever is coming to the Wombwell and Dis. C.B.S.? writes "A Member." Only one member turned up at all the last four meetings. Are fanciers getting out-of-date here? I should like to know, for I think we ought to have a very good society, with the number we have on the books; but it looks as though members are not taking things the right way.

The Open Norwich P.C.

The Open Norwich Plainhead Club have just issued their first Year Book, and a very neat and creditable booklet it is, containing rules, standard of points, names and addresses of members, list of patrons, and full particulars of the various competitions. The prizes are to be competed for at right shows under seven different judges, viz., Newcastle, October 23rd and 24th, judge, W. Vardy; Bradford City, October 31st H. S. Naylor; Rochdale Good Intent, November 7th, H. W. Battyo; Warrington, November 13th and 14th, A. Wellings; Sunderland, November 20th and 21st, Messrs. Roe and Cameron; Harrogate, December 5th, J. C. Barnes; Eccleshill, December 11th and 12th, J. Robson; Halifax, January 22nd and 23rd, W. Vardy. In the open section five splendid prizes are offered, and the novices also have the same number. The amateurs have the CAGE BIRDS' prizes and in addition money prizes will be given for most points gained by fourth and by fifth prize birds at each show, all members competing on an equal footing for the latter prizes. The society now has a total of 81 members, and hopes ere the show season begins to have reached the century. With such an array of specials to be had for the winning, there should be no difficulty in securing the 19 members required to reach that total. The rule book can be obtained from Mr. O. Mitchell, secretary, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford, on payment of 6d., which will be deducted from the subscription, should the individual decide to join the club.

I have taken your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from its start, writes Mr. G. Moore (Denton Green), and must thank you for the feast of birdy information which you give us each week.

Naughty Polly.

A well-dressed woman complained at the Feltham Police Court on August 24th that her next-door neighbour used bad language.

"It is untrue," declared the neighbour, indignantly. "It is my Parrot that swears. She may have heard him."

The magistrate suggested that the bird should be placed in the witness-box, but as he was not in court, the matter was settled by binding the neighbour over.

Hadn't Been Introduced!

It is said there was once an old farm labourer in a remote corner of Suffolk who had never seen such a bird as a Parrot, and was quite unaware of the fact that they could talk. There came a day when he espied an escaped Parrot sitting on his cottage roof. Up a ladder he went after the unknown treasure. But when he had got on a level with the tiles, the Parrot looked him fairly in the eyes and sternly asked: "What the —— do you want?" The startled old chap nearly fell from his perch. Then he touched his cap and stammered out: "Beg pardon, sir; I thought you was a bird."

The Underflue Question.

It would seem as though the discussion in our correspondence columns as to the class in which birds with invisible marks should compete, has already borne fruit, for we note that the officials of Wellingborough show (due September 31st and October 1st next), have given the matter attention, and elected that all birds marked only on the underflue shall compete in the Clear class. Their schedule reads: Class 1, Norwich, Clear or Underflue Ticked Yellow; Class 2, ditto, Buff; Class 3, Ticked, Marked or Variegated, Yellow or Buff. We anticipate many other societies will follow Wellingboro's lead, and make the matter equally clear for exhibitors.

London and Provincial O.S.

Kindly note that two L.P.O.S. medals have been allotted for competition amongst the members at each of the following shows, writes Mr. H. Lambert Brown, hon. sec. of the London and Provincial O.S.:—Wellingborough, September 30th and October 1st; Plymouth, October 20th and 21st; Manchester, October 30th and 31st; Sheffield, November 6th and 7th; Hastings, November 10th and 11th; Nottingham, November 14th and 16th; Worcester, November 19th; Cambridge, November 24th and 25th; Leeds, November 27th and 28th; Norwich, December 2nd and 4th; Welsh National, December 10th and 11th; Scottish National, December 31st and January 1st; and Reigate, January.

Southern Norwich P.C.

Any fancier wishing to join the S.N.P.C. before the show season may do so by applying at once, as we shall be holding our last committee meeting shortly, which will entitle him to show this coming season. Any member not having a receipt for his subscription for 1908 should kindly apply at once, as we shall only pay out prize money to those that hold such receipt dated before this coming committee meeting. Any member wishing to make suggestions as to the working arrangements of the Club may do so now, and they will be brought forward by the secretary. The list is still open for donations to the £10 10s. silver challenge cup, which we hope will be completed by the annual meeting. Donations thankfully received by any of the officers of the Club. The date and place of contest between the N.P. Club and S.N.P. Club will be published shortly in the Press; also byelaws governing the contest.—F. S. MATTHES, hon. sec.

Instinct or Education?

Mr. Douglas Dewar in the "Albany Review" challenges the conclusion of Mr. W. J. Long and other American naturalists, that but for its parents a young bird would never learn to find its food, or fly, or sing, or build a nest. He adduces what he considers conclusive facts to the contrary. Taken away from father and mother at birth, a young bird knows how to find its food without any teaching. Two young American Ospreys were taken from their parents' nest at an early age, and given an artificial nest. They were then quite unable to fly. Not until they were five or six weeks old did the young Ospreys try to fly, and at the first attempt one of them performed an unbroken flight of several miles. They also learned to fish without any teaching. Similarly, the eggs of a Redbreast were placed in the nest of a Chaffinch, and the eggs of the Chaffinch in that of the Redbreast. But each bird developed its proper music. So with nest-building. The nest is completed long before the young birds come out of the egg. "If young birds are taught nest-building, who teaches them?" The writer thus sums up:—"The parental teaching forms a far less important factor in the education of birds than many naturalists have been led by careless observation to believe. Birds may be said to be born educated in the sense that poets are born, not made. In each case education puts on the finishing touches to the handiwork of nature."

Health in every sip, refreshment in every drop.

The Flight of the Swallow.

It is on record that a Swallow was captured near its nest at Antwerp, and sent away to a town situated 148 miles away. It was liberated at the same time as some Homing Pigeons, but reached Antwerp some time before they did, doing the entire distance in the extraordinary time of one hour and eight minutes. At this speed a journey to Africa would simply be an extended flighty ramble.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

The Yorkshire Canary Club Year Book comes to hand, and, as usual, is produced in excellent style, while it is as helpful as ever, containing full particulars of the intents and purposes of the club, officers, rules, byelaws, print of the club's standard of the Yorkshire Canary, with scale of points, balance sheet for last season, list of members' names and addresses, and a whole host of other valuable information. The total value of the prizes offered by this club is £60 10s., truly a marvellous return for the entrance fee asked, viz., 2s. 6d. These prizes are divided into several competitions, first and foremost being the Challenge Cup Competition to be competed for at ten shows. Next we have the Money Specials, Ramsden's Cup, and Novice Cup Competitions, which are also to run through ten shows, and different shows all of them to the Challenge Cup shows. Then we have the Sandiford Cup and Davy's oil painting for shows and members outside Yorkshire; also CAGE BIRDS' prizes for the amateurs of the club, these to be competed for at any show held under the patronage of the Y.C.C. If such a prize list does not make the Y.C.C. shows successful and competition keen, it is difficult to see what will. Never in the history of the Fancy, so the justly-proud Yorkshiremen say, has such a host of specials, in both money and kind, been offered to exhibitors.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters at the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claudo St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

A Warning to Others.

Sam Brough.—Your experience might well serve as a warning to other novices who may be tempted to apply paraffin to the skin of a bird. You say the bird you prize so much began to lose feathers on its head and was becoming bald when you put on some paraffin hoping it would cure it, but that, to your evident dismay, it destroyed the skin and left an open sore, or, to use your own words, it "brought the skin away." This is exactly what you might have expected. In any case the application would have been useless for its intended purpose. It cannot be too well known that paraffin has a terribly destructive effect upon the skin of birds and certain animals, notwithstanding its comparatively innocuous effect upon humans. Anoint the sore place occasionally with cold cream until well, and wait and see if the feathers are reproduced during the moult, which is probably taking place now, and was doubtless the cause of the loss of feathers in the first instance. If they are not reproduced, write again, and I will then advise a suitable treatment. Meantime, keep the bird warm and free from draughts, and feed as frequently directed here.

A Yorkshire and a Norwich.

"Novice." F.M.—It is impossible to say what is wrong with the Yorkshire cock without a personal examination. The lump may be nothing more serious than an excessive accumulation of fat, which would also cause the laboured breathing and wheeziness, or it may be a more serious and incurable complaint. If it is a valuable bird you cannot do better in the circumstances than ask a veterinary surgeon to look at it and tell you what the trouble is. 2. The reason the Norwich cock (that is, assuming it is a genuine cock) refused to "have anything to say" to the hens to which it was mated is that it was not in breeding condition. Its lack of song of late also serves to show it was out of condition, but the reason for this I cannot tell without knowing how it was fed and treated. Feed it the same as advised to "Cora," and give it ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in its water every second day for a week, and during the following week give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every alternate day.

Some Roller Queries.

"Anxious to Know."—1. The bare places on your young Rollers that are moulting may be due to three causes: (a) Rapidity of moulting, in which case you will find the feathers lly off in large quantities at frequent intervals when the birds are preening and shaking themselves; and all you need do is to see that they are well protected from colds and chills, and give them a little egg-food three times a week if you are not colour-feeding. (b) Red-mites; but in this case you should find sufficient evidence of the presence of mites in other directions, viz., by the restlessness of the birds after going to roost at night, a white powdery deposit about the joints and corners of the cage, and in a more material way by scraping out any joints or cracks on to a piece of white paper; if any mites are found they must be thoroughly eradicated. (c) Having one or more feather-pluckers if you are keeping them all together. The only means of preventing feather-plucking is to remove the culprit if there is only one, and cage it by itself. If all are more or less feather-pluckers then you should cage them off separately until fine again. 2. As your old cock bird is moulting, and consequently probably out of song, he would not be of much use for teaching the young birds. The youngsters should hear a good cock in full song during the time they are moulting. It this is not available then an organ or good flute is useful—the former preferably. 3. The best way to get the young to sing by gaslight is to keep them covered during the afternoon, and after the gas is lit place them in a well-lighted place, uncover them, and feed them, and let them hear a good singing bird, or play to them.

Laboured Breathing.

"Cora."—Your suspicions that the bird is probably a hen are doubtless correct, and I fear she will not be of much use to you for anything. Feed and treat as follows, and if she quite recovers in the course of a few weeks you may try mating her next spring, but do not mate her up early nor overwork her at all next year—say, mate her the first week in April, if ready, and allow her only two nests. Feed on a staple diet of Canary seed only; three times a week give either a small piece of bread and milk, or a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, on which drop three drops of cod liver oil emulsion each time until the bird is well; besides this give a teaspoonful of dry rape twice a week, and half a teaspoonful of hemp. Give these alternately and on different days, so that a different item is given each day. Give a spray of green-food daily as long as it is safe to use, then substitute a little sweet juicy fruit. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and twenty drops of whiskey daily for the first three days; afterwards give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus by the same means well shaken together daily for a week, and every second day afterwards for another week or fortnight, as may appear necessary. Stop it a few days after the bird appears quite well. Of course, you must keep the bird comfortably warm, and perfectly free from chills and draughts.

About an Aviary.

"Novice."—1. Your plan of making the windows of the shed you wish to convert into an outdoor aviary work on hinges so that they may hang down loose during warm weather is a very good one, but you must also provide supplementary covers for the window spaces to prevent the escape of birds. These covers may be made of half-inch mesh wire-netting nailed on to a light wooden frame; then they can be easily fitted to the window space in such a way as to be easily removed at any time if required. Permanent wire covers may be made by simply nailing the netting on to the side of the shed on the inside. A similar wire cover must be made on a light frame to go over the doorway to prevent birds escaping when you go in or out. If you could add another ventilator over the door it would be an improvement. 2. Provided you took care to procure stock which had not been pampered by artificial heat, there is no reason whatever why you should not succeed very well in breeding Canaries in this place without any heat. 3. The reply to No. 2 applies with greater force here. British birds most certainly do not require any heat in such a place, and should do far better without it than with it. 4. The number of birds which the aviary would accommodate depends upon whether you keep them flying loose or in cages. Flying loose there is accommodation for about forty birds the size of a Canary. If kept in cages you may double this number if you pay strict attention to cleanliness and see there is plenty of ventilation without draught.

Owing to unavoidable circumstances, Mr. St. John has been unable to answer all his queries this week, but will give them attention in our next issue.—EDITOR.

A Bad Case of Asthma.

"Paradox."—Am afraid your hen has reached a quite incurable stage of asthma, and only alleviation may be looked for. Try following treatment and persevere with it for some time, as it will take some time to effect a cure, even if such is possible. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and give in addition half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and three times a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry and two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed with it. Give these alternately on different days. A spray of green-food must be given daily, and a supply of fresh gritty sand kept on the floor. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a month, or longer if necessary, and twice a week on the days when you should give plain water, give a linseed decoction instead, made up by placing half a small teaspoonful of linseed in a teacupful of boiling water. Allow it to stand until cold, strain, add two drops of essence of aniseed sufficient to fill the bird's drinker, and give this instead of water. Keep it comfortably warm, in a room with a fire, and see it is not exposed to chills or draughts, and also see it is free from red-mites.

An Injured Foot.

J. B. C.—Undoubtedly the very best thing for you to do is to let Nature take its own course. I think it very likely the claws below the injury will wither and drop off before long, but any interference on your part will probably make matters worse. The most I would advise doing is to keep perches at such a height from ground and nearness to each other that the bird has to make the least effort consistent with ease of motion to move about, and very gently anoint foot occasionally, say, twice a week, with carbonised vaseline.

A Yellowhammer.

Yellow Yorling.—It was adult-caught Yellowhammers I was referring to when I said the species would only eat canary seed when in captivity. A hand-reared example, of course, is different, and you must not conclude that when your bird "grows up" he will develop a taste for canary to the exclusion of everything else. You are feeding him admirably now; but you could supplement the caterpillars with mealworms cut into two and dipped in new milk. He will come on to the canary seed quite naturally when he begins to pick up for himself; you can lightly crack it when first you offer it, also mix with it a little coarse oatmeal, or crushed groats. You would be well advised to always keep the bird used to eating a little of some good insectivorous food; live food of suitable character I presume you know is essential to its continued well-being. I have never found the Yellow Bunting care much for green-food; the Corn and Reed Buntings like a feed of it now and again. If your bird has a decided yellow tinge, you can be practically sure it is a cock; you will be able to tell for certain as soon as it moults.

Goldfinch Ailing.

Novice.—Seeing that the bird had arrived at the "head under wing" stage before you wrote, I am afraid there will be little hope for him by the time you read this. Instead of the Parrish's, you ought to have given two or three doses of saline medicine (say a small teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water), and a change of diet. Plenty of thistle heads, or fresh-gathered thistle seed, with niger, maw, and lightly cracked hemp, might have induced him to feed. The Parrish's should have been given after the magnesia had acted well upon the bird's bowels. You can only try this treatment now in the hope that it will prove efficacious. "Saffron-headed" is merely a dealer's phrase denoting a Goldfinch which has moulted out very pale in blaze-colour, due, usually, to the conditions under which the bird has been kept, and the food it has received.

Half-a-dozen.

A. G. (Kent).—1: I think you will find full information concerning the seeds for Linnets and Goldfinches when moulting, in my columns last week. Kindly refer back. 2: Perches should never be all of the same size and pattern. They should vary both in size and shape, so that a variety of grips is offered the feet of the birds. I have my own both round, oval and square (these latter with just the corners rounded off), and change them about in my cages, say, weekly. In my flights and aviaries I have the perches of all sorts of shapes and thicknesses—compatible, of course, with the birds therein. 3: Putting a cage in boiling water (soda or no soda) is a certain means of ridding it of red-mites; so is stoving it for 10 or 15 minutes in a fairly warm oven. Linnets which will not bathe can always be sprayed a little. The water, too, can be made bitter by the addition of a few spots of quassia extract, which tends to keep down this pest. 4: Linnets and Goldfinches require no heat whatever in winter, providing the room they are kept in is damp and draught proof. 5. I don't know about "mopey," but it is quite usual for a bird when dropping into moult to be much quieter than at other times, and to rest on the perch more. 6: A bird can hardly be said to "change his singing" after moulting. It is quite true, though, that birds are likely to pick up notes from the songs of other birds should they hear them regularly when they themselves are coming into song again.

Concerning Hybrid Breeding.

R. N. Smith.—If you intend to try with non-house-moulted stock, then this month, with October and November, are the best during which to purchase the birds. If you intend using house-moulted birds, then you could extend the period to the end of January, if you choose to do so. I really can't advise about the price, for everything depends on the class of bird you purchase, and on the seller also, for some fanciers value their birds higher than others. A fresh-caught cock Linnet might be bought for sixpence, for instance, whereas an ordinary house-moulted specimen would cost from perhaps five to ten shillings; if a proved mule, and not a worn-out old bird, you would hardly be likely to be able to buy it under the latter figure. The cage for a Hybrid couple must be large and extra deep from front to back. An excellent size is 3 feet long, by 20 to 24 inches high, by 16 to 20 inches deep (front to back). It is always best to have Canary hens (they need only be common young German hens) to act as foster-mothers for any young Hybrids you are successful in hatching out. There is no "best time" to commence; one's birds have a nasty habit of choosing their own time. The couples can be run together all the winter, of course, but no one can forecast when they are likely to commence nesting operations—anyway, doubtless not earlier than well into April. The feeding of both Linnets and Greenfinches was dealt with at length in my column last week; no doubt you would see the answers.

A Mixture.

Wild.—1: You seem to be unaware of the fact that the young of most birds resemble the hen in plumage, consequently one has to wait until after they have moulted before sexual differences become in evidence. This obtains with both Redpolls and Bullfinches; the only way to stand a chance of getting cocks is to select the youngsters which look the richest and brightest in tone of colour. Those who have had a deal of experience with the sexes can generally spot the young cock from the young hen Bullies. If a feather or two be extracted from the breast, in the case of a male they will soon grow red in colour. 2: Both Goldies and Bullies get their full colour as soon as they cast their nestling plumage, that is, during the autumn of the year in which they are born. Tail and flight feathers, of course, are not shed until the second moult, and then the birds improve in colour generally. 3: The Redpoll loses the red of both breast and head when moulted in captivity (have heard of only one exception), but the head often carries a golden tinge. 4: Have never had (nor heard of) a Lark which "pulls out its tail feathers." Do you mean it breaks them off short? probably owing to the cage being too small, or the bird very wild. 5: The Blackbird must surely be out of health. Possibly you are not feeding him well enough (you don't say anything about this). Anyway, I gave an answer on how to do so, either last week or the week before, to which you can refer.

About Goldfinches.

Fitter.—The Greypate comes into full colour as soon as it sheds its nestling plumage, i.e., during the autumn of the year in which it was born. See reply to "Wild." The best thing to ensure a good quick moult is to get one's birds to commence to moult early. A late start generally means a drag at the finish. Many Greypates, however, and the late hatched ones in particular, do not commence to come into colour until quite late in the year. Greypates will "record" freely, like most other young Finches, but they do not sing a full song until late in the winter, when the weather begins to show signs of the coming springtime. After his second moult a Goldfinch ought to be fit for any competition. At the same time, he will improve at the third moult, and no doubt for a moult or two afterwards. Many big winners have been six years old and upwards.

Treatment of Blackbird.

Blackbird.—This is a matter I have frequently dealt with since August 1st, for instance. 1: Keep him out of draughts, and indoors when weather is cold, or very damp, and he should moult all right; 2: First, this stock mixture any good seller of bird foods will mix for you (store it in tins): Game (or Pheasant or Partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good nuts' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the game (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed bunny cakes (or puppy meal) make an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with a little water, or grated raw carrot, or cold boiled potato, or finely chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard boiled egg, finely minced up, twice or so a week. Give three or four mealworms daily, and any other insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. Blackbeetles and snails (especially snails dropped into boiling water for a few minutes, then chopped up), are much relished. 3: My birds always have the opportunity of picking up grit, and they frequently avail themselves of it. 4: Many coverings are good. Coarse cut pine sawdust, peat-moss litter (from corn chandler), or sand will all do; or a mixture of sawdust and sand. 5: There are certain weather conditions under which I should not like any bird of mine to stay out of doors in a cage. Given a stoutly-built, roomy home and a snug spot to hang in (not exposed to fierce sun-rays, or rain storms), then a Blackie does well out of doors most of the year round. Cats are a danger.

Moulting Bullfinch for Show.

Mr. Finch—It is a matter of opinion whether show Bullfinches should be colour-fed or not. Given one with the right sort of breast colour (rich, fiery-red, on a clean ground) I am quite sure colour-feeding is unnecessary, providing it gets suitable natural colouring agents. I would undertake to moult such a specimen as good as any colour-fed one. Bullies should have a free daily supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries and privet berries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder mountain ash, dew and other berries, black currants, and cherries, etc., to say nothing of the wild seeding plants, I am so frequently recommending, such as ripe plantain, dock, thistles, heather tops (where possible), shepherd's purse, chickweed, etc. That Bullie is a great bud and fruit-eating bird one look at his bill should convince anyone; try him with any fruit you think suitable. Let your bird bathe freely. A most important point in the production of gloss on the plumage is a free use of the bath. A bird which is not a free bather never comes out so polished as one that revels in cold water—the difference is plainly to be seen. If your Bullie is lax in this respect, he must be lightly sprayed every day with a fine sprayer (such as barbers use for bay rhum, etc.), which may be bought from most fanciers' specialists advertising in our columns. Never drench the bird. The stock seed mixture should be canary three parts, teazle two parts linseed, summer rape and charlock one part each, by measure. Sunflower and safflower seeds should be offered fairly liberally, cracked, if necessary. Don't give hemp. For titbits see reply to "A Friend" given last week.

Brevities.

Bullfinch's "Scurfy" Head (Brown Bird).—Get a pot of boric (boracic) ointment from a good chemist and gently anoint the "scurfy-looking" place with this every day. It is generally best only to rub the way the plumage lies, and you should discontinue at once when you perceive new quills growing. Let the bird have plenty of seeding greenfood (chickweed, shepherd's purse, etc.), and a little ripe fruit daily. Black and privet berries are very good for Bullies. No hemp and niger until well.

Wild Seeds (no nom-de-plume).—I go out and gather my own grass, thistle seeds, etc., and cornflower seed is easily obtained out of one's own garden. I know of no shop which sells them; and I don't suppose there is such a one in Manchester. There are many advertisers of "wild seeds" using our columns (see under "Food.").

Exhibition Softbills (Bondman).—You must not run away with the idea that any small Softbill can be kept up to show form on "little attention." They require unremitting attention, all of them, and the best of food. Of the list you send, the Yellow Wagtail, Whinchat and Wheatear would be most likely to win prizes. As regards difficulty of keeping, I should place them Whinchat, Wagtail, and Wheatear. The chief trouble with the Wagtail is a tendency to damage its plumage, especially the tail feathers. It needs to be very steady.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

A Long Moult.

E. V.—I do not think there is much more the matter than that the bird has got a little out of condition, and I gather that the bird is an old one, both the conditions would combine to protract the moult. Your diet is satisfactory, but while the bird is out of condition make the drinking water the colour of pale port with Parrish's Chemical Food. Give one dose of Epsom Salts; put just sufficient into a day's supply of drinking water to make it just saline, and let the bird have nothing else to drink for that day. I take it, it will eat a piece of plain biscuit or sponge cake; let it have a piece daily, after dropping on same 10 to 12 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. In like manner damp a piece of either, and dust it with flowers of sulphur two or three times a week. If it will not take a bath lightly spray it with chilled water every other day while the weather continues genial, but guard carefully against draught till it is dry. If you suspect parasites use quassia solution to spray with. I am of opinion the worst is past, and the bird will gradually recover condition if treated as above. Left to itself recovery would be much slower; besides, the bird being in a low condition would fall an easy prey to a sudden chill or any possible infection that came near it.

Foreigners with Canaries.

"A Lover of Foreigners."—Yes, both the Grey and Green Singing Finches will cross with the Canary, as also will most of the Serins, such as Cape Canary, Grey-necked Serin, Yellow-rumped Serin, St. Helena Seed-eater, and others. The Alario Finch has also been several times crossed with the Canary. In Italy the Hooded Siskin is frequently crossed with the Canary, and very handsome Hybrids are produced. I should say the Hooded Siskin is a brilliantly clad little fellow, but being uncommon is a somewhat costly purchase. Add white and spray millet to the seed usually supplied to Canary, and ants' cocoons to the usual soft food when the birds are with young. Nothing more will be required save the Canary's usual diet. A full sized double breeder, with the partitions removed, for each pair will make success the more probable. I do not know of any suitable seed-eaters which are louder songsters than a Canary; the chief characteristic is a softer tone, which constitutes their chief charm.

Breeding in Aviary Cages.

Zebra—(1) A cage 3½ x 1½ x 1½ft. is only large enough for one pair for breeding purposes, and possibly by adding others you may upset breeding results altogether. You might include a pair of Golden-breasted Waxbills, it is rather doubtful if they will breed, but I don't think they will interfere. The Waxbills are much smaller than the Zebra Finches. (2) Put nesting receptacles in each corner, two cocoa nut shell nests and two box nests; the latter should be square boxes, closed all round with an oval hole, say 1 x 1½ inches for entrance; coarse and fine hay will suffice for nesting material. (3) Canary, white, French and spray millet seeds, green food (green in flower and fresh lettuce), grit, water ad lib for drinking and bathing. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in cage. Do not stand the cage where it is possible for a draught to pass through it, or your birds will soon "shuffle off."

Foreigners & Canaries Together.

Songster.—Am not sure as to whether I grip your query correctly; that is, as to whether you mean the birds to fly loose in the room, or to be kept in separate cages in same room. Some of the best songsters among foreign birds are but poor songsters, while most of the really brightly-clad songsters are either fruit or insect eating species. The Green Singing Finch and, in fact, all the Serins are good songsters, and most are fully as bright as the English Siskin. The Hooded Siskin is really a gorgeously clad little fellow, but is uncommon, and, consequently, costly. The Grey Singing Finch is a splendid songster, but its plumage is grey; all the same, it is a pretty and chastely clad little bird. All the Waxbills are more or less brightly clad, and have a soft, sweet little song, almost continuously uttered. Any of the following are decidedly pretty: Zebra, Grey, St. Helena, and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, also Common and Green Avadavats. The Alario Finch is a good songster, and its plumage is an arrangement of black, white, and cinnamon. All are seed eaters. If this does not meet your need, please repeat query with fuller details.

A Sick Parrot.

T. W.—Never in future, especially in getting a new importation, keep a bird which shows evidence of running at the nostrils; till this yields spray or cleanse nostrils at least daily with diluted glyco-thymoline. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and wipe the bird's mouth out twice a day with this; that is, get a small camel-hair brush, dip it in a portion of the mixture, and anoint sides of mouth and tongue, as far back as the bird will permit you. Continue to use the eucalyptus, also the mixture, ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine. A small portion of the mixture with twice its bulk of water should be kept ready, and the bird induced to take a few sips twice a day. Let its drinking water be chilled, and put in it, say, five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid to two tablespoonsful of water, and continue this for a week or ten days. Keep cage strictly clean, removing the voiding as soon as possible. Carefully examine the bird to see that its skin is sound, and that there are no sore joints, etc. Report progress a fortnight hence.

A Window Aviary.

Doubt.—The aviary you propose would succeed well enough, if you could arrange to ventilate your room other than by the lower sash; if you manage this by the glass in one of the top panes, or by fixing an ordinary glass ventilator there, you would get over the difficulty. The roof and two ends should be closed up, and only one foot of the front wire netting with one foot of boards on either side of the netting; do not have too much glass about it, nor any leaky joints. The other alternative is to make the aviary entirely of wood and glass, except the back, which is against the lower sash. This should be wire netting, and whenever the weather permitted the sash should be open. This would be the more satisfactory plan, and if you make it wind and rain proof Budgerigars should do well there all the year round. I should advise the roof being of boards (without any glass) and felted. I should not advise you to put in more than two pairs, and even then once they start breeding you must get rid of the young as they are able to feed for themselves. Hang up four husks, keep the aviary bottom well covered with gritty sand, supply cuttlefish, green food, Canary, white, and spray millet, and a few oats occasionally, and give oats regularly when they are feeding young. Use natural branches for perches. Your aviary would be much more useful if you could extend it a foot on either side the window, and while you are putting it up the extra cost would be small indeed.

Treating a Green Parrot.

"Inexperienced."—Yes, you stand more chance of getting a quiet, talking bird by starting with a young one. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, but it should not be scared by rapid movements in its vicinity. Give it the following seed mixture: Canary seed, oats, wheat, and hemp seeds—two parts each of the two former kinds and one part each of the latter. It can also have plain biscuit, ripe fruit, nuts, and a little green food (fresh lettuce). It will be quite a twelvemonth before the ring appears. If it is eating heartily of the seed mixture, that is sufficient; but if it gets thin or appears unable to properly crack its seed, give about a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily. Note: This only keeps fresh for one day, and you must be careful no stale scraps are left about, and as soon as it gets older and eating heartily of the seed mixture gradually wean it from the boiled maize. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. With a little careful training you should have a quiet and talkative bird. For all imported birds the first few months are a critical period; keep it in a warm position, free from draught, yet not in a vitiated atmosphere.

Some Aviary Queries.

E. B.—I have not your previous query to hand, and do not remember the kind of birds you wish to keep; however, I think I can make it clear to you. You have ample space for 60 birds the size of a Norwich Canary, or 120 small Waxbills and Finches, or 30 such as Cockateels, Redrumps, and Rosella Parrakeets. Note: I have given you full particulars, so as to be quite clear, and you must have at least double the number of suitable nesting boxes, etc., as you have pairs of birds. Also note the above figures represent the number of birds the aviary will comfortably contain; for breeding purposes only half the number should be put in or better, 20 pairs, 40 pairs, 10 pairs in the same order as given above. Hope you'll have luck with them. Unless you can procure birds from outdoor aviaries you had better wait till spring before stocking your aviary as I doubt if newly-imported birds bought now, would be sufficiently acclimatised to stand the winter out of doors this year.

Birds for Unheated Bird-room

Paradise Whydah.—The cage should be long by Tins. deep, and about 2ft. It should be a box cage, with top half wire, the front wires rounded off towards the back. Pale sage green makes a good interior enamel, with black for the exterior. The size of the cage must really be determined by the length of the bird's tail; it should be high to admit of a perch being fixed, so that the bird's head would be clear of top of cage, and so that its tail would not drag in sand tray. For Orange Bishop get a cage of same style and colour, but 12 x 9 x 9 inches will be large enough. As regards your bird room, your query is not an easy one to answer, but if damp is excluded, ventilation secured without draught, and the shed is rain and wind proof, then with roomy cages any of the following should do well; but I can only do this as a venture. If you tell me your aims I can advise you to better advantage. Weavers, Whydahs, Cardinals, Serins, Zebra Finches, Golden-breasted, Grey, and St. Helena Waxbills, Common and Green Avadavats, Budgerigars, Cockatiels, Rosellas, and many of the Lorrikeets should do well. In fact, most of the Australian Parrakeets should do well.

Sick Grey Parrot.

H. T. A.—Glad to note the bird is improving; continue treatment already advised. (1) Get a little binding wire and fasten the sticks on with these; it will be safer and better, and yet still keep the bird engaged. (2) The hook is quite right, and the bicarbonate is a good remedy. (3) Of course you must keep up a supply of the boiled maize, till the bird takes to the seed mixture, which it will do later I think. There can be no given quantity; appetites vary. (4) Yes, the nuts can be given with the shells on if the bird prefers them that way. (5) Parrish's Chemical Food is a good tonic, and cannot very well be over done, as if it causes constipation a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia will soon put that right. (6) My Parrots get coverts up to about 9 p.m., but a space on top of cage is left open for ventilation. Gas will do harm providing the cage is kept below the level of the gas jets. (7) Your own convenience must be the best time, and I should say after a time it will permit you to handle it and put it back again. Note: The doubtful time with parrots is the first few months in this country; after that they are not troublesome or difficult to keep, if kept out of draught and wholesomely fed.

Bird-room Arrangements.

W. G.—In the first place you must have a lobby inside the door, and some means must be taken to keep the sand etc., from going between the floor-boards, the floor must be covered with either linoleum or zinc, the latter for preference, and it would be a good plan to let it extend eighteen inches up the walls to check mice getting into the nest boxes. The walls must be lined with twiggy branches (pea and bean sticks, or spruce branches), and the nest boxes fixed at the back of these, husks and baskets can also be suspended from the ceiling. A couple of dead fir trees in pots will make good furniture for the room; the baths should stand in the middle of large trays to keep the floor dry. You have ample accommodation for at least 100 birds, but do not put in more than 20 pairs for breeding purposes. Zebra, Ribbon, Ruious-tail, Long-tail, Spice, Gouldian, Diamond and Grey and Green Singing Finches; Zebra, Grey, St. Helena, and Orange-cheeked Waxbills; White and Grey Java Sparrows, and a pair each of Diamond Doves and Chinese Quails. You could keep with these Goldies, Bullies, Siskins Redpolls, Linnets, Twites, and Canarics, but I cannot recommend other British speeies.

Brevities.

What Parrot is it? (Redfern).—It is the Rose-breasted or Roseate Cockatoo. It certainly has the capacity for speech, and is a good mimic and acrobat. Some develop into quite good talkers, and such have frequently been described in CAGE BIRDS. The fact however remains, that the majority only speak an odd word or two, and on the whole they require much more teaching than either a Grey or Amazon. They are nevertheless droll and companionable, and possibly yours may develop into one of the exceptions. Keep it where it will have plenty of company and hear general conversation, also teach it by constant repetition of odd words and phrases. But teaching Parrots to talk needs much patience, and must be persevered in, and in the end you should get more than satisfaction out of your bird for the trouble expended on it.

A Recovered Parrot (Carolus).—Glad to note your bird has recovered, for at the time I was afraid it was too far gone for treatment to be of any avail. By all means let him have maize, wheat, and dari; at the same time I should keep a small tin of canary seed in the cage. Once it begins it will eat this freely. The other items of diet you mention are quite in order, and should be given regularly. Biscuits will do no harm given in moderation. During moult, or whenever it appears to be shedding feathers, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in cage, and if you do not give it messes, it should continue to do well, which I hope will be the case.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Magazine Cutting (Enthusiastic Linnet Fancier).—We are much obliged to you for your thoughtfulness, but we printed extracts from this article shortly after it appeared in the monthly magazine from which you have taken it.

A Postcard (Swindon).—Many thanks.

Something Like a Duck (S. A. Bone).—We should like to have been in that raffle. We are afraid, however, our readers are chiefly interested in ducks when they are served along with stuffing and green peas.

Concerning Parrots (T. Watson).—We are much obliged to you for the suggestion, and will give the matter our consideration. The difficulty is to find the man.

In Cloth (Tom Smith).—You can obtain Mr. Battye's book on Yorkshires, bound in cloth, price 2s. We have not the other book cloth-bound as yet, but hope to receive a supply shortly.

A "Little Original Scheme" (F. Whiting).—Send your little scheme along, and if suitable we will certainly print it on the terms you name.

German Fancy Paper (J. K., Cardiff).—Probably "Die Gefiederte Welt" (the paper established by Dr. Russ) would suit you; address, Creutz'sche Verlagshuchhandlung, Madgeburg. You will no doubt have to get it posted direct from Germany.

Cutting (A. J. H.).—Accept our thanks. We are afraid, however, the information is incorrect. We will look the matter up.

On Holiday (W. C. McIntosh).—We have to thank you for writing. There are many readers of "C.B.," we know, even in the out of the way district of Scotland which you mention, and we expect they place a regular order for our paper with their newsagents.

Cages, etc. (P. Benson).—It is against our rules to recommend any particular advertiser; obviously it would be very unfair for us to do so. You will find in our columns several advertisers who make a speciality of special cages, etc., for catchers, and we should advise you to write them, and see what they can do for you. As regards the other matter, did you put a halfpenny stamp on all the envelopes? If so, this would explain why you received no replies.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE UNITED KINGDOM LIZARD CANARY SOCIETY.

SIR,—Being a member of the above society, I think there should be a little alteration in it so as to bring the Lizard Canary more prominently before the breeders and lovers of this variety. I think if certain of the present officers will resign (as I hope they will) and let someone more able take their place, we shall advance more than we are doing. We should have had three meetings within the last four months, one at Oldham and two at Glossop, but owing to errors as to dates, and being late, and not turning up, we have not been able to do any business worth publishing. Wake up, Lizard men, and make things sail along a bit for the Lizard Canary.

JACK DICKINSON.

THE USE & VALUE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—In writing previously on this subject my object was with your kind permission to invite a discussion upon what I considered would be a matter of interest to the Fancy at large. My communication was intended as an expression of opinion only and not an assertion of fact. I do not propose to monopolise your columns by enlarging upon it, but hope to see the matter taken up by those who, from their special training and knowledge of medicine, are qualified to give an opinion that will carry weight. So far as Mr. Hadwin is concerned, I have no desire to argue the matter with him, being personally quite aware of his opinions on the subject, and I take it that his feelings, mingled or otherwise, or his chances of convincing me, are not matters of public interest. With all his practical, and as he is good enough to inform us intelligent experience, I have yet to see the bird emanating from his rooms which has undergone the scientific feeding that he speaks about, which can hold its own, so far as colour is concerned, with the majority of birds one sees on the show bench. I am quite content to hear what your readers have to say on the matter, and should any benefit accrue to the Fancy at large through my introducing the subject as Mr. Hadwin so patronisingly informs us, my original communication will have justified its existence, and, I take it, will necessitate no apology.

GEO. B. DANIELS.

SIR,—Mr. Hadwin has got slightly mixed in his reply to Mr. Daniels' letter. Saffron is the stigma of Crocus sativus. It was formerly thought to possess powerful medical properties, and was used in many medicaments, tincture of rhubarb among them. It has now gone out of use so far as pharmacy is concerned, except as a colouring agent. Colchicum autumnale, which Mr. Hadwin confuses with saffron, is the plant which has considerable medicinal properties, and is prescribed for gout, rheumatism, etc. The parts of the plant used are the corm or root and the seeds. Crocus sativus has three stamens, but Colchicum autumnale has six. I have, myself, used saffron during moulting, both as a colouring agent and for hastening the moult and, I must say, with entirely negative results. I should be glad to know if Mr. Hadwin or any of his friends have used his mixture without the saffron? I am inclined to think the result would be the same whether saffron was used or left out.

J. F. SMITH, Pharmaceutical Chemist.

SIR,—I think Mr. Hadwin is a little wrong or out of his calculation as regards saffron that is given to birds, as one kind is quite different from the other. Meadow saffron, so-called, is cultivated for its corms collected about the end of June when they are a year old, and belong to the natural order Inclanthasea (Linnæan, trigynia) 6 stamens, epiphy clous, inserted in the orifice of the tube. Anthers—oblong, extorse, versatile. Ovary 3 celled, superior, syncarpous. Styles—3 terminal very long; stigma—3 minute. Crocus-saffron belongs to the true natural order Iridauæ (Linnæan monogynia) stamens 3 epiphy clous. Anthers: extorse adnale ovary inferior and 3-celled syncarpous; styles—1 terminal; stigmas—3 petaloid. From the foregoing you will at once see that there is a low ornamental plant with grass-like leaves and large lily-shaped flowers of a purple colour. It is a native of Greece and Asia Minor, but is extensively cultivated in Austria, France, Spain, and also formerly in England. The dried stigma form the saffron of the shops which, when good, has a sweetish penetrating diffuse odour, a warm pungent bitterish taste and a rich deep orange colour. The bastard saffron is of the genus Carthamus, natural order Compositæ, and the meadow saffron. Anyone obtaining a copy of the Imperial Dictionary will be able to read and compare the two cases.

A. GOODALL.

SOME POINTS ON SALES AND EXCHANGING.

SIR,—The adoption of CAGE BIRDS deposit system is, in my opinion, the only effective means by which the various "tricksters" among both purchasers and sellers can be defeated. No bona fide person could or would object to it. The rules laid down are fair to both parties, and leave no loop-hole for cheating of any description. Most dealers are clean, honourable men, but, alas! there are others, and I have had experience of both. Some dealers offer to send their birds on approval—some say on trial before settlement. Some will return your money in case of non-approval; there are others who carefully conceal the fact that they never return money until the time allowed for approval or trial is up, and then they tell you they will exchange the bird but never return cash. Of course, the would-be purchaser pays all charges, carriage, insurance, etc. (no mean items) which acts as a very effective brake to any desire the purchaser may have to give trouble by too many exchanges. "Sent on approval," in the absence of any other arrangement, means that in case of non-approval money should be returned. But to compel its return the party holding it must be sued in the county court of the district in which the transaction took place. The unrecoverable costs such as travelling expenses, loss of time, etc., may easily exceed the amount in dispute. The remedy for all this is, when in doubt, the adoption of CAGE BIRDS deposit system in all transactions.

F. W. POWELL.

DIPPERS BREEDING IN CAPTIVITY.

SIR,—Some months ago I wrote telling you about my Dippers. They were in perfect health up to the end of July when, owing to my removal to a distant town (it being impossible for me to take them with me) I had to liberate them. Towards the end of May the hen began to show signs of wanting to nest. I was away for a week, and when I came back I was walking in the aviary and the hen Dipper flew out of a hole between two stones on the bank of the stream that flows through the aviary. I looked in and found a half-built nest—a queer looking concern altogether, built of strings, moss, twigs, ends of coloured wool, feather, etc. In fact, the birds used anything to hand (I beg pardon, to beak). That look of mine was fatal, for the birds deserted their nest in consequence. Some cold, wet days followed which seemed to put them off. They did not attempt anything more till the hot weather in the early part of July. You may be sure I did not meddle again. The nest was placed under some long grass overhanging the bank. Six white eggs were laid, but were not incubated. I put them in a Blackbird's nest, but to my great sorrow all were robbed and broken by some boy or other. They did not nest again. I wish to know if any of your readers can say if this is the first time Dippers have nested in captivity? If so, it is a great pity that I had to give up my aviary, built in ideal conditions for them—running water, plenty of room, and live insect-food. Perhaps, in the far distance, I may have another like aviary, and most certainly I shall keep a pair of Dippers, for they are most interesting birds. I send my best wishes to CAGE BIRDS. I have introduced it to several bird lovers and they agree in calling it the best journal of its kind.

THE SEXING OF NIGHTINGALES.

SIR,—Being a lover of the Nightingale, I am writing to know if any of your numerous readers can tell me a simple method of telling to what sex individuals of this species belong? I am particularly anxious to know how to pick out the cock Nightingale.

MINSTREL OF THE NIGHT.

A "TIP" TO LIGHT MULE-BREEDERS.

SIR,—I have read in the columns of CAGE BIRDS for some weeks now a lot about hen Canaries and how to breed them for light muling purposes (sib bred hens). The Lancashire and Norwich cross, and other crosses too numerous to mention, have been suggested, but from my own experience this year and from what I have seen, I am sure it would be much nearer the mark if mule-breeders would look at Goldfinches with both eyes for light muling purposes, and pick the hen Canary blindfolded.

ONE WHO HAS SEEN THE GOLDFINCH.

[We think many of our readers would thank our correspondent for his "tip" if he would describe what it is they have to look for in the Goldfinch.—EDITOR.]

IS IT A HYBRID?

SIR,—I have in my possession what appears to me a very peculiar species of bird. I should like to know if any other reader of CAGE BIRDS has ever had or seen a similar one. To my way of thinking it is a Hybrid between a cock Blackbird and a hen Thrush. Its beak is not a clear yellow but is broken by dark brown blotches. It has a yellow ring round its eye, and its breast is of a brownish grey. It has a rather flat head, the shape of a Thrush's. It had no tail when I first had it and it has not grown one since (I don't know whether it will ever have one). The person whom I got it from said it was a last year's bird (1907). It has not started moulting at all yet. What I should like to know is: Are there Hybrids of this sort at liberty? That is, if it is a Hybrid. I have an idea it is a cock bird. Several people think the samo as I do

J. SHEERS.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB PATRONAGE.

SIR,—The arguments in connection with the above appear to have assumed such abnormal dimensions that perhaps it would be best to state the true facts. A the annual general meeting of the S.Y.C.C. a motion was carried practically unanimously by those voting: "That only specialist cage-bird judges should be allowed to judge the members' birds." To prove that I am only writing in defence of the members of the club in the conduct of their own affairs, let me prefix my remarks by saying that I had nothing to do with the moving of the proposal, neither did I vote or express an opinion upon it; therefore, I claim to have acted quite impartially. But I am not stating this to in any way detract from my responsibility as a unit of the club. What was in the mind of the mover at the time I do not know; neither is it possible for Mr. Hammond to know, so that he has no right to make any deductions, seeing that Mr. House's name was never mentioned (if my memory serves me correctly). It is not material to the crux of the question whether Mr. House has judged in Yorkshire 17 or 70 years, or whether officials smile all over their faces, or half way down their backs when he is appointed for a Union show; the point is, have the members of the S.Y.C.C. the right to determine who shall judge their birds? I contend they have, however distasteful it may be to Messrs. Hammond and Dean. And the committee in respecting the views of the general body of members only did their duty for which they have been dubbed "mean and unfancierlike" by Mr. Pope. It will not be out of place for me to say that at the meeting convened for allotting the club's patronage, the abilities of Mr. House and his passing of the two birds at Plymouth last year were never discussed. The fact of his not being a specialist cage-bird judge precluded the support for Plymouth from consideration, and this is exactly what the secretary intended to convey when he wrote to Mr. Pope, and not what some are endeavouring to make out—viz., the passing of the birds by Mr. House. Mr. Hammond deduces the same inference from a statement of mine which I absolutely repudiate, and have proved by the above statements. It must be admitted that Mr. House is a man of marked ability, but if he is the heaven-born judge Messrs. Hammond and Dean would make us believe him to be, why did they find it necessary to champion him in the Fancy Press? Surely fanciers must know it, or are they taking upon themselves to instruct them? But I do not propose to discuss the merits or demerits of a judge in the Press, as I consider it unfair. Does it not seem strange that Messrs. Hammond and Dean should have written simultaneously? Quite a coincidence, I suppose! The former appears to be rather straining his point when he says the matter casts reflection on the judgment of Yorkshiremen; because he ends up by saying their judgment is second to none. If such is the case (which I am not questioning) why on earth trouble about that of others? It makes his reason look merely ostensible, and if it is accepted I very much question if his compeers will care to be shown so thin-skinned. I have always looked upon Yorkshiremen as broad-minded sportsmen; sticklers for managing their own affairs, and not grudging the same privilege to others. It would be interesting to see what quarter would be given to any intrepid southerner who was indiscreet enough to trespass on the preserves of the Yorkshire Union whether it was in regard to leaving a judge out of their list or anything else? The Yorkshire Union has already told the C.B.U. that their rules must be paramount. Now we are told their judgment is second to none; and the secretary and late secretary have taken upon themselves, with or without the consent of that body, to admonish the members of the S.Y.C.C. What is to be deduced from all this? Maybe, the Yorkshire Union is endeavouring to tear the governing mantle from the back of the C.B.U.? In conclusion, permit me to thank you, sir, for granting space for the ventilation of the above, and at the same time to state that as far as I am concerned it is ended.

IS IT A RECORD IN LINNET MULES?

SIR,—Being in Bathgate this week-end on holiday, I made a call on a friend and fancier, Mr. John McLean, of Chapel Lane, who, by the way, is the only successful Mule-breeder in Bathgate district this season. I think Mr. McLean has made a record this year, as from one cock Linnet paired up to three clear hens, he secured no less than 45 mules, 25 of them (mostly cocks) being alive and doing well, and they can be seen every day. Two more cocks made good their escape, while the remainder went over to the great majority after being all fully fledged. There are some nice birds in the above lot, everyone of them being dark. I must congratulate Mr. McLean on his success.

AULD REEKIE.

A BULLFINCH HEN'S RECORD.

SIR,—I should like you to publish this in CAGE BIRDS. I had a Bullfinch hen in 1907 which I had previously caught. I used her for a call-bird, and she being very tame, I kept her. This season I thought I would put up a pair for Hybrid- breeding. So having a nice cool room I built a little aviary in one corner, measuring 4ft. long, 3ft. high, and 1ft. 6ins. wide. I put in my Goldfinch on the 1st of May with the Bullfinch, as he was singing well, and in a day or two I saw the hen Bullfinch carrying some stems of dandelion heads, which I gave them, around the aviary. I went and got a piece of sloan tree and placed in the aviary, which I soon found out she was very proud of. I then put in a piece of cocoanut shell, and seeing her go in and out of the shell I got some building stuff such as twigs and hair, knowing what they naturally built with. I soon found that she built as good a nest as any Bullfinches I ever saw. I did not disturb her until May 10, when I found two eggs in the nest. She laid her full nest (five in number), and I left her to sit for eight days before deciding to look at them. Being surprised to find three eggs good, I put them under a hen Canary which I knew to be a good feeder. I succeeded in rearing all three. I may say I fed the hen on dandelion heads and young lettuce, and biscuits slightly soaked in milk, giving no egg food at all. When the young were a fortnight old they were out of the nest, and when a month old I caged them off. Kindly note the number of nests I have had from this Bullfinch. From the first nest I had three young, reared by the Bullfinch. The Canary forsook three good eggs in the second nest. There were two eggs in the third nest, both of which hatched out, the young being nine days old when the Canary, who was a poor feeder, died. The fourth nest I left under the Bullfinch. Then I lost the Goldfinch, who flew away. The Bullfinch did not sit the following night and the young ones died in the shell by the time I found it out. A week or so later I saw she was wanting to go to nest again; so I put a cock Greenie in with her, and she is now sitting on five eggs, of which I think some will be good; but I am going to let a friend of mine have the eggs, as my hens are finished for this season. I can say that all the leading men of my town and county, and others who have asked to see them, have said that my breeding results are the best they ever heard of. They saw the Bullfinch sitting and saw all her eggs. She is looking as well now as ever, having laid 25 eggs, of which 11 have been good so far. I only secured three young out of them, but I am thankful to say they are three beauties of splendid size and type, showing their parentage well. All three are cocks.

A GREEN SINGING FINCH WHICH BRED MULES FREELY.

SIR,—A notable green singing Finch has just died which belonged to Mr. J. McLaren, of Ibrox, Glasgow. It had been in his possession for four years and was the father of ten Mules. Eight of these (three cocks and five hens) were bred last year, the mother being a yellow Yorkshire hen. The remaining two were bred this year, with a Norwich hen. Mr. McLaren says it was the best feeder he ever saw, and could "sing like a Linnie"; also all the cock Mules (except one) developed its song, the odd one having the Canary notes.

A HEN CANARY BOTH TAME AND PROLIFIC.

SIR,—I herewith enclose a photograph of one of the most prolific hen Canaries I have ever known and whose performance, I should think, constitutes a record for one year. She laid 42 eggs and reared 24 young birds in the same year. Her owner is Mr. J. Crossley (manager of the Station Hotel Vaults, Blackpool), and he often carried her round the room sitting on the nest (as is seen in the photo). She never took the slightest notice of anybody, and was truly a marvel for sitting and feeding, and gave him plenty of encouragement for a first venture. But, alas, a smouldering fire in the vaults one night put all his birds out of existence. Like all good fanciers, however, he had to stand the loss and make a new start, and I am pleased to see that he has got a few more together, and I wish him every success. He will be very fortunate, though, to eclipse the record of the hen shown in the photograph.

BLACKPOOLITE.

BIRDCATCHING, AND THE PERSECUTION OF BIRD-CATCHERS.

SIR,—In reading "Bird Lover's" letter I felt I must have a few words to say on the subject. He is quite right in every word he states. I know several of the members of the R.S.P.C.A., and I know they would not harm even a mouse; if they saw one which was going to be killed, they would say, Don't kill the dear little thing it would be cruel. And as to the Canaries they keep, they are like naked young ones. They wonder why they look so delicate, with only half plumage, and why they won't sing. As to the keeping of their so-called pets, the poor birds are exposed to draughts by the pulling down of the windows, and are kept in the same cage month after month, and year after year. The crevices of the cages get full of red mites, and the birds themselves get no rest day or night. I suppose all this is not cruel in their sight; but such people will be troublesome, and if it were not for such people, the world would be in a better state than it is to-day. Now I live in a very large gardening district. I suppose these good, generous people are not aware of the ravenousness of birds in regard to the fruit. The master men who own these gardens are obliged to keep men with guns for the purpose of shooting down the birds so as to stop them from eating the fruit as soon as it is getting ripe. Then I see people condemning the honest labour of bird-catching. Now, in my time in the winter I have seen Goldfinches come around the thrashing machine while it is in motion so as to get food, and I have seen them caught with caps and baskets. The birds have been hard driven for food, and that is why they were to be found there. And these dear people say that it is cruel to catch these birds. If they kept gardening land they would make a row about these same birds taking all their tit-bits, and would soon want them caught or shot down. The people who make this great fuss are neither more nor less than ignorant and short of sense, or they would not be troubling their heads with such nonsense, or troubling other people. Birdcatchers are "roughs," as they name them, but not quite such "roughs" as those people, some of whom belong to the R.S.P.C.A.

NOVICE.

SIR,—May I ask the favour of a small space in your esteemed paper? It was with a certain amount of pleasure that I read the first part of "Bird Lover's" letter until I came upon the question altogether out of the latitude. Would "Bird Lover," in all his affection for birds, grant us a short explanation, and define to us his meaning of "undesirable amateurs?" Is he financially affected, or is it "true love" which has moved him? "What's in a name?" for I know of many undesirables who can give points to many so-styled professionals in general woodcraft (not catching a few Linnets and Chaffinches). I know, for I was in a town not a hundred miles from Nottingham, and I once asked a man there, who advertised a good deal as a birdcatcher, if he ever got any Blackcaps. He said: "Yes, sir, I sell 'em in the market place at 3d. each." At the finish I found out that he meant "Blue Tits." No, Sir, we want this country (which is annexed quite enough by the great "I am's") kept as free from licences as possible. There is no need to bar any man of his sport; so, kind "lover," do not be "down" on the amateur. Have we not enough class war now without an increase? Undesirable it is indeed!

ONE OF THE UNDESIRABLES.

THRUSHES BREEDING IN A CAGE.

SIR,—As reported already in your paper, Mr. W. Downing, of Manchester, has been fortunate enough to get a pair of Thrushes to go to nest in an ordinary double breeding cage, which he has fixed up in his back yard. There seems to have been some doubt thrown out as to the possibility of this being done, and I have pleasure in confirming Mr. Downing's statement. The last nest contained the complement of good eggs, one of which hatched, but the young bird only lived one day. He believes it to have been killed by mice. However, the youngster, preserved in spirit, was brought down to our last meeting for the members' inspection, and a number of members have seen the birds nesting, while several have tested the different clutches of eggs, and found them filled. Mr. Downing is one of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.'s most successful novices, and great credit is due to him for his patience in hand-rearing the hen Thrush and getting her to breed. And we hope he may be successful next season in rearing youngsters, and accomplishing what must be regarded as a unique event.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—I quite agree with Mr. Weston that birds with "invisible" ticks should be entered in the clear class. Otherwise judges will have a fine time of it, handling nearly every bird in the clear classes, rulling their plumage, and consequently, in some instances, at least, putting them out of show condition. What do exhibitors who never handle their birds think of this? There is one very simple way out of this difficulty. Let the clear classes read, "clear or invisible ticks," and the difficulty ceases to exist. J. C. WILMOT.

SIR,—Friend Weston thinks I read his letter hastily, but I can assure him I did not, and the question he asks me, viz., do I consider a flue-marked bird ticked, I can answer by saying, decidedly yes. How can he be otherwise if he is not clear? And if a man enters a bird as a tick and this bird is one of the best in the class, the first thing a judge should do should be to find the tick. If he cannot find it he has only to put it down and say so. But an exhibitor expects a run for his money, and, as I said before, if the schedules are not worded differently, there is no other class for a flue-marked bird but the ticked class. But if "invisible" ticks were allowed in the clear class then all handling could be done away with, and exhibitors would get a fair run for their money. And I don't think any judge would handle a bird to see whether it was clear or ticked before he awarded the prize; not if it were the best bird. I know I wouldn't. Of course, equal merit might alter the question, but this is very rare. C. E. SILK.

SIR,—Being a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS I noticed that the question of "What is a Tick?" has again crept into the correspondence columns. I thought that was done with some time ago. Now I see Mr. A. C. Gregor proposes that a bird with a dark underflue might be shown in a clear class. What need have we to do this, seeing that at most shows provision is made for ticked and marked birds? As a rule, these classes are not so well filled as the clear classes; in fact, I heard a few days ago that the Bodmin Committee are only having one ticked class for Norwich this year as the entries in them last year were so low. If ticked birds are to be left out and put in clear classes, this will make the entries still less. Then, again, if a bird is ticked no matter where the feather or feathers are, a "ticked bird is not a clear." Who would show a ticked bird in a clear class and think they are doing what is right? I remember buying a bird out of a clear buff class, and some time after, I had an accident with a bird when sending it to Bodmin show; so I sent the bird I had bought and he won first prize. Some time after I found he had a tick on the thigh, but it was unnoticed, even by several critics, who, with myself, preferred another for first. I think Mr. Arthur Harris's letter in your issue of August 22, explained the question and its answer, and if exhibitors were to abide by it, the "tick question" would not injure the repose of the fancier. This question brings an incident to my mind; being at a certain show and seeing a bird in a tick class with, I think, three cards on the front of cage, I looked for the tick, but could not see any mark on him. One exhibitor was passing at the time, so I asked him if he knew where the bird was ticked. He immediately told me, "the inside feather of wing." Another told me it was on the thigh, and another "on the vent." But I could not see it. Perhaps it was one of those "invisible" marked birds we hear about. I would very much like to know the opinion of our leading judges and exhibitors. I don't think any one of them would go so far as to say "a ticked bird is a clear bird."

T. TREVENA.

SIR,—Mr. Woollard, in his courteous letter of last week, says I am in error with regard to my conclusions on this subject, but I still maintain, and I believe I shall be supported by the great body of fanciers who think the matter out, that the real question at issue is set, broadly and firmly, upon the point—a clear bird above all others. That it is a question of the clear bird above all others with Mr. Woollard, his letters prove. He says on August 15:—"A good clear bird is harder to get than a bird with dark underflue," and he clenches the importance he places upon this by stating that (in face of his knowledge that a schedule stated "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification") he should "place the clear bird first as it is the most rare of the two." I should think that settles the point that, so far as Mr. Woollard is concerned, the question rests upon a clear bird above all others. I should like briefly to draw Mr. Woollard's attention to the fact that in his first letter he distinctly claimed that it was the duty of a judge (Mr. Weston was then in question) to act up to the schedule. But I pointed out his own departure from that doctrine. I quoted Mr. Woollard correctly, for on August 15 he writes:—"For dark underflue to be eligible in a clear class, the schedule should read: Dark underflue not to be a disqualification." But on this distinct stipulation to a judge he said: "Even then it would count against the bird, should there be two birds of equal merit." That is definite, so far as Mr. Woollard is concerned. It is not so much a question of the technical meaning of the words "disqualification," or "counting against"; those things, in my opinion, are mere flies on the wheel in view of the larger issue of the future of the bird. But, for all that, if it is the duty of a judge to act up to schedule, where the above reservation appears he has a right to treat both birds on an equal footing. Mr. Woollard says he should penalise the one as against the other, and I contend that is arguing against himself. Mr. Woollard now says:—"I have seen schedules read: Dark underflue not to be a disqualification, but to count against the bird according to its extent." That is all very well, but it is quite different to what Mr. Woollard wrote at first. Those last ten words make all the difference; they fit Mr. Woollard's contention now, but they were not there in the first letter, and prove that I was not in error in my construction. My view is that we ought not to leave such a question open for a judge to handicap at his own estimate, seeing the wide differences of opinion, as instance Mr. Woollard's and Mr. Weston's. The one admits dark underflue and would not examine for it, and calls a surface tick a tick. Mr. Woollard would handicap the bird with dark underflue. Now does friend Woollard see my point? My next contention Mr. Woollard proves up to the hilt, for all along the line he contends that good clears are more rare than birds with dark underflue, that he would penalise dark underflue, and that dark underflue comes from the green blood. In all this we are alluding to clear classes. I know a clear can be bred from two greens. I have done it. My experience proves it, and it is no theory. But I repeat here (and Mr. Woollard by inference from his statements and decisive views proves it) that if green blood results often in dark underflue, if an absolutely clear bird is so very rare, and if all judges are to proceed upon the basis Mr. Woollard lays down, and penalise a dark underflue as against a perfectly clear bird, then breeders with a natural desire to get to the top, will look about for the cause of their non-success and drop that cause. I say, and I repeat it most emphatically, that such a trend of action will spell detriment to the Norwich Plainhead. What I would do with two birds were I judging is an abstract question. If I had the two before me I would tell Mr. Woollard. But even this would not settle the point I have raised—viz., "Is it to the advantage or otherwise of the Norwich Plainhead's future to admit (without penalty, for that is a partial, if not complete, disqualification), or to exclude the dark underflue in an otherwise clear bird?" I am sorry I cannot agree with Mr. Woollard, but I respect his arguments and believe he is sincere. I contend that to do anything that will in any sense tend to discourage the use of green blood is to sap the vitals of the future of the Norwich Plainhead, and I feel sure it will be found in the end that Mr. Weston has done good service by his action in acutely raising the point. It is for specialist clubs and the cage bird societies to lay down the law, and enforce it by their schedules.

GEO. GARDNER.

SIR,—"Lancashire Lad" says in your last issue that he exhibited a bird as a clear bird, under Messrs. Battye, Wellings, Vardy, Payne, Barnes, and Robson, and that it won; rightly so, I think, if there was no visible tick. Suppose we exhibited a bird in the even-marked class, and when the judge came to this bird and said it was in the wrong class, being only marked on one eye, we replied: "Take it out and examine it, and you will find it marked just the same as the other eye on the underflue, but it does not reach the surface to be visible." Will the judge then say it is eligible? I should think not. And if we are going to make judges take all clear (to the eye) birds out of their cages at shows, to see if they can find specks of dark underflue, they will have a sorry time of it to find some of the ticks. The birds will have a sorry time of it, too; fanciers can make up their minds three shows will be quite sufficient in one season, with that sort of scrutiny and the railway journeys. I have been a breeder 25 years, and an exhibitor 16 years, and I say let us go forward, not backward. We want colour and size and quality; we cannot sacrifice colour for clear skins. And, further, I say that the time has not arrived with most of us, when we can breed birds with clear underflue from two Greens, although we have been practical breeders for 25 years, too. But let us have a decision, fanciers.

CLUB REPORTS.

STRATFORD AND E. LONDON F.S.

A general meeting was held on August 27th at Workman's Hall. The business consisted chiefly of the making of final arrangements for the young stock show. The annual show takes place on November 18th.—GEO. MAY, Assistant Secretary.

NEW BILTON & DISTRICT F. & F.S.

A meeting was held at the Royal Oak Inn, New Bilton, on August 17th, Mr. F. Watson presiding. The balance-sheet was read, and gave every satisfaction. After purchasing show pens, etc., there was a balance of £1 8s. 7d. Mr. E. Harris was elected assistant secretary. Our next show will be held on September 14th, for a six miles' radius.—JNO. GREATREX, hon. sec.

CITY OF BELFAST N.C. AND Y.C.C.

The usual monthly meeting was held in the Avenue Hall, Garfield Street, on August 1st. The president, Mr. Adams, presided. This was a summoned meeting, and there was a good attendance of members, fines being recorded against a few members for absence as per rule. Reports of old pairs from members were given. It was decided to arrange classes for our annual show at next meeting, to be held on September 5. The show is to be held on November 21. Judging by the reports of members there will be a big turn-out of young birds. This is our hope.—A. SOUTH, assistant secretary.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Committee meeting held August 25th, Mr. F. A Lester in the chair. The principal business was the adoption of the show cage. It was unanimously decided that the latest show cage of Mr. C. Rochi's be adopted, and the price to members only will be 3s. 6d. The committee are agreed that it is the best cage they have seen for years, as it answers the double purpose of a training and show cage combined, and has stood the racket of the past show season in going backwards and forwards to the different shows. Members who are handy in making their own cages for training purposes will take note of the fact that Mr. Rochi has kindly promised to supply them with the regulation wire front and drinkers, so that they can send the show cages spick and span, knowing they will be a credit to their club.—J. W. NORRIS, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH CREST CLUB.

A committee meeting was held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on August 15th, when Mr. McLay, vice-president, occupied the chair. Also present: Messrs. McPhail, Campbell, Smart, Chalmers, Shillinglaw, and R. Adamson. The most important business was the election of a judge for club show. Our club judge having declined to undertake the task, it was decided to engage a neutral judge. A number of prominent fanciers in the Northern Crest Club were proposed, and the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Thos. Taylor (Gateshead) to officiate. The rules for the Roberts' Cup competition were drawn up, and will be inserted in show schedules where patronage is given. The following fanciers were admitted to membership:—Messrs. J. Montgomery, J. Anderson (Glasgow), and J. Wilson (Galashiels). This being all the business, the meeting terminated with the usual vote of thanks to the chairman. Members who have not yet paid their subscriptions, will oblige by sending it at their earliest convenience.—R. ADAMSON, hon. sec., 50, Petershill-rd., Glasgow.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Usual monthly meeting held at Station Hotel on August 27th. In the absence of Mr. Ronald, Mr. J. Hyslop took the chair. There was a grand turn-out of members and friends to hear Mr. Jas. Shepherd (Newcastle) tell of his experiences in the keeping of cage birds, more particularly of British birds. The Secretary read the correspondence. One letter was from Mr. T. C. Crawhall, withdrawing his resignation of his membership, no doubt brought about by the unanimous vote of our members at the last monthly meeting, and also the unanimous vote of confidence in him passed independently of his slight violation of the Cage Bird Union rules. The Secretary then read correspondence from several specialist clubs. Our total of specialist club patronage for our annual show is now six. They are as follows:—N.C.C., N.N.P.C., N.Y.C., B.F.C.C., N.B.B. and M.C., and N.B.B.M., and F.B.C. With such strong support we look forward to a good entry on Nov. 13th and 14th, the date of the show. Mr. Shepherd then delivered his lecture on "The feeding, moulting and staging of British birds." He said he had not come to give us what could be termed a lecture, but merely that they might have a quiet talk about the birds. He said he could remember when he came into possession of his first bird, "the common Greenfinch," and that was more years ago than he cared to tell. But he still stuck to his first love; in fact, he would as soon do without his pipe as his Greenie. He then told us what he considered was the best time to get British birds, the sort to choose, how to steady and stage them, and how to feed them. Mr. Shepherd being a past master at the game, the whole business was just like A B C to him. Everyone present was delighted with what the speaker had to say. At the finish two old fanciers were heard to remark that the longer one lived the more he learned. The discussion which followed was an interesting one. Mr. Shepherd answered all manner of questions, and the time went by all too quickly. Two new members were elected: Messrs. D. E. Kent (Newcastle) and John Tombling (Tynemouth). This being all the business the Chairman moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shepherd for the able and instructive lecture he had given, which was seconded by Mr. McPartling. Mr. Shepherd suitably responded, and the meeting closed.—JAMES JOHNSTON, Hon. Sec.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a meeting held at headquarters on August 26th (Mr J Sharples in the chair) it was decided to have eight open classes at the next annual members' show, to be held on October 10th, and that the Society give a special for most points in each class. Mr. W. Bowyer (Leek) will place the awards. The secretary was instructed to have schedules ready for distribution at our next meeting, September 9th. It was also decided that the meetings be held weekly up to date of show.—FRED STRETTE, sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (OPEN DERBY) O.A.

Next meeting Saturday, September 12th, for taking entries for annual exhibition and competition on the 26th. Entry forms in the hands of all members in the course of a few days, and I would specially request their return in time for above meeting. In filling up schedules please pay particular attention to rules 2, 6, and 8, the committee not being responsible for any errors made. We appeal to all to give us a large entry, so that we may have a magnificent show. A cordial invitation is given to all associated with this interesting hobby. (See Club notices.)—J. R. MITCHELL, sec.

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting at the Hall of Science on August 25th, Mr. B. E. Stubbs presiding. Business: Making the necessary arrangements for open show at the Corn Exchange on October 21st and 22nd next, and the appointment of stewards, Messrs. Dowle, Oliver, Cotterill, and Harding being elected. All members will be admitted to the show during judging. The Corn Exchange has been recently painted and decorated, and will be heated by hot water pipes if necessary, and specially decorated for the occasion. The schedules will soon be issued. Several special prizes have already been given for competition. The members' classes should be strongly supported, no less than ten classes being allotted to them.—MOORE AND CROWSTON, hon. secs.

GALASHIELS O.S.

A meeting was held in the Good Templar Hall, Galashiels, on August 29th. Mr. Todd (president) occupied the chair. Before the usual business the chairman referred to the loss the society had sustained in the death of Mr. J. O. Alexander. The secretary reported that he had secured the services of the following gentlemen to judge the cage bird section at the show to be held on November 21st:—Messrs. Robert Wright (Greenock) and David Brown (Edinburgh) for Scotch Fancy Canaries; and Mr. A. Hay (Berwick-on-Tweed) for Norwich, etc. The judge for the Border Fancy Canaries had not been appointed, but a list of names was drawn up for the secretary to write to. The schedule was then revised, and the following classes were agreed on:—13 classes for Scotch Fancy Canaries, 10 for Border Fancy Canaries, and 9 for Norwich, British, etc., making 32 classes in all for Canaries.—ALEX. SMITH, Secretary.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

Usual monthly meeting held on August 18th in the Temperance Rooms, Chester-street. The usual business was gone through, and then the members spent an enjoyable evening in a discussion on moulting and colour-feeding. Mr. J. Burns presided, and asked Mr. Nash his opinion of colour-feeding, but the latter gentleman strongly condemned it; he said that a bird once colour-fed must be kept on it the following year or one would not have good results in the breeding season. Several members were of the same opinion. Mr. Watson asked the best method of assisting the moult, and the best things to give the stock? What, too, was the most useful to fasten the colour? Mr. Hadwin said he was a great believer in saffron, as it caused the blood to leave the quill, and the feathers then dropped out. Cleanliness and baths on fine days would also be productive of good results. Several members took part in the discussion, which got so interesting that time was almost forgotten, and closing time came all too soon, bringing a very interesting and instructive evening to an end.—J. RICHARDSON, sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

The members held their usual fortnightly meeting on August 29th, at the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. George Clark presiding over a good attendance. The usual correspondence was read, including a communication from the secretary of the N.B.B.M. and F.B.C., intimating that we had been granted the patronage of that Club for our annual open show on November 20th and 21st. The preliminary arrangements for the open show were then gone into, and several matters of some importance were decided upon, amongst which was the issuing of subscription lists for the purpose of collecting funds. It was decided that we invite fanciers to advertise in our schedules and catalogues. It was also decided that the new rule in reference to the payment of contributions be not put into force until next year; therefore, those members who have not yet paid up will still be allowed to exhibit in the members' classes, in accordance with the old rule, which is that all members must be fully paid up one month previous to date of open show. The large amount of business transacted precluded any possibility of holding the usual discussion, it being quite late. The greatest enthusiasm prevails amongst our members, and things are looking decidedly promising for the annual show; we trust that when the time comes we will be well supported by fanciers and exhibitors.—REID AND MADDISON, Hon. Secs.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS.

By C. P. ARTHUR.

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

How to Keep, Feed, Breed, Tame and Teach to Talk.

A handbook which should be on every bird-lover's book shelf. Two full-page illustrations.

Pennants are never very plentiful in the market, and I consider that a true pair, and acclimatised, would be well worth £5, in fact, I should say this was cheap. To keep these big Parrakeets in cages is, I think, barbarous, and besides, you lose all their beauty. When my hay was ripe last year, my hen Pennant would give me no peace unless I stopped each time and gave her a bundle.

My Pennants began nesting operations in May, the cock diligently feeding the hen bring the first sign of good things to come. When pairing, the cock makes a terrible noise, something like the barking of a miniature pack of hounds; and he also gives a pretty whistle from time to time. If the hen is not ready to mate, should her lord prove too demonstrative, she runs at him along the perch, head down, and pretends to bite his leg savagely, when he quickly shears off. No doubt he knows (as I do) that a bite from a Pennant's beak is no joke!

Nesting begin in March, and one night by the look of the hen, I knew that eggs were not far off, and the next morning there was an egg laid on the floor, through inexperience, no doubt. I thought to myself, this will never do, so I popped the egg into the log, and awaited issues. Next day she took the hint, and laid her egg, like a well-regulated hen, beside the other, in the nest. Altogether five were deposited, but at first she did not sit very closely, and caused me thereby much mental anguish. However, she apparently knew her business better than I did, and what Pennant's eggs required by way of heat, for every egg hatched out in due course.

Incubation lasted about twenty days, so far as I could judge, for it is impossible to tell such things to a day, unless you are idiot enough to interfere, and I am not. The first I knew of the hatching out was the noise the youngsters made. At first it was very low and sibilant, but day by day it grew in volume to my great joy. At first it resembled the barking of a very miniature pack of hounds, but gradually it changed to the whistle of the adults, and then to hoarse grumbling.

Both parents worked early and late, and well they might, to feed these five hungry mouths, and to their credit they reared every one. I noticed one curious thing, that, when the old cock was going to feed, while the youngsters were still small, he used to put his beak down on the perch, and bring up the food repeatedly into his mouth, perhaps for five minutes at a time, and then he would fly off to the nest, as much as to say, "I think the feeding stuff is about right now."

The hen brooded the young closely for about four days; afterwards she only stayed in the nest all night—too hot, I expect, in the daytime. The young ones left the nest one by one, beginning with the oldest even unto the last; the Benjamin came out quite a week later than the first. They had yellow beaks, the hens having only a carmine crown on the top of their heads, followed by sage green; backs sage green, with dull black centres; the tails of the hens are tipped with white and have green centres; the cocks' tails are blue where the hens are green. The young hens have much more green on the necks and sides than the young cocks. Size, when they first left the nest, about that of a big Rosella. By the August following they were nearly as big as their parents.

I have looked carefully through all the books I know of, and so far as I can see, this is the first authentic account of the rearing of Pennants.

I may say that Pennants dote on mealworms, and eat them like shrimps, held in one claw. It may be nice for the Pennant, but I should think must be decidedly unpleasant for the poor mealworm. My young Pennants did not come out of the nest like a regiment of soldiers, and range themselves in a line for my inspection. They blundered out one by one, and dropped to the floor, and when they began to fly, they got many a hard bang on their poor heads, before they learnt that wire netting is a hindrance to bird flight.

I kept this pair of Pennants for years, and every season they presented me with a family; but never again did they go as far as five, and one year there was only one. They are still alive, and as handsome as ever in a friend's aviary. I sold them, very reluctantly, to make room for other sorts. It is impossible to keep so many different varieties, unless you have a miniature Zoological Gardens. Whenever I go there they always seem to remember me, and come up to the edge of the wires for a tit-bit.

Even breeding Pennants gets monotonous after a time. Doing the same thing in the same way year after year is like eating a quail a day for thirty days. Along towards the middle of the month a fellow begins to long for a broiled Crow or a slice of cold dog. My success in breeding Pennants apparently caused a lot of jealousy and ill-feeling in the avicultural world, and all sorts of nasty things were said, among others, that I did not know a Pennant from an Adelaide!

There are two unpardonable sins in this world—success and failure. Those who succeed can't forgive a fellow for being a failure, and those who fail can't forgive him for being a success. If you do succeed, never mind, you will be too busy to bother very much about what the failures think. That, I am happy to say, has been my position many a time in Birddom.

Chapter XVIII.—My Solomon Island Cockatoos.

In the year 1901, and in the July number of the "Avicultural Magazine," I saw an advertisement of two Red-eyed Cockatoos for sale. At first I took no notice, but about the middle of the month I bethought me of the Solomon Islanders, and wrote to ask the owner whether, if the birds were still unsold, he would kindly let me hear about them.

In reply I received a very courteous letter telling me that the birds were at least 18 years old, and that for the last nine years they had been kept in a cage and were consequently in bad feather; that they destroyed a bundle of firewood every day; that they had just laid two eggs (at least the lady had); that they had been given cotton wool, and had made a nest with it, and that either in intense indignation or utter disgust they had scattered eggs and material all over the cage bottom; that one egg had disappeared, and that the other had been sent to me.

It came duly to hand, but was fractured. Still, it showed me the size and shape; it was about the same size as an ordinary Pigeon's egg, and rather obtuse in shape. The gentleman said that, if I liked to have them I could, and might keep them till either they got into form or went to nest again. In an unthinking moment I closed with what I thought at the time a most generous offer. Since then I have modified that hasty opinion.

From the day these birds landed my sorrows began, and have continued with wonderful regularity ever since. Before I tell you what they are like, I will make a digression. Full of wicked, unsanctified pride, I wrote to my friend, Mr. Savage, of Rouen, to tell him of my good fortune. His reply was laconic and to the point. He thought that if the hen had really laid in the bottom of a cage and used a nest of cotton wool, she "ought to be relegated to the animal kingdom of asses." He further expressed his opinion that "such an easy-minded bird ought to breed anywhere."

Now I believe it was the last remark that decided me. I accordingly wrote and said I should be pleased to give the Cockatoos a trial. They have since given me not one, but many!

STRAY NOTES ON THE HYBRID SEASON.

By Thomas Smith.

The early part of the season was far from fruitful in the production of Hybrids. British birds in confinement were slow in starting to breed, but the reports in July and August were favourable, and the likelihood is that when the Hybrids meet at the shows they will give a good account of themselves.

The Russian Bullfinch hen was scarcely obtainable, and that lady has consequently been somewhat rare in Hybrid breeding; so far, I have not heard of a single Hybrid having been bred from her. Those I know of have all been bred from the British Bullfinch hen. The young from this are smaller than what are wanted for open show competition. However, those who have been successful in getting Hybrids of any kind are fortunate, and properly colour fed there is no forecasting what they may do on the show bench.

The sex of the Greenfinch- and Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids is most difficult to determine, when the birds are in their first feather. Many a disappointment happens in this way. Hybrids moult quickly, and when the second feathers come the sex can easily be determined, the male being stronger in colour. The Hybrid, Greenfinch Bullfinch, promises to be plentiful, and two Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids have been spoken of. It is to be hoped that a few of this cross will grace the show-bench. He has become very rare, and will now be much valued and prized. He is a very charming fellow indeed. Many have tried the cross, but without avail.

The Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid should not be scarce. For shape and colour he has no equal. Careful colour-feeding here is most essential; it should be started when the bird is able to do for itself, and should be continued until all the feathers are fully grown. Indeed, a wise method is to keep it on the colour-food for a fortnight after the moult is completed. While colour-feeding, the sulphate of iron should be added to the drinking water every second day—a piece, that is, about the size of an ordinary pea. A good few Goldie-Bullie Hybrids have been hatched, and if all are reared the entry should be above the normal one.

The Goldie-Redpoll is a favourite, and several have been secured. It is unequalled for brightness, bringing out, as it does strongly, the characteristics of both parents. His species can readily be recognised. This Hybrid improves with advancing years and his feathers carry a lovely sheen.

The Goldie-Greenie, though a very pretty Hybrid, is not prized as it ought to be, and that may be the reason many are bred and never heard of. The Linnet-Bullie Hybrid, too, has apparently gone out of favour; he has not even been mentioned in the year's breeding. A rearrangement of the classification for Hybrids might assist to make him more popular. He is worth cultivating, and should be encouraged.

The Siskin has found favour, and has been mated with almost every imaginable British bird and Canary. He has, according to all accounts, added to the list (with the Canary) several very fine Mules. I know of one or two which are moulting and the colour is coming out beautifully—a nice deep tone. I question if Goldfinch-Canary Mules are as numerous as they have been. Fine variegateds have been bred, and one or two very light Mules; but it is feared the latter are hens. An amateur I know has had the good fortune to get a clear Mule. It is pale in colour, but of good shape, and is in very healthy condition. Many dark Mules have been bred, but I have not come across anything exceptional. They are somewhat diminutive; fine size is looked for in a show dark Goldfinch-Canary Mule, with deep yellow-green feathers. The bright-yellow cinnamon-green is a lovely colour, and should be cultivated; it lends itself to a beautiful bloom.

The Linnet-Canary Mule seems plentiful, and there should be a fine "crop" for the show-bench. The Greenie-Canary is well forward in numbers, too, and round here (Glasgow) several big bouncing fellows are getting ready. Other crosses have been tried, but with no great success.

The Hybrid season is a short one. The parents are late in starting. Further, Bullfinch hens especially lay nest after nest of eggs, taxing the average fancier to his utmost capacity to test the eggs. For want of foster parents a lot of the young ones were lost which might have been saved. Odd Hybrids which were hatched, failed in the rearing because they had no companions in the nest. It it not always possible, but a capital idea is to set, say, a Canary egg or two about the same time. I am a strong believer in setting two or more hens on the same day, and at the same hour. If one bird hatches in each nest, they can be put together and reared in the one nest, the one helping the other to develop.

Intending Hybrid-breeders should look out for handsome Russian Bullfinch hens, moulted in the house if possible. House-moulted Bullie hens do best in the breeding season. Admittedly, they are not easily obtained, but they are worth a fair sum. Fresh-caught birds seldom do anything in the first year, but she invariably lays prolifically in the second year after being caged. The importation of Russian Bullfinch hens into Great Britain is a very limited one, and renders the possibility of one's buying a house-moulted hen very remote. An odd chance may arise, and those who have the opportunity of so doing should seize it as there are great possibilities in the cultivation of the Bullie Hybrid.

Get a good specimen and you have something to look at; it will fetch a handsome price, too. Fanciers who have had no luck this season should not allow their spirits to go down. If they have been working with fresh-caught Bullies let them moult them, and there is an excellent chance of getting Hybrids next season.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

AN ELASTIC CAGE SPRING.

Sent by —, 319, High Street, Gateshead.

Sender seems to have omitted name.

The idea which is illustrated below is that of an elastic cage spring. To construct it one has only to procure a length of strand elastic and form a loop at each end, binding them with string or wire. The sketch clearly shows the method of fixing it. A is the cage top and ring, B the elastic, and C a wire hook by which the cage is hung. The object of the spring will be at once apparent. The same contrivance will be found an excellent one by which to hang swing perches in cages or aviaries. An ordinary swing is all that is necessary for this.

A NOVEL METHOD OF HANGING CAGES.

Sent by A. Clompson, 15, Chant Square, Stratford, London, E.

I enclose an idea for fixing cages to walls instead of the usual one of making holes in the cage backs. I get a pair of back plates such as are used in fixing a looking glass to the wall. These cost 1½d. for two and may be had at any ironmonger's. Then I cut a piece out of the bottom with a file as shown in the sketch. Then I fix one on each end of the cage back. Before putting the nails in the wall, it is as well to mark each place where they are to go with a pencil through the hole in hook.—A. Clompson.

Canary Breeding from the Exhibition Point of View.

By J. BASTOCK.

One of the most, if not the most, fascinating of all hobbies is that of Canary breeding for exhibition, as the anticipation of winning first and special prizes gives one the necessary filip to keep the enthusiasm at fever heat, as it were. No one of a changeable mind should go in for Canaries, because the man whose ambition is to become a champion breeder, must have plenty of patience, and give every attention to the object he has in view. By so doing, and with ordinary luck, a novice will soon breed something that can win, and then he has the stimulant that will keep his mind fixed.

Some First Steps.

Having made up your mind to take up this most excellent hobby, procure a copy of CAGE BIRDS, as from that you will be able to glean much that will help you. The next thing to be considered is whether you have a suitable place in which to keep the birds. In the Midland Counties most of the smaller houses have a room above the living room (or kitchen, whichever you may choose to call it). This, in my opinion, is the best possible place in which to keep and breed Canaries, as it must be warm, and therefore free from damp.

Having selected your room, first proceed to fit it up with cages, and these you can easily make yourself, as everything can be purchased already for putting together (vide the advertisements in CAGE BIRDS). Supposing, then, you have made (say) six cages for breeding purposes (mine I made 30in. long 16in. high and 11in. deep), you have then plenty of room.

Procuring the Stock.

I presume you have made up your mind which variety you intend to breed. We will agree that you have chosen Norwich, which, no doubt, are the best to begin with, as they are the most popular and easily bred of all. You should, of course, join the local cage bird society, and make it a practice to attend all the meetings; by so doing, you will soon learn who are the fanciers that breed the winners, and who are the gentlemen that purchase their winners. Make yourself agreeable to everyone, and visit all the principal breeders of the variety you intend to have. If there are no such local breeders, write to the secretary of a good society, and get him to put you into touch with a reliable breeder; then place yourself in this breeder's hands, stating what you require in the way of birds, and the price you can afford to pay for a start.

Say, for example, that you want two sets, and can give for them anything up to six pounds (which, I think, is a fair price for two cocks and four hens). Your best plan will be to have one Yellow and one buff cock. You will now have the benefit of this breeder's experience extending over several years at least, which is not to be despised. I have seen it repeatedly advised that it is best to use one cock and one hen. That is all right if you have bred your own birds, and have a good stock; but the advantage of having two hens to a cock is that if one of the hens go wrong, or fail to breed, you have still another left, and the consequence need not be that you have lost a season. So that if you have two hens the chances of good breeding results are greater.

Everything in Readiness.

When everything has been got ready for making a start in breeding, say, by the first week in April, the cocks having been kept in separate cages, and got well on song by having been given a little egg food, maw seed, and hemp, place the yellow cock with one of the buff hens; then, in the course of three or four days, place a nest box on one end of the cage. This will be found to take up less room there than anywhere else. Give a little moss for the birds to play with until you see the hen is ready to build. Then you should give plenty of moss and hair, when the real excitement will begin.

In the course of a week she will lay her first egg. Take it away and put it in a box containing bran, substituting for it a small stone or imitation egg. Take out each egg as it is laid, until the third appears; then take away the dummy and place the three in the nest. You can now take the cock away, putting him into another cage with the other hen, when they will go through the same performance. And when this hen has laid, the other hen will be about ready to hatch her brood, which should be on the fourteenth day after you put the eggs back.

In all probability the hen will feed the youngsters better for the first week than if the cock were put back with her; if she will not, run him into the cage, and he will soon do his share in the rearing of the young. Repeat the same performance in due course with the other set.

Colour-feeding the Young.

Now, we will suppose you have had good luck and have several young Canaries reared by the middle of May. You must keep a good look-out to see that the hen does not pluck them for the purpose of building her nest again. If she should start to do so, place them in a small cage, which hang on the front of the breeding cage, until the hen has laid another clutch of eggs.

You should then remove the cock bird and the young to another clean cage, until they are nearly five weeks old. You can then take the cock from them, and begin to wean them off soft food; also stop giving them any green food. Crush a little Canary and hemp seed, and they will soon get used to eating same.

Now, the next thing to be thought of is the colour feeding. This is the most important item of all, for if you have bred some grand specimens, they are absolutely useless for the show-bench unless you can get them to a good and even colour.

Having looked through your CAGE BIRDS, send for samples of hot and cold peppers, and select the deepest of them in colour, but not that which has the most oil in. The way I decide as to which is the best is to take the driest, add some linseed oil, and then compare it with the most oily samples. This has often surprised me. Then I have added oil to the moist samples; but in nearly all cases they have had sufficient before. Having now selected your samples, both hot and cold, mix four ounces of hot to twelve ounces of cold pepper, well mixing it with a knife. Add one pint of best linseed oil to seven pounds of the mixture, and here you have a colour feed you may depend upon.

To one hard boiled egg, add two good spoonfuls of dried and crushed bread, two of moist sugar, and two of the colour feed; well mix these together, and give the mixture in small quantities at a time when the young are about nine weeks old. After about a week add a little more colouring matter, and take the seed away in the morning, placing it back for one good feed at night. In another fortnight take the seed away altogether, only throwing a little on the bottom of the cage occasionally, until your birds have moulted nearly all their body feathers. Then gradually add their seed.

By this time you will see which of the young birds are the most likely to develop into show specimens. Take these out and place in separate cages, letting them have a bath now and then, and giving a little extra maw seed and scalded German rape.

A Try at the Exhibitions.

Now we are getting to the end of the breeding season, and you have doubtless purchased a few "show cages." And you have, too, large ideas of what you are going to do. Having made up your mind as to the show at which you would like to exhibit your birds, apply to the secretary, or the show manager, as the case may be, for a schedule, and enter your bird (or birds) in those classes which you think will suit best.

The labels will arrive in due course, and you will then despatch the birds. Now you must go to see how they have got on, what awards they have received at the hands of the judge, and if you are a keen fancier you will learn more in one visit than I (or anyone) could teach you in a year. Perhaps you have been fortunate and have won; then don't think that you are a champion, for at the next show you may get nothing. In such a case, do not let it dishearten you, but study the different points of the winners, find out where your exhibits are at fault, and purchase a specimen perfect in that particular point in which yours are deficient. Then pair to your own the nearest to the type required.

How to Wash Canaries.

After your birds have been out a time or two they will require washing. This is not the hard task some would have you believe. The one great thing required is confidence. I well remember the first bird I washed; I would have given anything to have had a lesson from someone, but, no fear! you could not get any help in those days. Although I was a young beginner, I had sense enough to know that I stood no chance if I did not wash the birds, and so I made up my mind that it must be done.

I started with trembling heart and hands, and got through the task without killing one of the birds, although I thought one or two were dead at times; but they came out successfully enough to enable me to win first prize for my pains. After that it was no trouble to wash a bird, and I think I was one of the first to give a washing lesson "on paper."

At first I used a drying cage, but later on I found it best not to use one, as it had a tendency to curl the feathers. From experience I found one did not want to get any fire on one's birds.

So the way I have washed them for years is as follows:—I take three bowls and a bar of curd soap. I never let my water boil, but just have it hot enough to hold my hand in comfortably. I add a good pinch of powdered borax to each bowl of water, and wash down each side of the wings of the bird first. Then I do the tail, then the breast, then the neck, back and front, and lastly the head. I get a small brush to just touch across the top of the beak. Then I rinse the bird in each bowl of water, taking great care to get the soap out of the neck and from underneath the wings. I then draw the wings and tail through my lips, afterwards getting a soft cloth or handkerchief, with which I dry the bird as much as possible before the fire. Then I wrap a strip of flannel round the bird, placing it in the fender before the fire until the next bird is ready. I place the one washed first in a show cage previously placed so as to get nice and warm, covering it over with one of the damp cloths. This process is repeated until all the birds are finished.

In the meantime, my "better half" has got a large kettle of boiling water ready; to this I attach a long spout, so that the room is soon filled with steam. This ensures my birds drying well; it also keeps the air moist.

Many writers recommend washing birds in the day time, but being myself a working man, I like to do mine at night, and have got quite used to it. I have always kept my birds in the lightest part of the room, placing a lamp in front of them. I have always left them in this room through the night, and have never been disappointed with them in the morning.

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Changes of Habit Among Birds.

Some of us who have taken an interest in Nature's subjects for a number of years, and have especially watched the doings of the birds in their play, as well as in their more serious avocations, cannot but notice from time to time how many of the different species of our wild birds gradually change their habits and modes of living. This is particularly the case in regard to the food which they consume. It is admitted by all careful observants of them that both the Rook and the Starling are much more mischievous in their ways and destructive in their habits than was formerly the case. How this happens may be open to question, but to the writer it is undoubtedly due to the increase in the number of birds and the enlargement of bird life, and to the strenuous struggle which these and others have for existence. A certain species of birds increases in number beyond that which the particular district in which they abound can support, and in consequence these birds are driven through sheer want to the consumption of foods somewhat foreign to their natures. The acquired taste oftentimes becomes a habit, and the species gradually drifts into other methods and ways. This, to the writer, appears the only practical solution to what is undoubtedly a strange conditions of things.

The Rain Bird.

When the cry of the Woodpecker is heard through the woods, it is supposed to foretell rain. So universal is this belief, that in some districts it is called the "Rain Bird." Many other birds might with equal truth be so named, for to sing before a change in the weather is a common occurrence with some.

The Swiftest Swift.

The Needle-tailed Swift, a bird added to the British list on the strength of two specimens only, is probably the swiftest bird on the wing. It is an Asiatic species, but its nest and eggs are unknown, although it is supposed to breed in Tibet, that land of mystery, whose natural history is still to be thoroughly probed and recorded.

Watching for Strange Birds.

Now the autumn is approaching and young birds are beginning to wander from their homes, bird lovers should keep a sharp look-out in their gardens, and when taking their daily walks, for any strange birds that may put in an appearance. All birds are on the move now, and we are at any time likely to see a feathered creature, unknown before in our several districts.

The Cuckoo and Its Eggs.

We have had from time to time proof of the Cuckoo's depositing an egg upon the ground, taking it in its beak and dropping it into the selected nest of some smaller bird. This is, no doubt, the usual procedure; in some cases it must be so, or the egg could never be placed in the nests in which they are found, which are too small to hold the parent bird. But one sometimes wonders if, under favourable circumstances, the Cuckoo does not lay the egg direct into the nest. The writer has heard of two cases where the bird has been detected upon the structure, and he has heard of one case of its being actually caught there; but as no egg was laid, he thought it was disturbed too early, and had not had time to do so.

Birds in Fruit Districts.

Innumerable caterpillars among the fruit trees in Kent have caused the growers to seriously consider the position of our wild birds, and the influence they have upon the fruit crop. The warfare against bird life in the guise of so-called "Sparrow clubs" has almost decimated some districts, and it is contended by the more thoughtful growers that this wholesale destruction is the cause of this plague of noxious insects. The difficulty appears to be in discriminating between the useful and the destructive birds; to the members of a "Sparrow club" all birds are Sparrows, and when one considers that about three-fourths of our wild birds are insect eaters, the harm done by indiscriminate slaughter of birds must be very great.

AVIARIES, BIRD ROOMS AND CAGES.

This Special Handbook is written by that well-known fancier Mr. H. Norman ("Cage Birds" Artist-in-chief) who has illustrated it with a wealth of helpful drawings. It also contains Ten Lovely Full-page Photographic Plates.

It is a practical guide which must be on every bird-lover's bookshelf who desires to thoroughly understand the proper Building, Fitting and Management of Aviaries, Bird-rooms and Cages.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

W. RUDD, THE Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

THE THING

that isn't what it seems finds no place with me. I do not sell you American cotton netting and call it thread, nor jute lines for hemp. Everything I sell is guaranteed to be exactly as described and advertised, and is sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless perfectly satisfactory to you your money is promptly refunded in full without question or comment. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾-inch mesh thread, 3 yards long, 4/-; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9½-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all are actually 5½ feet deep and strike 4 feet. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up complete with birch stave poles, birch pegs, and Russian hemp lines, with everything complete ready for immediate setting. Sparrow nets fitted complete on 19 ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; ditto on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and best on the market, and are guaranteed to catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. Mr. Jeffreys, the well-known Nightingale expert, and winner of CAGE BIRDS' recent essay competition, says: "I find your net traps the best I can get, and I always use them for Softbill catching." Loose netting, exactly same as my clap nets are made from, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep 3d. yard, 9 feet deep 4d. yard, post free. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. Round or square topped call cages, as supplied to hundreds of catchers and dealers; my price 3d. each, 2/6 dozen. Genuine Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made; does not run in sun nor freeze in winter, and will hold a Hawk or Rook on hottest day in summer; ½-lb. 6d., ¼-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Solid hemp pull lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, carriage paid. These lines are specially spun and finished without snarl or hank twist, and are strong enough for boat lines. See following few testimonials; thousands more open for inspection any time. "Lower Hooe, near Plymouth, August 16th.—Sir, —Please send ¼-lb. birdlime, as I had fine results from using your lime last season.—Yours, H. Burridge." "13, Pump-st., Nottingham, August 18th.—Sir,—Received pull line safe, and am very pleased with it and your way of doing business.—Yours, Mr. Harrison (48 years a Linnet catcher)." "Garth View, Builth Wells, August 10th.—Sir,—Please send ¼-lb. birdlime. A friend of mine will want some after he sees this, as we cannot get any good lime anywhere.—Yours, John Hyde." "10, St. George's-passage, Kent-st., Portsea.—Sir,—Please send following loose netting for clap nets. I had some from you two years ago which is just as good now as the day I had it, and I think it marvellous value for the money.—Yours, J. Devine." Mr. Gubley, the well-known catcher of Holbeach, says: "Please send following nets, as your netting is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS, in commenting on netting and lines used in making my nets, says: "They are of the very best quality, and nets made from such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users and stand a great amount of wear and tear." Everything required by catchers kept in stock. Please send stamp for full printed list and sample of netting, and compare sizes, quality, and prices with those of other makers. One trial solicited. See British Bird column for further advert.

I hope to give satisfaction to everyone. Write to me and you will find me straightforward and honest. No fancy prices, nor yet hens for cocks.—P. Brade, Bird Stores, 89, Hammond-st., Preston, Lancs.

now has a few house-moulted cock Linnets, singing grand with their wings down, and as loud as Larks; three splendid cock Linnets, on full song, 5/- each; four more, nearly as good, 4/- each; seven more, singing lovely, 3/- each; the above birds would suit contest singer or catcher; a few more, 2/6 each, been used catching. The above birds are not fresh caught rubbish, but birds that are honestly worth double. Linnets, Linnets; the best songsters in England, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; dealers to the trade, 3/- dozen; honest dealing and satisfaction guaranteed.—Horace Coote, 64, Hitchin-rd., Luton.

ENGLISH GOLDFINCHES.

WE have the largest stock of these beautiful birds in the kingdom at prices that cannot be equalled (neither by Linnet kings, lark kings, or any such clap-trap royalty; our prices for cock Goldfinches, all on hard seed, is 1/6 each, or three for 4/-, 12/- per dozen, or specially selected cocks at 14/- per dozen; hens 6/- per dozen; splendid white-legged cock Goldfinches 2/6 and 3/6 each; all guaranteed and sent on approval. We have been patronised by English royalty.—Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk-rd., Preston.

FRED ALLEN "THE HUMAN LINNET."

I have without doubt the finest young cock Linnets ever seen, 1/- and 1/6 each; real beauties, impossible to get better. Look at this bargain: Cock Linnet, singing beautifully, taught by myself, with cage, instructions how to feed, and the secret how to make them sing at one another with wings down, 2/6 lot. I defy any dealer to send better quality out than these at double the price. Everybody welcome to hear them pouring out classical notes. To show fanciers; I have a few big, fine cock Linnets, extraordinary good colour, very tame, 1/6 each, sure winners. If not as represented, will honestly return cash. Send to me if you want a good Linnet and advice, as there is not a man in England can teach you more about a Linnet than what I can. Note, when dealing with me I give seven full days approval; cash or deposit; state wants.—Fred Allen, Bird Specialist, The Aviaries, 13, Granville-place, Lincoln-rd., Leeds.

The Only Linnet King in England. I sell more Linnets than all other Kings put together.

I will wager I have sold more Winners at open shows than any man alive. Send for list of Testimonials.

Real Lancashire Cock Linnets.

Real beauties, and all as fat as butter, not just come from the field and packed right away same as most bird catchers do. Really, you can't blame them; they have to work from hand to mouth. Send to the old reliable firm of 30 years' standing, and all packed by myself and satisfaction guaranteed. Beautiful 1908 cock Linnets, all on seed, price 8d., 10d., and 1/-, three 1/9, six, 2/3, twelve 4/-; some likely specimens for moulting out winners, 1/6 and 2/- each. Established 1879. Sandiford, Bird Specialist and Judge, Preston, Lancs. Telephone 440.

GOLDFINCHES, LINNETS AND MULES.

Notice, I do not advertise what I have not got, or what I expect to get. THE LINNET MARKET.

Readers will notice nearly everyone having a few Linnets for sale are calling themselves Linnet Kings, and pretend they have the largest stock and best birds in the world just because they want to obtain the highest prices. I do not pretend to call myself a Linnet King, but I have two large shops in main thoroughfares, well stocked with Linnets and cages of the very same kind as advertised by so-called Linnet Kings at more than double my prices. Neither am I a bird catcher, that sends away newly-caught birds. Ours are grand healthy Linnets, and some make best singers in the world; prices 6d., 9d., 1/-, and 1/6 each, travelling cage 3d. If you want a nice songster, we have a splendid lot you can select from. Call or write. Birds sent on approval; trade supplied. Alight Plumstead Station. Trams pass the shops.—J. Thorn, 37, Plumstead-rd., and 311, High-st., Plumstead, S.E. Telephone, 365 Woolwich.

MATTHEWS,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED LINNET KING.

Exhibitors, Mule Breeders, Contest Singers.—I don't want audacious or ridiculous prices, nor do I advertise the champion if I am not the champion, but I say I am one of the largest Linnet fanciers and trainers in the world; also I occupy the largest stone buildings in England, specially built for training, selecting, etc., I have the largest stock in the world, bar none. Contradiction defied. Don't be gulled. The only man that sends out on seven days' approval, year round. Read CAGE BIRDS for proof. Send you cash to the editor; your orders to me. That is all I want. Linnets, Linnets. Giant's well marked and pencilled like Thrushes, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6; also over 300 trained under my famous old champions, singing well, 1/6, 2/- each, with singing cage, packet of seed, book of instructions, 3/- lot; four packets seed, 1/-, 7lbs. 2/6. A few Linnets, grand catchers, used to net, 2/6 each. Goldfinches, Goldfinches, Peartree Goldfinches, over 500 in stock. Have a grand lot of large giant bulldogs, well buttoned, nicely mooned, good tannings, with beautiful cut blazes, open winners, at 2/6 and 3/-; few exceptional, cannot be equalled, like Russians, 3/6 each, a few old catchers, used to nets, sure stoppers, 2/6; giant yellow Greenfinches, 1/- each; massive Redpolls, like foreigners, well laced, 1/- each; grand Yellowhammers, 1/-; also double number of my special Linnet and Lark Fancier Guide, 1/3; post free; or any kind of British you require; guaranteed on seven days' approval; cash or deposit. Gentlemen,—Read what others say. Sept. 2nd, 1908, 89, North Glencraig, by Lochgelly, Fife.—Sir,—Send me the following birds at once. The Linnet I got from you last year I won first prize at Whitburn Open Show, vhc at Bathgate, 32 in the class. He is a gem. Wishing you every success.—From Mr. Brown to Matthews, Linnet King. Cash or deposit.—Matthews, Bird Specialist, Hyde, Chesbire.

HAVE YOU NOTICED

that all birds I send out are sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or on CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, on the distinct understanding that your money is returned in full if birds fail to prove entirely satisfactory. There is no dodging or unmentioned conditions about my method, you return birds, and I promptly and cheerfully return full cash—see? I claim to be the originator of this system in connection with wild birds, and have never traded under any other conditions during the whole 18 years of my business career. Grand lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 6/6, 12 12/-; specially selected larger cocks for show or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call-bird regularly, 3/6; splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in pink of health, every one warranted a cock, and most of them red-breasted, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; no hen Linnets stocked; young cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; splendid lot young cock Skylarks, in song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each, all very steady, and right sort for making champion songsters; hand-reared cock Larks, that have won contests, and can win again, 20/-, 30/-, and 40/- each; hand-reared cock Song Thrush, singing, 2/6; two-year-old hand-reared Thrush, probably loudest songster extant, but now moulting, 5/-, worth 50/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6; cages of every description in stock; dealers send stamp for full list of sizes and prices. See following few letters:—"194, Chorley Old-road, Bolton, August 10th.—Sir, please send three Linnets. I had one from you last season, which proved a beauty for song. Yours, J. Crane." "19, Coningsby-road, Fir Vale, Sheffield, August 15th.—Sir, received Goldfinch safely, and can assure you it gives every satisfaction. I shall not forget where to place my future orders. Thanking you for selection, yours, H. Nelson." "384, Duke-street, Dennistown, August 8th.—Sir, birds to hand to-day, and all seem to be in good condition. Many thanks. Yours, D. Weatherhead." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, Acklington, August 8th.—Sir, I received all birds in fine condition, and am well pleased with them, for they give every satisfaction. I am really surprised at them, for the money believe me you deal fair. Yours, T. Farrington." "2, Lumley terrace, East Hartlepool, August 5th.—Sir, received Goldfinch, and am quite satisfied. He is a nice bird for the money. Yours, F. Thompson." Hundreds similar letters open for inspection. All birds sold by me are guaranteed exactly as advertised. All are properly netted in Worcestershire by professional catchers employed regularly by me, and all properly on hard seed, and in perfect health and condition before sent out. A perusal of the "Wanted" column of this paper will show that I do not advertise for Goldfinches, etc., from any part of country, and then advertise them for sale as Worcestershire birds. I have more Worcestershire birds through my hands in a season than all other dealers together (denial challenged). If you want genuine cocks for your money, send to me, as I guarantee sex in every instance, and sell cocks as cocks, and hens as hens, not hens for cocks. Established 18 years. See Appliance column for all catchers' appliances.

THE SHOWS.

MORLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The members held their second First Feather Show on August 29th. Considering how late it is, there was a good number of birds staged, and the run for the society's medal promises to be very keen. Points are given at all our shows. Mr. Bottomley was the judge.

AUGHTON.

The Aughton and District Society held their annual show on September 2nd. It was well supported by some sound fanciers, and considering the recent climatic conditions, proved in every way a success. Another year we hope to see a still better show, as the Aughton Committee comprise a genuine lot of gentlemen, worthy of better support and patronage from the fancy in general. Mr. R. Hunter (Ormskirk) judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

YORKS CLEAR AND TK: 1st and 2nd, c., F. Foster, two grand first feather birds, nicely drawn, good length and style; 3rd, hc. R. Gardiner, grand Buff, handicapped by being in moult, otherwise might have won; vhc, W. H. Hurst, very fair bird. NORWICH CLEAR AND TKD.: 1st and 3rd, B. Tasker, a grand yellow leading, splendid type, full of quality, wins well; 3rd, also a good yellow; 2nd, c. F. Foster, marked yellow, also a very fine bird, rather longer than winner; vhc and he, W. Witlington, former very fair buff, good type. CAN. A.O.V.: 1st and special for best bird in section, J. Whimsley, with a grand positioned yellow Belgian, splendid drive, well filled back, very nervy, real gem. 2nd, T. Cave, nice Cinnamon. BRITISH SOFT-BILL: 1st, J. CLUB REPORTS.

WOLVERHAMPTON & DIS. C.B.S.

A special meeting was held at the Swan and Peacock Hotel on August 25th, Mr. F. J. Weaver in the chair. There was a good attendance of members. The chief business was the fixing up of classes for open show, and other show business. It was decided to make a slight alteration in some of the classes. Three classes were added for Border Fancy Canaries and two open classes for novice exhibitors (Norwich and Yorkshire). A vote of thanks to our able chairman brought a very enthusiastic meeting to a close. —F. HOWES, secretary.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent on September 5th, at the Paddington Recreation Ground, in a cricket match versus a team most appropriately named "The Early Birds." Apparently the City members got up too late, for they suffered defeat, their score being 42 as against 105. A number of visitors came to look on, and seemed to find it "good fun." Amongst them we noticed Messrs. Prior, Wheller, H. Davis, J. Hawes, King, Turner, Large, R. J. Pretty, Lazarus, A. W. Curtis, A. C. Burn, W. Prance, Adamthwaite, senr., and Mr. and Mrs. Bassett. The weather, for a wonder, turned out well, and the event was a decided success. The successful bowlers for the City and Suburban side were Messrs. J. Pooley, 4 wickets for 35 runs, and A. Pooley, 3 for 37. Scores:—

NEWPORT AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Meeting held August 29th, when it was decided to hold a members' show about the middle of October, date to be fixed later. Intending members should attend at the Castle Hotel, Commercial street, between eight and ten on the next meeting night September 12th.—J. LINCH, Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held September 2nd; large attendance. Schedule in connection with 30-mile radius show was decided upon. Five additional classes were added, ranking 35 classes in all. A gift class and a special class for Parrots and Parrakeets was allocated. Schedules will be ready for the October meeting. Two new members were added.—C. A. CHARLES, Secretary.

ST. ANDREW'S O.S.

Meeting held in the court room of the Town Hall, September 2nd, Mr. P. Whittet presiding. The members decided to extend the classification in the British and Foreign bird section of their show, and have made application to the S.B.B. and M.C. for their patronage and medals. The following were accepted to judge at the forthcoming show, held in the Town Hall on Saturday, October 3rd:—Messrs. P. McDougall (Edinburgh) and D. Holden (Muirkirk) for the Scotch Fancy section, and Messrs. J. McLay (Kirkintulloch) and A. W. Watson (Leith), secretary to the S.B.B. and M.C., for the Norwich, Border, Mule, British, and Foreign Bird section. Next meeting fixed for September 9th.—A. B. MACINTYRE.

EDINBURGH WESTERN O.S.

Meeting held in Reigo-street Hall, on Sept. 3rd, the President, Mr. Ballantine, in the chair. Business regarding show was gone into, after which a very interesting exhibition of hand-washing was given by Mr. W. Dunn (Portobello), who proved himself an expert at the business by the smart way he handled the birds. One of the subjects, a four-year-old Scotch Fancy, looked as if it was going to die, but it pulled through much the better for the tubbing. Mr. Dunn explained to the members his method of hand-washing. He said that the birds must be handled quickly and carefully, so that they would not get cold. Various questions regarding temperature of the water, kind of soap to use, and how to dry the birds after washing were asked. Mr. Dunn answered giving every detail. He said he would be only too pleased to assist any fancier in want of knowledge about Canaries and their management. The President then called a vote of thanks to Mr. Dunn for his kindness, which was heartily responded to. Mr. Dunn replied that he would be pleased to give the Western another exhibition at a future date.—JOHN THOMSON, Sec.

KENT FUR AND FEATHER UNION.

Annual general meeting held at Sittingbourne, September 2nd, when delegates from Sheerness, Canterbury, and Sittingbourne were present, and Mr. H. H. Ambrose took the chair. The Hon. Sec. read the balance-sheet, shewing liabilities of £11 2s. 7d. He read a circular letter and stated he had sent out 150 copies to the Secretaries of Kentish Societies and the principal fanciers, but had not received a single reply. As it appears futile to try to carry on the Union with the support accorded it, he moved that the Union be wound up and the Challenge Cups sold to meet the liabilities, and that the meeting be adjourned to this night four weeks at the same place to confirm it. This was seconded by Mr. Coppins, and carried. The selling prices of Cups and plinths were fixed as follows:—Poultry, Pigeons and Rabbits, £3 3s. each; Bantam Cup, £1 11s. 6d. and CAGE BIRDS Cup, £2 2s. The Cups being quite plain and in good condition, it was thought no difficulty would arise in disposing of them at these prices. The balance-sheet as read was adopted and the meeting adjourned till 30th inst. at 7 p.m.—W. J. DUFF, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH NORWICH P. C. C.

Committee meeting held in Good Templar's Hall, 122, Ingram-street, Glasgow, on Sept. 5th, Mr. Winter, president, in the chair. Others present being Messrs. A. Chalmers, J. Ferguson, W. G. Muir, A. Sloan, J. Smeaton, J. Young and secretary. The minutes of previous meeting having been adopted, final arrangements were made for the International Contest to be held at Glasgow on 13th and 14th November. The Club Show was fixed to be held in conjunction with Scottish National on 31st December and 1st January, and the club's patronage was granted to the undernoted shows:—Broughty Ferry, Oct. 10th; City of Glasgow, Oct. 16th and 17th; Dysart, Oct. 31st; Glasgow and West of Scotland, Nov. 13th and 14th; Perth, Nov. 21st; City of Dundee, Nov. 28th; Kilmarnock, Dec. 4th and 5th; Broxburn, Dec. 19th; Aberdeen, Dec. 25th and 26th; Scottish National, Dec. 31st and 1st Jan. Members must show in club cages, otherwise they will be debarred from competing for club prizes. The membership list closes on 1st October, and members whose subscriptions are unpaid after that date will be struck off the roll. I take this opportunity of thanking those members who have contributed to the special prize fund, and hereby appeal to all others to assist in meeting the expenses to be incurred in connection with the contest and club show.—J. BROWN, Sec.

GUISBORO' & DIST. PRIORY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, September 7th, Mr. Cook in the chair. The members were supplied with slips of paper to write any question in connection with the Fancy, and the slips were then placed in a hat and well shaken up. Our worthy chairman led the way with an excellent answer on the results of hot and cool pepper. Mr. Wilson followed on the diseases of birds, and submitted some of his well-tried and beneficial recipes for different ailments. A question on the quality of feather was answered by the secretary. Mr. Hood had a rather difficult question before him: Why should one bird be so much quicker through the moult than its own brothers and sisters, all flying together? Many of us have witnessed this, but cannot account for it. Another question was: What causes flight feathers and tail in some birds to be perforated? Some thought it the work of red-mite, others moths. Mr. Graham gave us an ideal answer to a question on the exhibition Bullfinch. An original recipe for a soft food without egg was given by Mr. Starling. Mr. Jobling, whom we look up to as the father of the society, he having been a great exhibitor and judge many years ago, and still keen as a fancier, drew: What can be done to interest the members and young fanciers at our monthly meetings? Mr. Jones suitably answering: By having such meetings as these. Mr. Knaggs very ably answered a question relating to the latter part of the never-to-be-forgotten "ramble" on Whit Monday. It was decided to hold a table show of birds at the next meeting, October 5th, and for our worthy friend, Mr. Jobling, to open a discussion. This brought the most enjoyable meeting the society has ever had to a close.—G. ATKINSON, Hon. Sec.:

IN THE COURTS.

"AMATEUR" CATCHERS IN TROUBLE AT NEWPORT.

Unusual cases were heard at Newport, on September 5th, says the "South Wales Argus," when David Holland, of Henry Street, and E. Taylor, of Albany St., were summoned.

Inspector Easdown, of the R.S.P.C.A., stated that he was in an open space at the back of the Gasworks when he saw defendants engaged in catching birds with nets. Defendants had a bird tied down to the ground by a piece of string attached to a small piece of stick stuck into the earth. The piece of string was 20 yards long, but the bird could not rise more than three feet in the air. The idea was, by pulling the string, to make the bird rise into the air, flap its wings, and thus decoy other birds into the net. Witness kept observation of defendants' movements for some time, and saw the string pulled on several occasions. Eventually the defendants threw the bird into some thistles, and on witness speaking to them they denied that they used the bird or the string for the purpose which witness had named. Witness picked up the bird and found it was in a very exhausted condition. The bird died in his hand. The string was tied very tightly around its body, the wings were badly cut, and blood was flowing freely. Defendants told witness that they had no work to do that day, and they did it for a bit of sport.

The Chairman: You have been guilty of much cruelty. It was simply a piece of idleness, and you obviously intended to catch the birds to sell them. You will be fined 20s. each, and if you come here again for the same thing you will be dealt with severely.

Richard Nation, of Lewis Street, Newport, was also summoned for causing unnecessary suffering to a Linnet while in captivity.

Inspector Easdown saw Nation with two decoy birds under a net. One of them was a Linnet, a wild bird. This he pulled up and down with a string in the same way as was done in the previous case. The bird was very exhausted, but Nation, when asked if he did not consider it was cruelty, replied, "We are allowed to do this by Act of Parliament." He afterwards stated that he had no clothes to go away with, and so he came out on Sunday morning to catch birds for a bit of sport.

Defendant was fined 20s., the Chairman (Mr. Cordey) advising him to give up his "sport."

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

*A Fierce Combat.

While fishing at one of the locks near Fort Augustus, a gentleman witnessed a remarkable fight. My attention, he says, was first drawn to it by hearing a series of discordant screeches. On turning round I was surprised to see an encounter between a Kestrel and a cock Grouse. The Hawk had swooped down to get at one of the young Grouse. The cock Grouse rose from the ground and attacked the Kestrel with great ferocity. This was renewed five times, when the Hawk, apparently having had enough of the fight, flew away. Sent by Lily Yates (age 10), 15, Whalley Street, Burnley, Lancs.

A Parrot's Huge Joke.

A nursemaid at Sheffield recently complained that she had a difficulty with a Parrot. Polly's cage was in the nursery, and she had learned to imitate baby's cry with wonderful accuracy. One afternoon the baby's mother came running into the nursery because she heard the wailing cry of not one but of two babies. Baby was crying as though his heart would break, and "Polly" on the perch in the cage was sobbing a doleful accompaniment, while nurse alternately soothed the one and scolded the other.—Sent by J. Largo (age 13), Home Farm Cottage, Keele, Staffs.

*A Tame Blackbird.

I had a young Blackbird the season before last, so I thought I would try and tame it. Just before it was old enough to fly, I would take it down the garden on my finger, and by this means I got it so tame that I could leave the cage door open and let the bird have its freedom. And when it saw another bird it would fly to the house-top; but I only had to call and it would come.—Sent by E. Hubbard, 4, Penywain Street, Wainfelin, Pontypool.

TWITTERINGS.

Kelso show of cage birds, etc., has been fixed for Wednesday, October 21st, writes Mr. Tulloch C. Bennet.

The address of the secretary of the Sale Open O.S., Mr. G. F. Hardcastle, is now 19, Cross Street, Ashton-on-Mersey.

The balance-sheet of the City and Suburban Society's Young Bird Show, to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. Wynn, is a very satisfactory one, there being a profit of £1 7s. 6d.

I have removed, writes Mr. J. A. Taylor, from Northdale Road, to 36, Aireville Road, Frizinghall, Bradford, where I have larger and more convenient premises.

The Wibsey C.B.S. members are "rambling" over Ogden Moor on Sunday next, September 13th (start at 1 o'clock from Horton Bank Top), and friends are cordially invited to join in the outing.

I have removed from 12, Avon Street, Chorlton-on-Medlock, to 8, Bankfield Avenue, Longsight, writes Mr. J. Steele, where I shall have a very superior bird-room to the one possessed at the old address.

At Crowthorne show, held September 2nd, in the Recreation Ground, Mr. E. Fulbrook took all the prizes in the classes for cage birds, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, extra 3rd, vhc., hc., and c. Mr. Billett judged.

Mrs. Gray, of Rothsay Road, Bedford, has again been successful, we hear, in rearing a nest of three young Bullfinches in her aviary. All the youngsters are doing well. It is an interesting fact that the parent cock bird is six years old.

Trade Notice.—Ramsden's trade premises will be closed for 8 days from Wednesday next, September 16th, during which time no orders requiring packing can be executed. Small orders by post will be sent out by my locum as usual.—J. W. Ramsden. (ADVT).

At a meeting of the Bo'ness and Dis. O.S., writes Mr. Findlay McGillivray, the sec. (Ganzo Road, Chance, Bo'ness, N.B.), held on September 2nd, it was decided that all fanciers wishing to become members can do so by paying 3s. not later than the end of September.

All prize money in connection with Troon and Lonas show held on 29th August has been paid, writes Mr. J. Ferguson, the secretary. A general meeting will be held on Friday evening first, at 8 o'clock, in the Unionist Hall Restaurant, to lay before the members a balance-sheet, which I am pleased to say shows a balance on the right side, to cheer us on our way for the coming season. A number of prize lists left over from show can be sent on application, for 3d. post free.

I have taken CAGE BIRDS regularly for over six years, and find it a most useful journal for all bird lovers; in fact, I consider that no bird-keeper can be up-to-date without it. I wish it every success.—ALF. ROWLES (Peterborough).

The block which CAGE BIRDS so kindly lent our society to illustrate the book of rules has been highly spoken of as being a model of a Norwich Plainhead, writes Mr. O. Mitchell, hon. sec. of the Open Norwich Plainhead C.C.

At the next meeting of the London and Provincial O.S., to be held at "The Raglan," Aldersgate Street, E.C., on Thursday, September 17th, at 8 o'clock, writes Mr. H. Lambert Brown, the hon. sec., a paper will be given by Mr. H. J. Hawes, on "Bird Catching and Snaring" (illustrated). This promises to be specially interesting, and a large attendance is hoped for. All fanciers are welcome.

Readers on the lookout for a high-class reliable cycle, at an extremely moderate price, should give the circular of the Runwell Cycle Co. (25, Parade, Birmingham), which will be found enclosed with this issue, their careful consideration. Good second-hand cycles at almost giving-away prices can also be obtained from the same firm, while they make a speciality of tyres, saddles, bells, lamps, and all accessories, in every case the price being cut to the lowest possible figure in the purchaser's favour.

The arrangements for the Dulwich O.S. outing are now complete, write Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, the hon. secs. The party will assemble on Sunday next, September 13th, at East Dulwich Station (Grove Vale, S.E.) and entrain for Amberley (Sussex), at 8 a.m., and will visit the surrounding district of Arundel. Hot lunch and tea will be provided. Any friend desirous of joining the party must communicate with us at once to 4, St. Aidans Road, E. Dulwich. Tickets 5s. 6d. each. The party will be conducted by Mr. J. F. Lovesy, and will arrive back at 8 p.m.

OBITUARY.

I am very sorry to inform you, writes Mr. W. Mundell, that Mr. James Thornton, of Sandy Lane, Allerton, Bradford, lost his wife on September 2nd, from heart failure, after an illness of twelve months. I feel sure all fanciers will sympathise with him in his bereavement, and especially his many friends among the breeders of Yorkshire Canaries.

It is with deep regret that I have to record the death of Mrs. Senior, wife of Mr. Swales Senior, one of the oldest members of Blackburn Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. H. Fairclough. It must have come as a great blow, as they have only just got settled in their new home, and on behalf of our members. I wish to convey our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Miss Senior in their bereavement. The funeral took place on September 9th.

MR. A. VOLUME (Kirriemuir).

I regret to record the death of a well-known and greatly respected fancier, Mr. A. Volume, of Kirriemuir, on August 28th, writes Mr. A. W. Watson. His death was very sudden and unexpected, and his wife only predeceased him 15 months ago. He was a great Hybrid breeder, also of Cinnamon and light Mules, and an expert at the keeping of British birds. He caught most of his own Hybrid pairs. Most of the birds bred by him have adorned the shows both in Scotland and England, and brought great credit to their owners. His death will come as a surprise to most fanciers, as he was going about to the last. We grieve for those left behind—a young family, some even at school. His funeral was well attended by fanciers from far and near. We send out our deepest sympathy to the orphans left behind. We have lost a true fancier, and they one of the best of parents.

All communications for Queensbury C.B.S. must be addressed, writes Mr. Wilton Jagger, to me at 6, California Row, Mountain, Queensbury, Bradford, as Mr. S. Jagger has resigned the secretaryship and I have taken that office.

Many thanks indeed for the honour you have bestowed upon me by placing the portrait of my Unflighted Buff Norwich in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. F. Issott (Preston). Imagine my surprise when I arrived at my work at 6 a.m., when a fellow shop-mate of mine, a keen fancier, too, informed me of the honour! I really must admit I felt a very proud man. I have been a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since the first number, and I have gained some very valuable information from it. Therefore permit me to wish it a long continuation of success.

The Palace Record.—At the last Palace Show all the winners of the great "CAGE BIRDS" contest were birds that had been moulted on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Note also that 30 First Prizes, 31 Second Prizes, 27 Third Prizes, 33 Fourth Prizes, 33 Very Highly Commended, 23 Highly Commended, 20 Commended, and scores of special prizes, including championship Diploma for best Yorkshire, and Championship Diploma for best Lizard were awarded to birds fed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Also note that all the 1st prize winners in the Yorkshire Canary Clubs' Competitions for season 1907-8 fed their birds on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Above facts easily proved by reference to catalogues, or CAGE BIRDS' reports. What a record. Buy the pepper with the record and full guarantee of purity. Prices, Tasteless, 2s. lb., 5 lbs. 7s. 6d., 22 lbs. 30s.; Hot Nutful, 3s. lb. All post or carriage paid.—J. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London. (ADVT.)

Tick This Off.

A correspondent propounds the following:—

Why does the Ticked question resemble the suffragettes?

Cinnamon-marked Yorks C.C.

The Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire Canary Club has just issued its Year Book for the season 1908-9. It is a very nicely-produced booklet, and shows the society to be in a sound, flourishing condition, the list of members being an exceptionally strong one. The rules of the club and particulars of its competitions will be found within its covers. The officials are to be congratulated on the present highly satisfactory state of the club, and especially so the hon. secretary, Mr. R. Garnett (17, Woodville Terrace, Windhill, Shipley), who will be pleased to enlist any lover of the variety into its ranks.

Highly Educated.

The birdy meeting being over, they had adjourned to the bar.

"I had a Parrot once," said the thin fancier, impressively, "that could repeat the first act of Hamlet right through, without mistake or break."

There was a painful silence.

Then the fat fancier was heard to remark: "I had a Parrot once which could not speak a word."

"That's nothing," snapped the other.

"Wait a minute," was the reply; "he could talk in the deaf and dumb alphabet to perfection."

Hard Lines for Hartlepool.

It is with regret we have to inform you, write Messrs. Williams and Easby, hon. secs. Hartlepool C.B.S., that at our meeting held September 2nd we were forced, owing to the distress in the town and district, to cancel our two-days' show, which we intended holding on December 4th and 5th next. But we passed a resolution that we would hold a small open show of fourteen classes, but with no members' classes. The members will have to show in the open classes provided at a reduced fee. This show will be held on December 5th. We are not having any schedule printed, but will advertise the classes in CAGE BIRDS, from which intended exhibitors can enter. We are sorry to do this; but we are not altogether downhearted. We hope and trust that trade will brighten next year; then we will have a show second to none in the north. The will is good.

A Cardiff Fancier's Misfortune.

It is with great regret I have to inform you, writes Mr. W. S. Negus, sec., Cardiff and Dis. C.B.S., that our highly esteemed friend and member, Mr. Fryer, of Bridge Street, Cardiff, was taken suddenly ill on Easter Monday last, suffering from a stroke on his right side, and as the prospects of his recovering sufficiently to enable him to take an active part in his hobby and the Fancy again are very remote, it is by his special request that I have to advise you of his intention to retire. He is well known to the Fancy as being an honest exhibitor for many years, and has put down many a good one (of the Yorkshire variety) on the show bench. I am sure, therefore, we are all sorry to hear of his physical breakdown, and extend our sympathy to both himself and his family, at the same time trusting that he may soon be restored to health again. In consequence of the kindly interest he has always shown in the Cardiff Society we have made Mr. Fryer an honorary life member and vice-president.

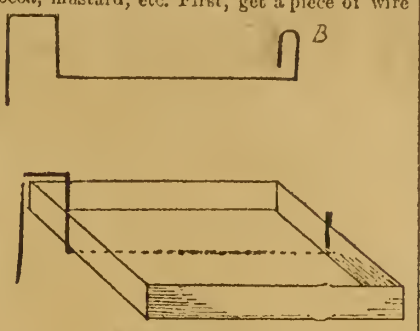
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

A "TIT-BIT" HOLDER.

Sent by G. T. Mills, Finsbury Terrace, High Street, Irthlingborough, Wellingborough.

I enclose a sketch of my home-made holder for those seeds I wish to give to my birds separate from their stock mixture. I make them out of lids from tins, such as coffee, cocoa, mustard, etc. First, get a piece of wire and bend it as seen in Fig. 1. Then place the lid length-wise, with lip under B. Then close "B" tightly over the lip. If desired one or two pieces of wood can be cut to fit into the lid, to give one or more divisions. When finished you have a holder you can hang anywhere on the fronts of cages.—G. T. MILLS.

No. 239.

A BOTTLE GREEN-FOOD HOLDER.

Sent by A. H. Cotton, 16, Thackeray Road, Portswood, Southampton.

I am sending a rough sketch of a method for holding groundsel and similar green food. Get a small bottle, about 3½ inches high and about ½ inch wide at the neck. Then get a piece of short wire and bend it to the shape "B." Put the wire round the bottle and put the pieces "D" between the cage wires as seen in the sketch. Then half fill the bottle with water, get your root of groundsel, and push through the neck of the bottle until it touches the water. This will keep it fresh and eatable.—A. H. COTTON.

Leigh Open Show Abandoned.

The Leigh and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. R. H. Davies, the sec., have been obliged to abandon their annual open show, which was fixed for October 23rd and 24th. Our annual members' show will be held on November 28th and 29th. Our society meeting nights are held every alternate Tuesday (next, September 15th) at Railway Hotel, Leigh, at 7.30 p.m. All intending members and friends invited.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Yorkshire Loose in Bowels.

"Yorkie."—You should first see that your seeds are sweet and good. Keep cage very clean and strew the floor with sawdust instead of sand, which you should burn when cleaned out of the cage. Of course, you must supply grit in some small receptacle on the cage bottom, and a piece of cuttlefish bone stuck in the wires will be useful. Continue giving the staple diet of Canary seed, but discontinue mixed seed, giving instead a small teaspoonful of dry summer rape twice a week, half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, a small piece of bread dipped in milk, and a salt-spoonful of maw sprinkled over whilst the bird is moulting, three times a week. Give these extra items alternately so that the bird will get a different one each day. Withhold green-food until the bowels are in their proper condition. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn two consecutive days, and after that five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Building Aviary, etc.

Novice.—The cause of all your young Canaries dying was most likely that the parents were bad feeders. I hardly think your theory as to the gas being the cause is correct. If you can refer to back numbers you will find numerous replies during the breeding season giving detailed instructions for dealing with this trouble. In building your proposed aviary outside you should divide it into two portions, and make one part, which should not be less than one-third of the whole, a closed-in, weather-proof structure, with glass and wire windows on separate frames, so that the glass windows can be thrown wide open, or even removed, in fair settled weather, leaving the spaces protected only by the wire mesh. A door should also be provided large enough to give you easy access to the interior. This also should be provided with a supplementary wire door on a separate frame. An open space fitted with a sliding shutter should give the birds free access to the open wire portion. This latter should be provided with a covered roof to throw off the rain, and keep the floor of the aviary dry and sweet. As regards placing the birds out you must not attempt this now the birds are beginning to moult, seeing they have been kept indoors all the year. It will be best to moult them off early in a comfortable place, and keep them through the winter in a cold room, and place them out about the end of next May. You may, of course, have time to get a nest of young from each indoors, before the weather is fit to turn them out next spring.

Plucking and Moulting.

"Budding St. John."—Maybe your nom de plume is meant as a kind of compliment, in which case I thank you, and right heartily wish you luck and the fulfilment of your desire. If the feathers of the young were plucked when nearly or quite full grown, after the young had left the nest, they will probably not be renewed again this moulting time; but if they were plucked in the nest whilst immature they will be moulted again now. The strain of moulting and feeding young may be too much for a hen that is in any way weak or delicate, and will doubtless cause the moult to be much more protracted than it otherwise would have been. You should have stopped her breeding before this, but as you did not do so your best plan is to return the cock as you have done, and as soon as the young begin to come out of the nest, if the cock feeds them well remove the hen, and leave the young to be finished off by him.

Is It a Freak?

Embarrasse.—There is undoubtedly something wrong with your treatment, but your concern about the bird at three months appearing no bigger than when a month old is probably misplaced, as, beyond the completion of the growth of the feathers, which is most noticeable in the flights and tail, there is not really always a striking difference in size at these ages. Provided a bird has been well fed and cared for by good parents, it is to all appearances almost as large in bulk of body at a month old as it is at any time until after the moult is over, when it usually makes up well in substance. But the behaviour of your bird shows there is something radically wrong with it. Treat it as follows for a few weeks, and if it does not rapidly improve write again. Give an unlimited supply of Canary seed as a staple diet. In a separate vessel give it a small teaspoonful of rape seed twice a week, and just a pinch of hemp seed on two other days, and every second day give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed with it. Slightly sprinkle the latter with maw seed if the bird does not seem to eat it freely without. Give a very small piece of green-stuff, or a few plantain stalks, every third day. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and fifteen drops of whiskey, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. After the first week discontinue the salts mixture and give twelve drops of chemical food instead, and continue giving the chemical food and acid alternately for another week or fortnight as may appear necessary. Treat the other bird that is puffy the same as above, but give the medicines for only half the length of time mentioned.

Keeps on Sneezing.

A. Slade.—I suspect the bird has been exposed to a draught, or to some exceptional change of temperature. You must take proper care that these causes are avoided, and keep the bird now in a fairly warm place where there is no very great change of temperature; but, at the same time, do not go to an extreme and overheat it. In addition to its present staple diet give half a teaspoonful of scalded rape twice a week, and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry on it three times a week. Give a scrap of green-food daily. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, every second day for a week. Give this medicine on the days when you are not giving the sponge cake and sherry. Discontinue the scalded rape, sherry, and liquid medicine, as soon as the bird is quite well.

Plucking Feathers.

E. Pritchard.—The cause of your bird plucking his feathers is probably that he is infested with red-mites. Examine the joints and cracks about the cage very carefully, probing them with a pin, if necessary, and if any mites are discovered, thoroughly overhaul the cage and eradicate them, and the trouble will cease. If no mites are found then you are probably feeding the bird incorrectly so that its blood is overheated; but as you say nothing on this point you had better write again and say how you feed and treat it. Meantime give it as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week or so, and give the bird a tepid bath daily in which a few quassia chips have been soaked.

A Wheezy Glutton.

Paradox.—It is quite likely that the wheezy condition of the hen is due to her being a glutton, as you term it, and in an excessively fat condition. If you stint the supply of food to a sufficient quantity for a day's consumption you must be careful to avoid bringing about a catastrophe by forgetting to give its daily dole. A small teaspoonful of Canary seed daily would be quite sufficient. In addition to this give just a pinch of dry rape seed twice a week, and a little green-food daily. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, ten drops of glycerine, and twenty drops of whiskey every second day for a week, and after that give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for another week.

Is it Fever?

H.R.—I hardly think it is fever that your birds died from, although it would be a wise precaution to separate the other three until you are certain—say, for a fortnight or three weeks—and if they remain quite well for that time you may return them to the others. The real cause is much more likely to be obstruction of the bowels. Discontinue giving hemp seed for the present, and in addition to the staple diet of Canary seed, give a small teaspoonful of dry rape seed per bird twice a week, and every second day a small piece of bread dipped in milk, and slightly sprinkled over with soft sugar. Discontinue the bread and milk as soon as the birds appear quite well. On the alternate days between giving the bread and milk give a small spray of seedy chickweed, or a few half-ripe plantain stalks. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of glycerine, each day for three days, and after that give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every alternate day for a week.

Crested Cock Hoarse.

Constant Reader.—Many birds become a trifle hoarse just before they cease singing at the commencement of the moult. This may be the case with yours, when no special treatment is necessary beyond taking care that the bird is not exposed to draughts. But if this is not the case, the bird has doubtless been already exposed to draught, or got a chill by some means. See that the possibility of this is avoided in future, withhold cold baths until it is recovered, and keep it in a comfortably warm, but not overheated, temperature. In addition to the staple diet of Canary seed, give it half a teaspoonful of scalded rape twice a week, a pinch of hemp on two other days, and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day. Discontinue the sponge cake as soon as the bird is quite well. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence in each two tablespoonfuls of water daily until the hoarseness has disappeared.

A Shocking Event.

"Alarm."—I cannot say whether your Canary, which has totally ceased singing in consequence of having a terrible fright whilst engaged in vocal performances by the alarm clock going on duly, will ever sing again, but as you say it is a young bird I should think that with judicious management it will certainly do so. There are, however, many cases of this kind where the bird never does get over the shock sufficient to start singing again. Your best course will be to remove him out of earshot of the alarum, into another room where there are folk about pretty frequently, and where he can hear another good, free singing bird. Then he will perhaps forget his fright and resume singing quite naturally when the moult is over. At any rate, he will stand the best chance of doing so under this treatment.

Bashful Singers.

E.L.—It is quite true that one sometimes meets with a bird which will not sing freely in close company with another songster, but such individuals are quite exceptional ones, and you certainly need have no fear of buying a second Canary lest it should stop your present bird singing. The chances are that the presence of the extra bird will rather incite both birds to sing more vigorously than usual, and, perhaps, more vigorously than you care for yourself. Still, if you have any doubt on the point at all it is most easily overcome by keeping the birds in box cages and hanging the cages on the same side of the kitchen. In this position they will not be able to see each other, and will be almost certain to incite each other to sing more instead of less.

Soft Moult and a Proferred Gift.

Jas. Deasley.—I am afraid the cause of your birds dropping into moult after being mated was mainly due to wrong treatment at the time, or during the previous few weeks. If, as I assume, the birds were old ones last spring, I would certainly advise you to get rid of them, and start with a pair or two of healthy young stock next spring. Keep them on a plain wholesome diet through the winter, protect them from chills and draughts, and mate up again about April, as you did before. Before mating, feed them up as you will see advised in our columns at the time. The cock you now have will probably be most useful as a songster to teach young birds, as he is likely to come in song whilst the young are silent from moulting. The age when Canaries get too old to breed may be roughly given as anywhere between two and ten years old. It is all a question of proper management, and the robustness of the birds. Some birds may be utterly worn out in the first or second season; others may breed well for ten years, or even longer. Respecting the cage you have been offered as a gift in which your friend's birds died suddenly, I would say, most emphatically, decline it, with thanks. You may have good cause to rue the day you had it in your room. If your friend does not want to keep it, get him to burn it.

Brevities.

Young Birds Moulting (A.W.).—No, young Canaries bred this year will not cast tail feathers (nor flights) at this moult. They will retain them until the moulting season of 1909. Therefore, if you wish your young bird's cut tail to be reproduced this year there is nothing for it but to pluck out the stumps. Draw each outermost stump with a firm, gentle pull every third or fourth day; then those drawn first should be showing through nicely by the time the last two are drawn.

The Order of the Bath (Learner II.).—Your Canaries may be given the bath as soon as they are able to look after themselves. It is only necessary as a precaution to be careful not to fill it quite as full as you would for the old birds until the young have been away from their parents a little time. Some young ones will begin to bathe in the water given to their parents almost from the day they leave the nest.

A Contentious Green (Yorkshire).—1. If breeding on a fairly large scale, I should consider the bird you describe worth keeping for infusing plenty of natural colour into the stock without getting too near the pure green to obliterate any fair chance of more than a few stray clears or ticked. 2. Yes, it should be colour-fed if it is intended to show it. 3. The class in which it should be shown would depend upon the wording of the schedule. If a class is provided for Greens, it would not be eligible for the heavily-variegated class, and the light feathers would tell against it in conjunction with greens. Its proper place would be in a class for "broken greens," where such a class is provided, or in one worded "green, or heavily-variegated" it would be eligible.

How to Ventilate (Scottie).—I am afraid I cannot quite grip your sketch. Could you make one, no matter how crude, showing the elevation? I cannot tell from the plan whether there exists any structure of any kind at the back or side of the bird-room. The only thing I can suggest from this plan, which is, assuming that there is no such structure, is to place an inlet for fresh air near the floor on each of the two 7-ft. sides that are opposite each other, and about two feet from each end. This will require two inlets on each side. Two similar spaces for the exit of foul and heated air should be placed in the top of each side near the ceiling. If you will manage to make some kind of rough sketch of the erection and send along, I shall be glad to work you out an efficient method for ventilating the room.

Treatment for Hartz Mountain (Bill Battle).—Feed the Roller on a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and give separately twice a week just a pinch of hemp, and three times a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake. Every other day give a scrap of green-food. Keep it free from draught, its cage well cleaned, and strewn with gritty sand, and give a bath three or four times a week. The plan of putting a piece of iron in the water when moulting is quite useless. When nearing the end of the moult, not before, add a small crystal of pure sulphate of iron to the water three times a week, which will supply all the iron required, and in a useful manner. Germans are not colour-fed. If, however, you wish to try feeding it, use tasteless red pepper, as you will see advised in many replies the last few weeks.

Answered by C. E. WESTON.

Concerning Nuthatches.

Young Beginner.—Cock and hen Nuthatches are hard for the beginner to tell, as they are much alike. The hen is generally smaller, and always paler in colour and markings than her mate. The grey-blue of the head, light orange of the breast, and warmer orange of the flanks, are never so pure and so rich in the hen as in the adult male; neither is the black eye-stripe so intense in colour, and so conspicuous. The sexing, you will see, is a matter of comparison. A good sized, good coloured bird can always safely be bought for a male. These birds require a piece of bark fixed at the back of their cage. I always let mine have a perch, too, and they are continually going on to it. They require, to eat, a soft-food mixture such as is given to small insectivorous birds generally, with meal-worms, gentles, small beetles, and other suitable live-foods (live ants' eggs are very much relished). In addition, a few hemp and sunflower seeds should be given daily (especially in winter), with some nuts, cracked, if necessary. My bird likes a little fruit and a few ripe berries, being particularly fond of peeled sweet grapes.

Bullfinch's Dirty Feet.

Miss J. Lloyd.—It is just a little idiosyncrasy of the birds—a thing impossible to account for, and impossible of cure. The same thing happens with many species; some Goldfinches, for instance, never soil their feet or their perches, whereas others kept under precisely the same conditions get their feet clogged with dirt, and perches into a correspondingly dirty mess. This may be said with equal truth of Linnets, Hawfinches—indeed, all of the finches, and many of the insectivorous birds. A number of years ago I exhibited two Bullfinches with considerable success. Both were remarkably tame, yet one always came home with perches, feet, and show-cage generally, in a very dirty state, while the other never soiled feet, plumage or cage. Shall we say that some birds are more "gentlemanly" than others—or more "well-bred," if I may use the phrase—with an inherent dislike to soiling their person, which keeps them off the cage bottom and from contact with whatever dirt the cage may unavoidably contain? It would seem like it, anyway. Else how account (as in your own case) for one bird getting into such a mess about the feet under conditions in which another bird of the same species keeps as clean as a new pin? You might try a different covering for the cage bottom (such as coarse-cut sawdust, or fine peat moss litter), giving grit in a small dish. If you think the feet are really sore, anoint gently with a little of some soothing ointment—boracic, Cuticura, Zambuk, or even lanoline or vaseline.

In an Aviary.

H. H. B. (Oltheroe).—Evidently you have not perused my columns regularly, for I have frequently told querists how very uncertain and unsatisfactory it is to attempt to breed Hybrids by throwing a crowd of different birds into an aviary. Every beginner seems to think this just the method to pursue—quite the easiest and best road to success. And perhaps it is inevitable that the above method should strike them in that light. For reasons, however, which are too lengthy for me to deal with again now, this method almost invariably leads only to disappointment. If one or two carefully selected couples are turned into a fair-sized aviary, good often results; but never when a pair (or more) is crowded into every square foot of floor space. Further, very, very few hen British birds can be depended on to hatch their eggs and rear their young in captivity; therefore the rule with Hybrid breeders is to transfer the eggs to a Canary "foster-mother." You must not get it into your head, either, that the cock Canaries would mate with the hen Finches, while the cock Finches mated with the hen Canaries. The Canaries would simply keep together, and the Finches would keep with their own natural mates. If you want to go seriously into Hybrid breeding, then in my opinion it is best to house each couple in a big cage by themselves. In keeping the birds more particularly for pleasure, then you would undoubtedly get that from them housed in an aviary. Hand-reared birds are usually alright for breeding purposes, but in some cases may be inferior to wild-caught, house-moulted birds. It all depends on the birds themselves—one couldn't tell without seeing them. Here is a list of high-class Hybrid pairs, which should find you plenty of occupation, and result in handsome birds: Siskin, Redpoll, Canary, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, or Linnet cocks paired to Bullfinch hens, and Goldfinch cocks paired to Redpoll, Linnet and Siskin hens.

Woodpecker and Cinnamon Mule.

Joiner.—Cinnamon-coloured Linnet Mules are far from common, and if yours is of good size, and pure and warm in colour, it is bound to win you some prizes. Most of these Cinnamon examples are produced (as yours was) by mating cock Canary to the hen British bird—probably all of them, I might say. It is not exactly a "rare cross," as many such examples have been seen on the show bench from time to time. If your Woodpecker is a bird caught in your neighbourhood, then it certainly is not the Middle Spotted species, for this is not a British bird. I know, however, that several Middle Spotted Woodpeckers have been on sale lately; they were specimens imported from the Continent. It is an appreciably smaller bird than the Greater Spotted. Personally, however, I think the probable explanation of the all-red crown lies in the fact that you have got hold of a young Greater Spotted which has not yet shed its nestling plumage. Before they moult, the crown of the head is red; afterwards the red is confined to the back of the head of the male. The adult plumage, of course, would always be depicted on a coloured plate. These birds are usually shown in a cage (shaped very like a sentry-box), made of tin, with bark fixed on top of the tin. It should not be too large, on account of weight and expense of carriage.

Eight all at Once.

Wood.—Eight questions at one time is rather a tall order. I cover some of them at once, however, by saying that an aviary 6 ft. long by 6 ft. high by 3 ft. from front to back is not large enough to contain a mixed lot of seed-eaters and softbills—it is practically only a large flight. Outdoors, it would not afford sufficient cover (protection) and unless in a very sheltered position it is likely to prove somewhat bleak even for Finches, in the depth of winter. A boarded "shelter" is an essential part of every good outdoor aviary, and the roof should have a good slope, so that the birds, when they choose, can get well up under it. To come to your questions. 1: I prefer to keep insectivorous birds separate from seed eaters. 2: This all depends on the size of the aviary. 3: The delicate species of insectivorous birds would not winter out of doors; in such a place as you describe very few softbills would survive the winter. 4. Insectivorous birds certainly would not breed in it—unless, maybe, you devoted it to one pair, say of Thrushes or Larks. 5: I have never found Larks knock other softbills about; of course, I have not kept them under crowded conditions. 6: You certainly could not trust a Magpie in an aviary with small insectivorous birds — or seed eaters either. Don't you ever give your Magpie dead Sparrows, etc., to eat. I should have thought you would have been familiar with the fact that they do not object to small birds as items of diet. 7: You get more continuous song when birds are caged separately. 8: Seed No. 2 is wild mustard (charlock). No. 1 is quite familiar by sight, but I can't think of the name at the moment. I will give it you next week.

Brevities.

Hybrid with Swelling (H. R. D.).—The best thing you can do is to get an ounce of best quality tincture of iodine from a chemist, and paint the swelling once daily with it. Use a tiny camel hair brush to do this with, and be careful to put on one light smear only at a time, as the stuff is very powerful; also keep it off the surrounding parts. This treatment will reduce the swelling, if anything can.

Hen Mules Laying Eggs (Novice, A. H.).—You are quite correct in saying that hen Mules will lay eggs. Such eggs (as probably you know) are infertile. But given good eggs hen Mules will hatch them and rear the young.

An Aviary (Mephistopheles).—In a substantial outdoor place like yours, no heat whatever will be needed for British Finches or Budgerigars, nor for Canaries of the hardy varieties (Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, etc.), bred in cold rooms. Freedom from damp and draught is all such birds ask. There should certainly be a ventilator at the highest point of the roof—say let into the wall facing west. This could be closed during inclement weather. It would be better if the skylight could be opened during hot weather.

Concerning Mules (Devoulan).—1: The light feathers disqualify the bird for Dark Mule classes. It could be shown as a variegated, though its chances of success wou'd be slight unless very large and very rich in colour. 2: You can lose nothing by colour-feeding the dark Linnet Mules. It will improve their appearance, and then you can enter them at a show, and compare them with the other Mules staged. You will gain knowledge that way. 3: An excellent stock seed mixture for Mules is: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape, charlock, and linseed half-part each. A feed of hemp, maw, niger, etc., occasionally as a treat.

Sparrow Hybrids (R. H. Smith).—Sparrow Hybrids are uncommon because Mr. Philip Spadger refuses to be associated with their breeding. Just try to mate the average cock Sparrow with a hen Canary and see what happens, but don't put in a hen Canary you value. The crossing of the Tree with the House Sparrow has been accomplished; these two species, of course, are close relatives.

Heather Tops (W. A. W.).—Yes, certainly; by heather tops is meant the flowering, etc., tops of heather. In districts where there are Bullfies and heather, these birds can always be flushed from among it about this time of the year; they feed off it in the same manner as other "wild seeds."

Hoopoe and Redpolls (Amateur).—The Hoopoe is certainly a British bird; it is found in England in small numbers (generally in the south) every year. The specimens seen on the show-bench, however, are all imported from the Continent. It breeds in the south of Europe, in Egypt, etc., and would breed in England if left alone. Two kinds of Redpolls are recognised on the show-bench, the Mealy and the Lesser. The former, broadly speaking, is twice the size of the latter, and whereas the Lesser is generally a warm brown colour, the Mealy is (as its name indicates) a much greyer-looking bird, whitish on breast and abdomen.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Silverbill Panting.

V. G. E.—This may arise from three causes, viz., indigestion, chill, or egg-binding. I should advise catching the bird and caging it up separately; keep it in an unheated room and out of the reach of draught. Give her a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in one ounce of water, the bird to have only this to drink for the one day; this can be repeated after an interval of two, providing the voidings are not watery loose. I should also anoint the vent with pure olive oil. If, after observation you are convinced that its condition is due to a cold, then till relief is given, give it one teaspoonful of this mixture (ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts), to an ounce of water. See that it gets a good drink of this twice a day. This can easily be secured by removing the water over-night and supplying the mixture first thing in the morning, removing the drinking water again at mid-day for a time, and letting the mixture remain sufficiently long for it to be compelled to take a portion—continue this till relief is given. A fresh portion of the mixture must be used daily. You give me no data to go upon, so I cannot give you a definite reply, but the above should cover your need.

An Ailing Galah.

A. Hanck.—The bird has got into a heated condition, somebow, and I should spray it with quassia solution every other day for a month at least, keeping it carefully out of draught till dry. Give it an occasional aperient; make its drinking water just saline with Epsom Salts for one day, and after an interval of three days repeat the dose. Diet: Seed mixture, 2 parts each canary seed and oats, 1 part each maize, wheat, dari, hemp and sunflower seeds, well mix and always keep a supply in the cage; also let it have a little of such ripe fruit as it will take daily, also plain biscuits, nuts, and a stale crust of household bread. A leaf of fresh lettuce (say twice a week) is also very wholesome for such individuals as will take it. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Unless there is something more serious than your letter indicates, your bird should gradually renew its plumage and drop the annoying habit of feather-plucking. After the second dose of the aperient, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food.

Keeping Parrots with other Birds.

J. Tipton.—Parrots are very jealous creatures, and apt to sulk if other birds are noticed to any extent in their presence. I do not anticipate that the company of other birds, such as Finches, etc., would interfere much with the birds' utterance, but most certainly I should avoid keeping two Parrots in the same room if you desired talented talkers. Apart from this fact, Parrots of all species are kept in one common room in separate cages, the birds do well enough; but the noise—well, it's simply deafening. To improve the bird's speech, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, and also talk to it, repeating words you wish it to learn over again. Make much of it, and such items of its diet as it is specially fond of, give it a little occasionally, with your fingers, and reward it with such after a lesson. It is by perseverance along such lines that talented birds are trained, but there is a great deal of individualism with Parrots, even of the same species, and some never do more than speak a few odd words, no matter what pains be taken with them.

Lovebirds and Parrakeets.

W. E. G.—(1) The Lovebirds usually to be obtained are: Red-headed, Peach faced, Madagascar, and Blue-winged. With many the Budgerigar is popularly termed a Lovebird. Note, the Peach-faced is much larger than the others, and not being a very amiable species (so far as other birds are concerned), is better caged separately. (2) I cannot give you this briefly; I should want a whole page to cover this query alone. Get "Popular Parrakeets," 1s., and postage, from this office. You would find in such a space pairs each of Rosellas, Many-colour and Stanley Parrakeets, White-eared Conures, and Cockatoels. Put up an ample supply of nesting husks, logs and boxes (these latter must have concave bottoms), and during the second year of their occupancy of the aviary, some of them will commence to breed and all of them ultimately should do so. (3) You would find "Cages and Aviaries," and "Budgerigars and Cockatoels" (see advts.), both books from this office, would be helpful, and others will very shortly appear. If you purchase from a firm of repute they will treat you fairly, and send you, as far as they are able to tell, true pairs. The sexes are outwardly similar with many species of Parrakeets, and the expert errs at times, but place yourself in the hands of a good firm and you'll be fairly treated.

A Window Aviary.

Doubt.—Have the roof all wood and felted; the front (i.e., the part which faces window sash), should be all wire, and this should give you what ventilation you need, but if a stagnant corner should declare itself, one or two small holes at any time will remedy the matter. The back (i.e., the part farthest from your window sash) should have its middle third glass, and there should be a glass pane, say, 12 by 8 in. in each end. All glass must be covered with wire netting on the inside, whether made to open or not. If you can arrange it so that the roof of aviary fits close against the upper sash, then the lower sash of your landing window can be open almost continually, and the birds, in the winter, would get a little warmth from within. However, Budgerigars, so long as they are free from damp and draught, can stand almost anything in the way of cold. Get birds from an outdoor aviary and each pair from a different source, then the young can inter-breed with safety, as they will be unrelated. The Editor will no doubt be pleased to receive your sketch and notes.

Brevities.

Parrot with Swelling in Throat (Brown Bird).—If the swellings show no signs of containing pus, lightly touch them daily with tincture of iodine (use camel-hair brush), and also by aid of another similar brush wipe out its mouth with honey and borax (from your chemist). Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water as often as possible during the next fortnight, but its bowels must not be kept watery loose. Afterwards put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine. Add oats and wheat to your seed diet, and also give it a little boiled maize twice a week. Note, the boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be scalded out for each occasion. While the bird continues in this condition, its voiding should be removed as promptly as possible from the cage. I take it you are not giving mesees as per my weekly warning in this column. Report progress in a week or ten days. Keep out of draught and warm, yet not in a vitiated atmosphere.

Many-coloured Parrakeets (R. A. H.).—Canary and white millet seed, a few oats, with a plentiful supply of green-food, such as grass in flower, groundsel heads, tender lettuce, etc., and such ripe fruit as they will take, will keep this lovely species in a very fit condition. However, it is always a very wise precaution to ascertain how they have been fed from the person you purchase from, and for a time at any rate feed on similar lines; for want of this precaution many valuable birds are lost. Very suitable nests are advertised in our columns by the vendors of cocoa-nut husks; the box should be about 12 by 5 by 8 inches high, and have a concave bottom, so that the eggs will remain together in one position and not be continually rolling about. They should breed if they have space and cover. You can make this by piling up sticks (say pea or bean sticks), on a platform, and having the nest box securely fastened among these.

What Parrot? (W. H.).—I am of the opinion that your bird is the Javan or Moustache Parrakeet. If so, it should talk if you persevere with it. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, and have a lot of company; also teach it by constant repetition of such words and phrases you wish it to repeat. If it is the Javan Parrakeet its tail feathers are broken and when renewed at the moult, it will have a long tail. If its tail should moult out and the feathers prove short, then it is not the Javan Parrakeet, and you must repeat query. However, I am of the opinion it is correctly named as above.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (D. A. B.).—This bird died of "Canary Plague." Information as to duration and symptoms of illness are always helpful in deciding cause of death.

GENERAL.

Cutting (B. Hall).—Accept our thanks.

Compliments (G. Peters).—Thanks; we will convey your compliments to the proper quarter.

A Question of Specials (C. H. Cooper).—We appreciate your point, but hardly think the matter one needing correction.

Thrushes Nesting (W. D.).—We are much obliged to you for your courteous communication

Open Show (J. S. B.).—Yes, certainly; when a show is described as an "Open Show," anyone may exhibit thereat in the open classes, whether a member of any cage bird society or not. Sometimes classes, headed "Members' Classes," will be found in the schedules of open shows, and in these, of course, only members of the society which is holding the show can compete. All other classes, however, are open to all comers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SUCCESS IN HYBRID BREEDING.

SIR,—A friend of mine has been successful in rearing the following Hybrids: Canary-Bullfinch, Goldfinch-Bullfinch, and Linnet-Greenfinch. The Canary-Bullie promises to make up into a good one. He has plenty of size, and already shows some hits of colour on the breast. This may possibly interest some of your many readers. H. R. BOBY.

NEW SOCIETY FOR NORTHALLERTON AND DISTRICT.

SIR,—A Fanciers' Society has been formed for Northallerton and district, and a large number of fanciers have already been enrolled as members. A show is being arranged for at an early date in January. The secretaries are Messrs. Chas. C. Hougson, who was secretary of the last Fanciers' show, and Jos. Walker, one of the secretaries of the Agricultural Society. C. C. HONGSON.

South End, Northallerton.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

SIR,—I trust you will allow me a few words on the above subject in the columns of your valuable paper. As time goes on the C.B.U. continues to prove its utter incapacity to deal fairly with the cases that from time to time come before it. Take, for example, the case of Mr. T. C. Crawhall, who is suspended from exhibiting at Union shows from October 17 to November 17, for showing birds at a small mixed show (non-licensed), held at his native village on Whit Monday. Certainly the period for which he is suspended does not seem a long one, but let us look at the facts. It prohibits him from showing at Morpeth, Newcastle, South Shields, Blaydon and Wallsend. Most of the above Societies he is a member of. The criminal, or shall I say victim, protested against the severity of the sentence passed upon him by District No. 1 Committee, after due deliberation, and I am informed that a few of these wise men suggested that he be suspended for twelve months. After Mr. Crawhall had protested against the severity of the sentence and expressed his determination to appeal, this body of wise men each and all expressed the hope that he would be successful in his appeal. Brother fanciers, what think ye of this? Mr. Crawhall tendered his resignation to all the Societies of which he is a member, which Societies unanimously expressed their confidence in him and refused to accept his resignation. Also they protested most strongly against the severity of the sentence passed upon him, and requested the Executive Committee of the C.B.U. to reconsider the case. The Executive Committee, instead, have confirmed the sentence. Now I venture to say that if any bench of magistrates, or any court of law, had administered justice in such a way, they would soon be brought to book by the Home Office, because it is a direct miscarriage of justice. The punishment far exceeds the enormity of the offence; not only so, but by their action in confirming this harsh and unfair sentence, the Executive Committee have directly and grossly insulted the intelligence of the Societies who requested them to reconsider the case. I ask you, brother fanciers, are we going to tamely submit to such treatment? I hope not. If the C.B.U. can afford to ignore the wishes of several large and influential societies, let me say it cannot be done with impunity. The Executive Committee, in confirming this sentence of suspension on Mr. Crawhall, have done more to disparage the prestige of the C.B.U. in this district than anything else up to the present. And I venture to say that anyone looking at the matter dispassionately will come to the conclusion that the C.B.U. decision in this matter is neither wise nor just. JOHN CURRAH.

Paying the Penalty.

SIR,—Some time ago you had a remark in "Twitterings" under the above heading, notifying my suspension by the No. 1 district committee of the Cage Bird Union. You have also from time to time published reports of various local societies with respect to my proposed resignation from them. They have all either refused to accept that resignation or requested me to withdraw it. I may say that I have now had notification from the general secretary to the effect that the Executive Council have confirmed the decision of the local committee. I would not trouble you, or take up the space in your valuable paper, but that I feel I owe an explanation to my friends in other parts of the country, as to why I, an active supporter of the rule in the past, should break it now. It is not that my opinion as to its value to the Cage Bird Union is altered at all. I never supported the rule from the individual point of view, but always from the collective, believing that it was necessary for the life of the Union to have power over the societies comprising it. All along I have recognised its oppressiveness to the individual fancier, but thought that for the good of the whole it was better that it should stand. The show to which I sent two birds was held on Whit Monday of this year at Stanhope, in the county of Durham. It is a mixed show, composed of dogs, poultry, pigeons, etc., with seven classes for cage birds. It was not for my own glory, or in the hopes of winning any prize money, that I sent them, as I had arranged that in the event of winning any money, I would not have it for myself. My birds were taken from the breeding cages and sent without washing a distance of upwards of 50 miles, and were away from Sunday to Monday night, and this without any hope of personal gain. On previous occasions I have refrained from showing at purely Cage Bird shows because they were not licensed or affiliated, but this being a different kind of show altogether, I thought there was no serious harm in so slight a breach of the rule. The district committee evidently thought otherwise, and decided upon suspending me from exhibiting at Union shows for one month. Now this apparently is a very light penalty, but it was not one month from the date of meeting, but from the date of the first show in the district, and covers five shows in the vicinity out of a total of seven, thus leaving me two shows of any importance to show at. I considered it so severe a sentence, and an aspersion on my honesty and integrity as a fancier, that I decided to protest strongly against the sentence. So I wrote my resignations to the six societies of which I am a member, firstly as a protest against the severity of the sentence, and secondly to find whether I still retained the confidence of the fanciers locally. Five of these societies were affiliated with the C.B.U. They all refused to accept my resignation (which I have since withdrawn and passed votes of confidence in me, and many are the individual expressions of sympathy that I have had expressed to me, from far and near. Several of the societies sent resolutions to the C.B.U. requesting them to rescind or reconsider the sentence. But in spite of these resolutions the Executive have confirmed the resolution of the No. 1 Committee. I do not know how the societies affected will take this decision, but personally I feel very much grieved and hurt that they have not considered local feeling in the matter. Individuals to whom I have spoken since hearing the final result consider that the Executive have made a great blunder in opposing the wishes of Tyneside fanciers so unanimously spoken. In conclusion, may I thank all who have spoken so kindly and written to me in this matter? At least I consider that my honour, which I value more than being able to exhibit, is fully upheld by the kindness of my fellow fanciers.

THE USE & VALUE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—In Mr. Daniels' latest letter he very carefully avoids any line of argument, posing simply as the grand introducer of the subject, leaving details to lesser minds. If Mr. Daniels had read my letter with the intelligence he decries, he would have seen that I stated that a non-colour-fed variety could have its colour very much improved by scientific feeding on the saffron and iron mixtures. Mr. Daniels' cheap sneer is not a matter of public interest, so it can well be left alone. I would only remind Mr. Daniels that his experience of the Fancy is not exactly antidiluvian. Mr. Smith's letter is of quite a different order to Mr. Daniels'. Being a chemist, Mr. Smith is entitled to write on this matter with authority. In Cassell's "Family Physician," page 795, meadow saffron is described as Colchicum autumnale. If what I might call the "thread saffron" is not meadow saffron, I shall be glad if Mr. Smith will say what kind of saffron it is. I should also like to know in what way Mr. Smith used the saffron for assisting moult. At this time of year, when birds moult naturally, it is always open to doubt whether certain things assist nature or not. A more real test would be to try if saffron would break a bird into moult at a time other than now—say, in the spring, when birds are, or ought to be, in breeding condition. I have tried it at this time and know that it will do so. Mr. Smith asks if I have used the mixture "without the saffron," as he is inclined to think the result would be the same. This mixture I use regularly to bring backward stock into breeding condition, and find it excellent. The only difference I make (bar leaving out the saffron) is to use gin instead of rum, as I find gin a good thing for preventing egg-binding. The large number of letters I have received since my other letter appeared—letters from well-known practical fanciers—confirm all I have said in favour of saffron. Fanciers who are lucky enough to get all their show birds well broken up into moult, so as to be through before the show season commences, are to be congratulated. They do not require anything to assist nature. I take it all medicines are designed to assist nature to do her natural work, not to take the place of nature.

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—I should be sorry indeed to say or do anything that would be detrimental to the Norwich Plainhead, and I sure Mr. Gardner would be the same. My best wishes are for its advancement, but I fail to see where the advancement would come in if these two birds (clears and underflue marked) were to compete together on equal terms, as it will be the under-valuing of the clear bird. I am of opinion that a rare specimen of any kind should be more valuable than an everyday one, so to speak. For instance, what would our Mule breeders think, after trying for years to get a good clear Mule, and when obtained to find it is of no more value than a dark Mule? As to breeders dropping the green-blood, as Mr. Gardner thinks, through it being the cause of the dark underflue, I am sure no practical breeder would do that because he would know he was doing away at the same time with the material for making a good clear. Fanciers don't expect to breed a lot of good clears in a season, and if they did so, where would the rarity come in? I think if a fancier should breed, say, one topping clear yellow in a season, he would come up smiling. Now, I hope this bird that has reached perfection, as I term it (namely the Clear) will not be brought down to a level with a bird that has dark underflue, as I think that would decidedly be going back. But if societies could see their way to make a special class for birds with dark underflue, it would be advancing these birds and increasing their value, without in any way doing harm to the clear bird.

A. WOOLLARD.

SIR,—I think the time has now arrived to settle once for all this vexed question: When is a clear not a clear? Some of your correspondents seem to think we ought to appeal to our judges to settle it for us. But in my humble opinion exhibitors through their respective societies are the most interested parties, as our judges (with all due respect to them) are only the servants of the above, and ought to judge according to schedule, so that it lies solely in the hands of committees when drawing up their schedules. If the following were adopted (or something similar) it would put an end to it at once: "Only surface marks to count as ticks." Printed at the top of the schedule, underneath prize money, and before the classes, that would prevent any bird being handled at all to seek for the almost "impossible" tick, as it is a great disadvantage to any bird to be pulled and blown about in such a manner, for then he must be prepared to put himself right in the twinkling of an eye to compare with his more fortunate mates. We had a case quite recently where a member entered a bird in a clear yellow class and it was selected for a prize. But when examined it was found to have a very small tick on the leg; consequently, it got a "W.C." card instead. The following week the same member enters the same bird in the class for ticks, and imagine his surprise and indignation on entering the show after judging to find again a "W.C." card attached to his cage. This judge could not find the "impossible" tick! So the question now is, When is a clear not a clear? The answer will be found in the above narrative, viz.: When showing under two different judges. I trust this question may not be allowed to drop until some settlement agreeable to all is come to.

A. J. NOTLEY.

SIR,—On perusing the columns of last week's issue, I noticed the letter signed "Lancashire Lad," referring to an unflighted bird which the writer had successfully exhibited under various well-known judges last season. The correspondence that has been going on of late, re the question, What constitutes a Tick? appears to have placed "Lancashire Lad" in a dilemma as to what class to enter his bird in this season, so as to be correct. The bird in question, he states, possesses a dark underflue, and in the reports was styled a clear; hence his doubt in the matter. The proper class for this bird is the "Ticked or Unevenly-marked Class." A clear bird should be perfectly clear throughout, with no dark feathers whatever. This "ticked question" is a problem which has been before the Fancy for ages, in a manner of speaking, and has never been solved. I quite agree with Messrs. Silk and Woolhouse that a conference is required to settle this very important item, and until such has been held, this doubt as regards the proper classification of one's specimens will always be with us. Throughout the Fancy generally it is fairly understood that specimens possessing dark feathers, no matter how faint they may be (whether in the underflue or on the thighs) should be exhibited in their proper class, which is the ticked class. No doubt many thigh-ticked birds, and many with dark underflue, compete in the clear classes and get through alright, but the exhibitor runs the risk of a "wrong class" card being placed on his cage, if same is observed. I think I am now giving vent to the opinions of most of the judges at the present time. The Cage Bird Union is a strong body, and I think if this matter was taken up by its representatives previous to the opening of the show season, the matter could be settled definitely, and fanciers would know where they stand.

J. C. BARNES.

SIR,—Some of your correspondents are under the impression that birds ticked with dark underflue should be eligible to compete in clear classes. So they can do, providing it states so in the schedule. But, then, I fail to see why they should be recognised as clears. Whether the ticking is on the surface of the plumage or underneath it, is immaterial; the birds are not clears. It is a well-known fact that a clear bird should be clear of markings on any part of its plumage. With your permission I would suggest that committees of forthcoming exhibitions, before issuing their schedules, should set an example to the Fancy by inserting the word "absolutely" in their clear class. Then, with a competent judge engaged the ticked birds amongst the winners in those classes would be conspicuous by their absence, and the difficulty overcome. If the above suggestion be approved, I sincerely trust it may be the means of checking the invasion of ticked birds in classes where they are not eligible to compete. Our modern system of judging is somewhat at fault, and this, combined with unscrupulous exhibitors, results in ticked birds winning in clear classes, "cocks" winning in "hen" classes and other abuses too numerous to mention. Last, but not least, dissatisfied exhibitors are on the increase.

J. W. KINGSMILL.

SIR,—When I wrote my first letter re the above, it was not my intention to enter into any lengthy correspondence, but perhaps a few remarks in answer to Mr. Trevena may not be out of place. He commences by stating that I propose a bird with dark underflue should be shown in a clear class. This is quite a misrepresentation of facts. Does he really think anyone is so foolish as to show a ticked or underflue-marked bird that is visible, in a class where the schedule does not read "underflue not to be a disqualification." This latter clause he omits altogether, but asks the question: Why need we do this, when classes are provided for marked birds? In my opinion, he gives a splendid answer in the two incidents he brings forward. He admits buying a bird from a clear class and showing it successfully later in a clear class, passing judge and critics, though a ticked bird all the time. What stronger argument can we get in favour of a class, as previously stated, for receiving such birds? Secondly, by the tone of his letter, he seems rather displeased to see a bird, "apparently clear" winning three cards in a ticked class (something to be coveted). Here, again, this bird would have been far better shown in class as above (to include "invisible marks") and would have given then far better satisfaction to all rival competitors. Possibly the bird in question had been caught by the judge; but everyone has not the privilege of knowing whether such was the case. He draws the Bodmin Committee into your columns. Well, I have nothing whatever to do with their management, but feel confident they can look after their own affairs to the satisfaction of all. Again, he continues by saying that if a bird is ticked, no matter where the feather or feathers may be, a ticked bird is not a clear. Who said the contrary? Mr. Trevena, don't try to read something into it that does not actually appear. If you read carefully my letter of the 22nd ult., you will see my suggestion—viz., the schedule should read: "underflue not to be a disqualification." This underflue would not be seen in very many cases, as the bird need said he contrary. Mr. Trevena, don't try to not mind having his show birds caught and handled; but most fanciers that I have met avoid such practices, even in their own bird-room, as much as possible. Only last week I was talking to one of the most successful exhibitors of Plainheads in Plymouth, and he was saying how he caught one of his best exhibition birds to see if it was breaking into moult, when, whilst examining same, it gave a twist in his hand; result, a broken wing. How would any exhibitor feel should he have one of his prize birds returned to him so damaged? Yet this might happen when even the most experienced judge was examining it. I do not claim to be any "leading authority." At the same time I did not say a ticked bird was a clear.

A "TIP" TO LIGHT MULE-BREEDERS.

SIR,—As a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I closely follow the Muling notes. In last week's issue I read the letter "A tip to Light Mule-breeders." All Mule-breeders wish to breed light Mules, I think; but I smiled at this "tip," viz., look at the Goldfinches. Now, most Mule-breeders will try and get the best Finch they can for breeding purposes, and I think a fair proportion of bird-catchers are Mule-breeders. We must (if we get our friend's "tip") ask the dealer or the catcher for "light Muling Finches." That will be as bad as buying sib hens! But I think our friend is wrong. He has bought a cheap hen that is sib bred (?) and so gone astray; they (sibs) are to be got, but not often. But to prove our friend's "tip" wrong: I have a Goldfinch seven years old, which has bred for six years, and for five years all dark Mules. This year with hen "picked blindfolded" he produced dark Mules; but with two sisters (sib hens) they have five light Mules and three dark Mules. A last year's Greypate also bred this year with a "picked blindfold" hen. Result, three dark Mules; but with a sister of the above sib hens, he bred three light Mules. So I don't think much of "blind-fold picked" hens for light Mule-breeding.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—It would appear from Mr. Crisp's latest that the Southern Yorkshire C.C. has a perfect right to manage its own affairs, according to its own ideas, irrespective of the effect on any other section of the Fancy, and at the same time claim immunity from the criticism of those so affected. I deny the existence of any such rights. So long as the club confines its actions to those matters which are purely and entirely its own affairs I cannot understand the claim of, or see, the necessity for others to interfere, but when such management involves other societies or individuals, and infringes upon their rights and privileges, or is performed in a vindictive spirit, such affected parties must surely have reasonable grounds for complaint, and their criticisms are not out of place. I consider this position perfectly consistent with my previous letter, for while I still agree that the committee of the S.Y.C.C. was acting strictly within its rights in withholding its patronage from Plymouth, or any other society, without giving a reason, the fact remains that a published statement, giving the reason, is still uncontradicted by the only person fully qualified to deny it. So long as the statement by Mr. Pope remains unchallenged by Mr. Rennie, any fancier, including your humble servant, has a perfect right to question the sincerity of the committee's action. I cannot quite understand why Mr. Crisp should be at so much trouble in placing the burden on his own shoulders in order to have the pleasure of removing it, for I cannot discover where anyone has attributed the entire blame to Mr. Crisp, or questioned his attitude in the matter. Hence, his copious notes on his own impartiality were quite superfluous. Mr. Crisp is kind enough to inform us, either on his own authority or otherwise, what the secretary of the S.Y.C.C. intended to convey to Mr. Pope. I prefer to deal with what he is reported to have actually said or written, and until he denies it, or Mr. Pope withdraws it, I feel justified in believing that the patronage was withheld from Plymouth on personal grounds, and the course adopted was altogether alien to fair play. There seems to be good grounds for accepting a very prevalent idea that the rule re specialist judges was a very convenient way of shelving Mr. House without mentioning his name, simply because, in the performance of his duty, he rightly passed birds which he considered over standard length. I feel convinced that had such birds belonged to certain other individuals the first would not have been heard yet of specialist cage-bird judges. And if the rule was made to apply to Mr. House, why not all round? Mr. Crisp said he had nothing to do with the moving of the proposal re specialist cage bird judges, neither did he vote or express an opinion upon it. He did not even know what was in the mind of the mover at the time. (Evidently Mr. Crisp is not a thought-reader; perhaps he had a "strong suspicion.") He also informs us that, "at the meeting convened for allotting patronage the abilities of Mr. House and his passing of the two birds at Plymouth were never discussed." Well, to the uninitiated all this may appear very plausible and convincing; but in it I cannot discern anything more than mere piffle. To my mind it simply confirms me in the belief that the committee's course of action had been so thoroughly discussed beforehand, everything so perfectly cut and dried in advance, that there was no necessity to mention any names or waste further time. Mr. Rennie's statement to Mr. Pope is sufficient proof of all this, and if more is required it is forthcoming in the fact that the precious rule re specialist cage-bird judges is only enforced when and where convenient. And this is just why I contend that I have a perfect right to express whatever opinion I hold on the matter. A competent all-England judge is practically boycotted by a certain section of the Fancy, and the application of a prominent society for patronage not entertained, because he is the appointed judge. This removes all limitations and makes the matter one of wide importance. If a judge conscientiously performs the duties entrusted to him according to the standard adopted by those employing him, he is entitled to protection rather than abuse, and praise rather than censure, even if in the discharge of said duties, he is unfortunate enough to tread on the favourite corn of someone of influence. There are many portions of Mr. Crisp's letter which deserve little, if any, attention. He insinuates that Mr. Dean and I wrote simultaneously by pre-arrangement. I was not aware that Mr. Dean had written, and as we were separated by some forty miles of space and had no communication with each other, I am afraid Mr. Crisp will have to rest content with the knowledge that it was "quite a coincidence." If Mr. Dean is replying to his letter he will have the pleasure of noting a similar coincidence this week. Has Mr. Crisp so far neglected his CAGE BIRDS as to believe that the Yorkshire Union would tolerate no suggestion or advice from outside? I could point him to cases which prove that such has been welcomed rather than resented. Again, because I have had the honour of serving the Yorkshire Union as secretary, I am supposed by Mr. Crisp henceforward to submit all I say, or write, or do, to that body for consent and approval. How good of it not to insist on such a course. And what is the conclusion to be drawn from the whole matter in Mr. Crisp's opinion? Simply that, "maybe the Yorkshire Union is endeavouring to tear the governing mantle from the back of the C.B.U." This is either utter nonsense or too contemptible for consideration—it depends in what spirit Mr. Crisp wrote it. The correspondence between the two Unions was published a few weeks ago, and I failed to notice anything therein of which the Yorkshire Union need be ashamed, or which need, of necessity, disturb the existing relations of the two Unions, which are certainly far removed from enmity.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird room, egg food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PROPOSED CLUB FOR GREEN-MARKED YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

Sir,—By the pressing request of a number of my fellow fanciers I have undertaken to use my best endeavours to form a Green marked Yorkshire Canary Club. It is very keenly felt that this variety is being "pushed off the end of the bench," so to speak, and that if something be not speedily done the marked birds will soon be relegated to the "Any Other Variety" Class—in fact, the even-marked birds already occupy that unenviable position. Surely this is a state of things that ought not to be? During recent years the tendency has been to push forward the claims of the foul-marked bird—more dark than light—this to, my mind, is a step in the wrong direction. Personally I do not object to a bird being foul marked to a reasonable extent, but when it is insisted that the bird must be more dark than light, then I think it is time to draw the line. Birds of this class are not bred for, and when they do appear are of no special value as show birds. Still, they have on many occasions occupied positions that ought by right to have been given to their more lightly-marked relatives. Now, I hold the opinion that the too heavily marked bird is far more suited to the breeding room than the show-bench. When we consider the marketable value of the clear and the ticked birds, and the sensational prices they realise as compared to the mediocre value of the marked birds (especially the hens), the question may naturally arise: What is the cause of such a wide difference in their respective value? To my mind, the answer is not far to seek. The clear and the ticked birds have classes provided for them at all the principal shows, consequently by the facilities thus offered they have the opportunity of winning many valuable trophies, specials, and prizes. Hence it is that really good birds of these varieties are of such a high value. On the other hand, it is very rare that a class is provided for marked birds, unless it be one where both colours, Yellow and Buff, compete together. I may say that at most shows the marked birds have to compete with the ticked birds, which is a most unsatisfactory arrangement, as the marked bird, as a rule, is very fortunate indeed to get into the first three. Now I have no hesitation in saying that if the marked birds had the same facilities offered them as have the clears and the ticks, their value would increase by leaps and bounds. Every intelligent breeder tries to breed marked birds as near perfection as possible, and when one is fortunate in breeding an exceptionally good bird its value is terribly discounted by the fact that no class is provided for it wherein it has a reasonable chance of success. Seeing the state of affairs now existing, is it not high time that something should be done to put the marked birds on an equal footing with their more favoured fellows, the clears and the ticks? I am thoroughly convinced that if fanciers of the Yorkshire Canary only knew the value of the green-marked birds, I should have had no occasion to write this letter. It is a well-established fact that most good marked birds have a certain percentage of cinnamon blood in their veins; this, in conjunction with the many other good qualities that these birds inherit, makes them of inestimable value in the breeding-room. This is the bird to which we are indebted for the strength and stamina of our stock. We also derive from the same source that sound, rich, full colour so much admired on the show-bench, and last, but by no means the least, it gives to our birds that short, fine, high-quality of feather that is such an essential property in a really high-class Yorkshire of to-day. I may say that it gives me great pleasure to champion the cause of the bird that has served me so well, as by its use, I built up my strain, therefore I have this variety to thank for the success I have achieved on the show-bench. It is with every confidence I commend the adoption of this variety by my fellow fanciers, in the hope that by its use such benefits may accrue as I myself have experienced. To those who may be interested in the formation of a club for this variety, I may mention that we have already assured to us one of the most valuable trophies ever offered by any specialist Canary club in the Fancy to be competed for and won outright in a single season; also numerous other valuable specials and prizes—in fact the inducements offered to fanciers of the above variety are quite exceptional. If all fanciers who are wishful to join the movement will kindly send their names and addresses to me, they shall have prompt personal attention.

How to Get Canaries Into Show Condition.

By J. C. BARNES.

The show season will soon be upon us, therefore it behoves one to be on the alert and get one's birds into that condition necessary for success in prize-winning. Competition nowadays is exceedingly keen, and no stone must be left unturned; make up your mind to see into every detail, and stick to it—remember that "what is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

Completing the Moult.

When your birds appear to be through with their moult, don't take them off the colour-food too abruptly. If birds are put on to hard seed too suddenly it is apt to upset their digestive organs, and throw them wrong altogether (a wrong that takes some righting). Wean your birds judiciously off their soft-food. Extra care should also be taken previous to stopping the colour-food till all the feathers are full grown. Birds often appear through the moult (outwardly), but should you happen to examine them by blowing them up you will more often than not notice many very small feathers (not fully grown) especially about the neck, head or eyes. Should you have stopped the pepper, these will come out patchy and spoil the levelness of colour required in a good show specimen. Better supply the colour-food for a little too long a period, than stop it too quickly.

Again, sometimes it happens that birds are uneven in colour (especially young birds); some of their plumage is paler than the rest of their body. This is often brought about by being plucked in the nest (by the parent birds), the second feathers having grown previous to you administering the colour-food. These pale feathers you will have to "finger moult," that is, pull all of them out (providing there are not over many), and keep the birds on colour-food until the new feathers are fully grown; this will rectify the unevenness of colour.

To Produce Sheen and Tightness.

It is very advisable during the latter part of the moult to provide the birds with a little linseed (either whole or in the meal). Should you prefer to use the whole seed, mix it along with the Spanish Canary seed; if you decide to give the meal, mix this with the colour-food, say, one teaspoonful to every cupful of the latter. Of the two methods, I prefer the meal, as my experience teaches me it gives the best results.

To ensure tightness of feather, bath your birds pretty freely. Bathing is a conditioner, a strengthener, and a cleanser. I use the bath very often right through the moult, and hardly ever let a bright sunny day go past without it. Many fanciers are somewhat afraid to allow the bath during the moult for fear of giving the birds a chill. I don't think there is any fear, providing your birds are healthy and you supply the bath in the early part of the day, so as to give the birds time to dry themselves previous to roosting time. I am a great believer in the bath, but I should not think of hanging it on on damp or foggy days, but avoid courting disaster.

"Striking" Birds in the Moult.

I strike all my birds in large flight cages, as they commence the moult quicker than if kept in their usual smaller cages. When the old birds show signs of new feathers on the breast, I usually cage off separately or in two's providing they agree. The young birds I leave in the flights until near on completion of moult; then I begin to look round and catch up those which possess the best points. These I cage separately, and when doing so, examine their flights and tail feathers to see if any have got damaged. If so, I draw the old ones out, and let them grow fresh ones. Defective feathers tell against a bird on the show-bench.

Training for Exhibition.

This is necessary, as birds must be steady to show off their points to the best advantage. Wild specimens on the bench often get the "go by" when the judge is sorting out the prize-winners They must stand steadily to be examined, or else one's chances of success are handicapped. A little trouble is required, but it pays one to see to this item. If you are a breeder of Norwich Plainheads I should advise you to run those birds you think will do you most good into a show cage as often as you possibly can. Lift the cage about, gain the bird's confidence, and get it to hop from one perch to the other backwards and forwards. If it should clutch the wires, hold your hand in front of the cage, and drive him carefully on to his perches, and so forth. A few lessons of this kind, will teach the bird what is required.

Should you be a Yorkshire breeder, act as with the Norwich, with the exception of going from one perch to the other. Get you bird to stand erect on the top perch of the show cage, scratch underneath the cage, play with him as often as you can, and don't allow him to crouch, but get him up (like a rush). A little perseverance will serve to teach him how to show himself well.

Washing the Birds.

I like to wash at least five days previous to a show, or a shade longer than this even, if you live in a clear atmosphere. I have used and like, white curd, and Williams' shaving soaps, the latter for preference. Both are fairly free from acids, and don't destroy the feather.

After I have washed the birds I give them a good spraying every morning before date of show; this assists them to fine down and tighten. In washing, I do the back, flights, and tail first, then the neck (underneath the lower mandible), breast, sides and waist, with head and neck last. By leaving the head and neck until last you don't fatigue your bird so much as if you did his head first, and he dries quicker and better.

Some Conditioning Foods.

As regards conditioning your stock I am not a great believer in over-forcing, but I do believe in giving help to birds that have to undergo the ordeal of exhibition. It is essential that show birds appear on the bench in the best of trim, but at the same time, I advise you not to get your birds into too good form. Conditioning birds can be overdone, as well as underdone. By getting your exhibits into too high a condition, they are apt to pull themselves out of shape; use discretion and don't overstep the mark.

I use egg and bread-crumbs with a little sugar and maw seed added, Parrish's Chemical Food, Allen and Hanbury's Byno-Phosphates, Angiers' petroleum emulsion, hemp seed, gentian, and a special mixture of bread with soft sugar and maw seed. This I give at least once every day. To one egg boiled hard (15 minutes) add trifle more bread-crumbs than egg, one teaspoonful of maw seed, half teaspoonful of moist sugar. To each bird give half teaspoonful a day. Parrish's Chemical Food can be placed in the drinking-water two or three times a week, to the strength of port wine colour. It is a strengthener and safe to use. Allen and Hanbury's Byno-Phosphates is most excellent, and finds favour with me more than anything else I use by the way of liquids. To every ounce of water I give one teaspoonful, stirred well together, three times a week; containing, as it does, the phosphates of iron, lime, potash and soda, it has valuable restorative properties, and is a promoter of digestion, a capital thing for nearly all bowel troubles, and a fine flesh former. A better conditionor for birds I do not know.

Angiers' petroleum emulsion is very useful for all throat and lung troubles and general debility. Should you find any of your birds weak in voice, or breathing heavily, or wasting away (complaints often noticeable during and after the moult), add one teaspoonful to every cupful of egg and bread-crumbs, mixed well together, and supply each bird with half teaspoonful per day. Hemp seed is relished, but give in moderation. Gentian acts as a tonic, and a few drops given in the bird's drinking-water twice a week is beneficial.

The special mixture I mentioned is made as follows:—One pint of the best port wine, 1lb. of honey and 1oz. of citrate of iron and ammonia. Heat the wine, then add the honey, stir well, and when dissolved add the nitrate, again stir until all the crystals have melted and are mixed with the rest. When cold, it can be bottled, and is ready for use at any time. Give it in the egg-food, adding sufficient of the liquid to make the same moist but not wet. Mix well together and give to each bird half teaspoonful every other day or thereabouts. You will soon find your birds in the pink of condition, and will be amply repaid for the little extra trouble and expense. The port wine is a strengthener, the honey acts beneficially on the bowels, and the citrate is a valuable stimulant. This recipe can be used with benefit on all breeds of birds, and is really a grand conditioner.

A Humming Bird is supposed to have been seen in Bedfordshire recently, and according to the "Staffordshire Advertiser" two have been seen at Willanhall. The "Humming Birds" were more likely fine specimens of the Humming Bird Sphinx Moth, which exactly resembles the Humming Bird in its actions and in the humming sound made with its wings. It is said to have been more than usually common this last two summers.

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

The Grosbeaks.

COCCOTHRAUSTINÆ.—These may be summed up as a group of birds varying considerably in size, but all are of robust build and with very stout bills. Dr. Bowdler Sharpe defines them as follows:—"A general stoutness of bill is the leading characteristic of the Grosbeaks, accompanied, as we see in the skull, by an immense development of the thickness of the posterior end of the lower jaw; but that this character will be found to run through all the genera which I have arranged in this sub-family is extremely doubtful. I have been able to examine so few skeletons that the present arrangement represents rather a general idea than an actual classification of the Grosbeaks, and is liable to future modifications."

It will be impossible to do more in the scope of this book than briefly note the more freely imported, and a few of the rarer representative species, within the compass of this work.

General Treatment:—If kept in cages, such should be roomy and preferably of the semi-box type, with natural branches as perches. All seem able to bear with impunity the vilest weather our winters can inflict upon them, providing the outdoor aviary is sufficiently roomy for exercise and there is a shelter-shed to retire to at will. As regards diet, this is simple, viz., seed mixture (Canary, millet, oats, hemp and sunflower seed, and rice in the husks), ripe fruit, greenfood (lettuce is greedily eaten), cuttlefish, grit, live insects, and water, ad. lib., for drinking and bathing. This treatment will practically suffice for the whole group.

THE VIRGINIAN CARDINAL OR GROSBEAK (Cardinalis cardinalis).—This is a very gorgeous Grosbeak, with a passable song and fairly ready to nest: but the young are not always reared. The larger and more wooded the aviary the better the chances of success. In view of the fact that the U.S.A. Government have prohibited the exportation of their native birds, it certainly should be worth the while of those possessing large aviaries or spaces to erect same, to attempt to thoroughly domesticate this fine species.

It is absolutely hardy, and once over the troubles of importation endures the hardships of our worst winters admirably, being long-lived within the confines of the outdoor aviary. In the private park this grand species should soon become at home, settle down and increase, but were they to venture further afield I expect they would soon fall a prey to the man with a gun.

The Virginian Cardinal, or Virginian Nightingale, or Virginian Grosbeak, or Cardinal Grosbeak (for it is known by all these names) is generally distributed over North America, and extends as far southwards as Nicaragua in Central America. It is seldom found far from running water, at least, for nesting purposes, a deodar of some kind being usually chosen as a site for the nest, which is generally found at a low elevation. It is constructed of twigs, bents, bits of bark, leaves, and dry grasses, and is lined with fine grass. The eggs are a longish oval, white, densely spotted with brown and bluish grey, usually three in number, but the clutches vary from two to four.

In captivity they will build either in a bush or choose a nest box or Hartz travelling cage as the receptacle for their nest. And they are very ready to do this, though comparatively few of those hatched out are reared to maturity. A constant supply of live beetles, cockroaches, mealworms, smooth caterpillars, gentles, etc., must be kept up or there will be practically no prospect of the young being reared.

Description:—Adult male: Upper surface and wing coverts, a rich brownish-red, remaining wing feathers being ruddy-brown with the outer webs brick-red; front of the head, crest, cheeks and under surface rich, rosy-lake-red; the throat is black, which is also the colour of the chin, and patch partly encircling eye and narrow frontal band; beak vermillion, washed with orange; legs and feet, dark brownish-grey; iris hazel. Total length, 8¾ inches.

Adult female: Upper surface, pale olive-brown, paler on the front of the head, crest washed with brick-red; outer webs of primaries, greater wing-coverts, part of secondaries, tail feathers and thighs, brick-red; secondaries and tail feathers broadly edged with pale olive-brown, and tipped with whitish-brown; the primaries are also tipped with pale brown; cheeks and under surface, pale ochreus-brown, lightly washed with red in the breast; narrow frontal band, chin and throat, greyish-black; beak, paler and greyer than that of the male; legs and feet, greyish-brown.

In the aviary I have found this species amiable with small Finches, though apt to quarrel with other Grosbeaks and the larger Buntings; but though I have kept the species for years, such battles only resulted in the loss of a few feathers now and again. Its much-vaunted song I have never heard; possibly I have been unfortunate in my specimen. They have certainly been very mediocre choristers, though some of the notes are rich and flute-like; but the song is scrappy and also marred by harsh notes.

With all its faults, it is a grand species, and should certainly grace all out-door aviaries. Its beauty, alert vigour, robust hardihood, and rich call notes in the early mornings and evenings soon win for it the affection of its owner. It has, however, a penchant for the eggs of other birds when they are left unprotected; but a Diamond Dove or Zebra can easily put him to flight: a sudden rush and the Cardinal is routed.

The Virginian Cardinal.

This very handsome and sprightly Cardinal—popularly known as the Virginian Nightingale—is a great favourite with bird-lovers in both the Old and New Worlds. Its importation from the United States, in fact, has been strictly prohibited, and this has made it scarce in Europe. Its plumage is a rich, deep crimson, with which the black "mask" contrasts strikingly. It is a fine, free songster.

Forcing the Moult.

One so often meets with peculiar ideas, or what might almost be better termed alarming theories concerning the moulting of birds that a brief note on the question of forcing a moult when it is required may not be out of place.

Although in certain circumstances the question has a practical interest for every class of bird keeper, it is generally looked upon as of particular interest to the bird-catching fraternity, who are always believed to have some secret method of forcing their call-birds into moult during the summer months, and thus having them clean moulted and in song again at the time when the close season expires and the services of the call-birds may be immediately requisitioned. Whether the unfortunate inmates of the little cages kept closely covered in a darkened and warm corner are really the recipients of any secret formulæ beyond the popular rusty nail and saffron sluiced in the water may be open to doubt, and in any case need not concern us here, as the more obvious points of the process just mentioned—increased warmth, and a closely-covered cage, with the consequent loss of light—are without doubt the only really useful and practical means of hastening on the moult.

But this belief in some nostrum to bring about a moult at any time, and in any circumstances, must be far more general than many suppose, for a really well-educated member of a learned profession was quite recently heard to inquire of a bird fancier whether there was anything he could do to make a bird moult a second time, the bird in question having already finished its moult this year. It had, however, since moulting got some badly damaged flight feathers in its wing, which were a disfigurement. Hence the desire to force it to moult again.

Acting doubtlessly upon the principle of choosing the lesser of two necessary evils, the bird-keeper in the case just instanced strongly advised the querist to resist any temptation to bring about a second moult, and to catch the bird and pluck out the damaged flights instead. That was far and away the best and soundest advice that could have been given in such a case, but it immediately gave rise to another question which proved beyond a doubt that the querist had not yet passed the stage of the usual "new beginner."

"Would they grow again this season if plucked out?" was the sum and substance of the query when he was advised to pluck out the damaged quills; and on being assured that new feathers would start to grow again immediately the old quills were removed, he was only too glad to relinquish the idea of forcing a second moult.

Amongst the uninitiated there is a very prevalent idea that if feathers are lost or plucked out they are not reproduced until the next moult. This as a rule is quite erroneous. Yet there are certain exceptions which, when taken into consideration, show that there is just a slight ground for suspicion to the contrary. For example, there are the old and debilitated specimens, and younger birds which are constitutionally weak and delicate, which frequently fail to reproduce lost feathers on the head and neck, except at the proper moulting-time; and in extreme cases these feathers are not reproduced even then, and the birds remain permanently bald or bare in patches.

But even in the very worst of these cases it is extremely rare for any of the large tail and flight feathers to remain absent long unless the stump of the old feather remains in its socket to prevent the growth of a new one. Indeed, so strong is the tendency of Nature to keep the flights and tail perfect, that they will often remain in very fair condition, and a lost one be reproduced immediately at any time in the year, long after the bird has lost practically all its power to reproduce any of its smaller feathers at any time.

Quickening the Moult.

This is drifting far away from the original point of forcing a bird through the moult quickly. To do this heat and moisture are the chief, if not the only, essentials. In a room where the temperature can be regulated to a nicety, an even day and night temperature of seventy-five degrees is not too much, and if this is kept moist, the steam from a boiling kettle being allowed to escape into the room at regular intervals so much the better. This moisture is not only of great service in helping on the casting of the feathers, but is also invaluable for aiding the growth and development of the new plumage. Canaries moulted under such conditions on colour food will be found to excel in colour, quality, and quantity of feather, the plumage being much better developed in length, substance, and quality. Tepid baths are to be preferred under such conditions, and it goes without saying, every precaution to avoid chills must be taken.

The usual treatment of moulting birds in conjunction with these additional factors will very materially shorten the moulting period if put in force as soon as the moult begins. But to adopt these or any other means to endeavour to force a healthy bird to begin moulting, is scarcely a legitimate or a wise policy.

Some Observations on the Bunting Family.

By WALTER LOWNE.

Ortolan and Meadow Buntings.

The Ortolan Bunting (Emberiza hortulana) is not eligible to compete in classes at shows which are held under the patronage of the National British Bird and Mule Club. The reason, I presume, is that they are imported in large numbers to the London dealers. In captivity they get considerably fat and out of all proportion for being nice exhibition specimens. They are seldom met with here at liberty, although a few have been recorded as being taken in this country. When they are caught it is generally in the month of April.

They become very tame when caged, and do not take sufficient exercise (when given the opportunity to do so) to keep themselves from becoming fat. For that reason an outdoor aviary is the most suitable for keeping them in.

The Meadow Bunting (Emberiza cia) is a new bird to this country, if we may rely on all we hear and see; at any rate, as yet, only a few examples have been met with. The first that came under my notice were a pair in the possession of Mr. E. P. Staines, of Penge, who informed me that he received them from a catcher in Sussex. The next specimen I heard of was one, a male, exhibited at a show in Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, under Mr. J. F. Hills. It being then a new species to him, and very wild, too, Mr. Hills thought it wise to pass it, much to the disappointment of its owner, Mr. E. A. Hackett, who afterwards claimed it to be the first of this rare species recorded as being taken in the British Isles.

A picture of this particular bird graced the front-page of an early issue of CAGE BIRDS (February 21st, 1903), and from the report of its capture, it has been accepted by ornithologists as a British bird, and classed as an accidental visitor. Since them several of this species have appeared on the show bench at various times, their owners claiming a place in the British Bird classes. But there is generally a doubt about their nationality, and, if I remember rightly, there were no less than five entered at the last great show held at the Crystal Palace, only one of which secured special notice, and that a vhc. But all of them might have been marked wrong class.

Black-headed and Rustic Buntings.

The Black-headed Bunting (Emberiza melanocephala) is a very rare bird, and differs much from the Reed Bunting, although the latter is often called by the same name. A specimen is said to have been met with in Sussex. It has very slight claim to recognition as a British bird.

A specimen was shown at the Crystal Palace when the classification was under the old management. It secured first prize in four seasons in succession, but the following year, 1891, it failed to get a card as it was found to be a foreign specimen. That was the last I heard of it.

The Rustic Bunting (Emberiza rustica) is a rare bird. Little has been recorded of its habits. The birds of this species would seem on the whole not to differ much from the Reed Bunting. There have been but one or two examples of this species taken in this country.

A bird was shown in the Bunting class some three years ago at the Crystal Palace, which the owner claimed to be one of this species. Several well-known fanciers carefully examined it and all were of the opinion that it was only a hen Reed Bunting. Much correspondence appeared in the columns of the Fancy journals at the time respecting this specimen.

The Smallest of the Buntings.

The Little Bunting (Emberiza pusilla) is the smallest of the Bunting family; hence its name. It was unknown in Britain previous to 1864. One was taken at Brighton in November of that year. On examination it was concluded that the bird had not escaped from captivity.

Like the last species described, it is a native of the northern parts of Eastern Europe and Asia. It appears to have a wider range in its autumnal wanderings than the one previously mentioned.

Some Supposed Hybrids.

Pied Albino and fawn varieties have been met with at different times amongst the commoner species. The Yellow Bunting has produced the handsomest Albino I ever saw, and two different birds have appeared on the show bench and have secured first honours, which they well deserved.

Fawn-coloured Corn Buntings have been exhibited at some shows with equal success, and they make a nice addition to the rare-feathered class. Pied Reed Buntings have also come under my own personal notice.

A supposed Yellowhammer-Canary was shown at the Westminster Aquarium in the Hybrid class, but was passed as a hen Yellow Bunting.

A much bolder venture was made by an exhibitor at the Crystal Palace show of 1905. An exhibit was actually entered in the catalogue as a Lark-Yellowhammer (I wonder what next we shall hear of?). This bird was a hen Lapland Bunting.

The Stock or Store Cage.

Stock or store cages for Buntings require to be not less than sixteen inches long, fourteen inches high, and nine inches deep with two perches from back to front fixed in a position midway from the bottom of the cage, as this gives the bird the jump required when in a show-cage. Cover the bottom of the cage with sea sand when obtainable, with an addition of sharp grit, which the birds much enjoy.

These birds are subject to very scaly legs, which defect requires careful attention. To remove these scales the legs may be held in hot water with some soap powder added. Then the scales should be removed with the thumb nail, and the legs afterwards wiped dry with a soft handkerchief. Then one should apply some skin ointment every few days till the legs are quite healed. In some cases a bird caged up one year looks as if it might have been in captivity three years by the appearance of its coarse legs; more particularly is this the case with Snow Buntings.

About Show Cages.

Show cages require to be of different sizes according to the species of birds they are intended to house. For instance, a cage for a Corn Bunting would require to be larger than that for a Reed Bunting. One fourteen inches long, twelve inches high, and six inches deep would be of a suitable size for the larger kinds of Buntings.

The colour inside should be of a pretty apple-green enamel, which colour would suit most of these birds. The two perches should be screwed from the back so as to come to within half an inch of the front; this method does away with the necessity for a slot in the end of perch, and also prevents the possible loss of claws, which when it occurs is much against a bird's chance of winning, especially if in keen competition.

Feeding and Treatment.

The staple food required for these birds is plain Canary seed. Occasionally a few soaked ants' eggs may be given in a vessel by itself. Mealworms may also be given daily. The Yellow, Corn, and Reed Buntings are very fond of them, but I never yet had a Snow Bunting that would eat mealworms.

The seed hopper should always be kept with a good supply of seed, and care must be taken to see that the holes for this and the water vessels are large enough for the Corn Bunting to put its head through.

A Misfortune to Avoid.

I had the misfortune a few years ago to lose a fine Corn Bunting owing to the seed hopper not going down to its proper position, it having been attended to in a hurry. To my regret next morning I found the bird was in a bad plight, having pushed its head through; it was only with great difficulty we were able to get it back. And the bird had so much injured itself that I had no other alternative but to put an end to its misery (the verdict was misadventure). It was a bird I could ill afford to lose as it had taken honours at the Crystal Palace.

Another old favourite Corn Bunting which captured many prizes I kept for five years, but it moulted every alternate season. At last he became past showing owing to his legs becoming deformed, with age, I suppose.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET ST., LONDON.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

DURING the last week or so I have had the opportunity of seeing a little wild bird life. Amongst the birds noted a Kingfisher stands pre-eminent and a beauty he was, too. Chaffinches were seen in large numbers; one I noticed several times with plenty of size and colour. The Robins have now donned their new red jackets, and very perky and pretty they look hopping about the hedgrows; so also do the Wrens, carrying their tails up as they nimbly and silently trip from twig to twig. The Sand Martins appeared to be still feeding their broods in a few odd cases, several broods being only just nicely getting on the wing, and evidently receiving their "lessons" in the art of flycatching. Pied Wagtails were very numerous, and once or twice I thought I could detect a Grey amongst them. The Hedge Sparrows looked neat in their sober brown dress, and even the much-abused House Sparrow, under conditions of cleanliness, free from the grime and soot of the towns, is a bird not without attraction.

THE committee formed from the several societies having the welfare of the fancy and fanciers at heart, is now at work trying to obtain a few concessions from the railway companies in respect to the disabilities fanciers have to put up with at their hands. First and foremost is the 50 per cent. extra charge on the carriage of birds, and here they ask that in the case of birds in proper cases, travelling to and from shows, they shall travel at the ordinary rates. Then in regard to fanciers visiting shows, that they be allowed to travel at the price of a fare and a quarter, and that they be allowed to take their birds with them free. Should they be only successful in obtaining one of the concessions asked, it will be a great boon to the Fancy, and will earn them the grateful thanks of many members of the Fancy.

THIS week-end (Saturday) the Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club hold a meeting to arrange matters relating to shows where their competitions are to be held, and it is to be hoped a good number of members will put in an appearance at the appointed time, viz., 7 p.m., at their usual headquarters, the Market Tavern, Bradford.

I HEAR a rumour that a new competitor will have to be reckoned with on the show-bench during the coming season, and one who has been long in the Fancy and who has passed a very large number of birds through his hands, and, therefore, should know a little about them. His intentions are to "have a flutter" at the big prizes, and to him and to all others we can give welcome. There is this year greater value in competition than there ever has been before, so those who have the birds should make up their minds which prizes they intend to go for, as it will require a good start and good staying powers to capture some of them.

SEVERAL societies have arranged for lectures to fill up the gap between the present time and the beginning of the show season, and fanciers, whether they be members or not, can rely on a hearty greeting at any of these gatherings, while should anyone wish to join the society concerned he will be received with open arms.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

Across the Stubble.

The change in the weather has come a little too early for the harvest; much corn is still standing in the shock, and although it adds to the beauty of the landscape the crop is wasting while it stands in the fields. Big flocks of birds are scattered everywhere. I noticed one composed of several hundreds of Starlings. They frequented the wheat field day after day, although pasture land was close by. And one noticed that when this big army settled, the majority of them alighted on the corn shocks. They were a fidgety, flightly lot, and the least noise or approach of a human being would send them wheeling and turning in the air in graceful flight. So closely do they keep that it almost appears as though they must impede each other; they turn and settle as one bird. The Starling is no doubt a most useful bird, but the farmer could easily dispense with him twice during the year; that is, at seed time and during harvest. For the bird is a big eater, and a flock of five hundred, each with fifty grains of corn in its crop, means a big consumption of good food.

Walking across the stubble after the rain with the fresh, pure breeze blowing over miles of open country, makes one feel vigorous and healthy. The play of light and shade across the open as the sunshine chases the shadows over hill and valley, makes most beautiful pictures. At every few paces Nature presents itself in a different mood. Wild Ring Doves in pairs and in small flocks rise in the air, and give life to the scene. Linnets are plentiful, but feed mostly in scattered parties on the verge of the fields, where the weeds that have escaped the reaper are shedding thousands of tiny seeds, their ripe pods bursting in the sunshine. The hedgerows with all the wealth of summer growth, heavily laden with an assortment of berries, still hide growing broods of Green birds and Linnets. The Crimson-breasted fathers of the latter birds call anxiously from some elevated branch. Of our field birds these two species probably continue their nesting operations the longest, although, while we were parting the wild woodbine for a peep into a Greenbird's home, a well-built nest of the Hedge Sparrow was detected within a few feet of it. Three turquoise eggs showed every sign of freshness, but it is doubtful if anything will come of them. It is just possible the change in the weather will start the old birds into moult, and cause them to join the wandering parties so plentiful everywhere.

Our English Kestrel.

There are several species of Kestrels distributed throughout the world, but only one regularly visiting these shores. The bird is conspicuous by its habit of hovering. This has earned for it the common name of "Windover."

Seed and Insect Eaters.

It is computed that we have about eighty species of birds which live upon agricultural ground. Of this number about fifty live upon seeds, and the remainder are insectivorous. Neither of these two could be spared. If the seed eaters were exterminated the weeds would thrive and choke the corn and other farm produce, and if we lost our insect-eating birds, neither weeds nor corn would thrive, and the face of the earth would soon be covered with noxious insects and creeping things.

Along the Rocky Coast.

The Kittiwake is one of the most graceful of the Gulls. It breeds along the rocky coast preferring the lower ledges and projections. Their noisy clamour can be heard above the roar of the water, some time before one can get a look at the breeding site. Peeping over the tall cliffs, the birds can be seen below perching just out of reach of the tumbling waves as they dash against the rocks. Some of them will be flying buoyantly over the water, constantly repeating their cry. The scene is one full of life and animation, and one feels fascinated by the spectacle. On calm days the birds fly out to sea, and should the weather be favourable will remain away for a length of time, sleeping at night on the rolling billows. They never leave the sea.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars of subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendur and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

THE THING

that isn't what it seems finds no place with me. I do not sell you American cotton netting and call it thread, nor jute lines for hemp. Everything I sell is guaranteed to be exactly as described and advertised, and is sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless perfectly satisfactory to you your money is promptly refunded in full without question or comment. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾-inch mesh thread, 3 yards long, 4/-; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all are actually 5½ feet deep and strike 4 feet. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up complete with birch stave poles, birch pegs, and Russian hemp lines, with everything complete ready for immediate setting. Sparrow nets fitted complete on 19 ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; ditto on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and best on the market, and are guaranteed to catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. Mr. Jeffreys, the well-known Nightingale expert, and winner of CAGE BIRDS' recent essay competition, says: "I find your net traps the best I can get, and I always use them for Softbill catching." Loose netting, exactly same as my clap nets are made from, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep 3d. yard, 9 feet deep 4d. yard, post free. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. Round or square topped call cages, as supplied to hundreds of catchers and dealers; my price 3d. each, 2/6 dozen. Genuine Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made; does not run in sun nor freeze in winter, and will hold a Hawk or Rook on hottest day in summer; ¼-lb. 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Solid hemp pull lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, carriage paid. These lines are specially spun and finished without snarl or back twist, and are strong enough for boat lines. See following few testimonials; thousands more open for inspection any time. "Lower Hooe, near Plymouth, August 16th.—Sir, —Please send ½-lb. birdlime, as I had fine results from using your lime last season.—Yours, H. Burridge." "13, Pump-st., Nottingham, August 18th. —Sir,—Received pull line safe, and am very pleased with it and your way of doing business.—Yours, Mr. Harrison (48 years a Linnet catcher)." "Garth View, Bulith Wells, August 10th.—Sir,—Please send ½-lb. birdlime. A friend of mine will want some after he sees this, as we cannot get any good lime anywhere.—Yours, John Hyde." "10, St. George's-passage, Kent-st., Portsea.—Sir,—Please send following loose netting for clap nets. I had some from you two years ago which is just as good now as the day I had it, and I think it marvellous value for the money.—Yours, J. Devine." Mr. Guidey, the well-known catcher of Holbeach, says: "Please send following nets, as your netting is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS, in commenting on netting and lines used in making my nets, says: "They are of the very best quality, and nets made from such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users and stand a great amount of wear and tear." Everything required by catchers kept in stock. Please send stamp for full printed list and sample of netting, and compare sizes, quality, and prices with those of other makers. One trial solicited. See British Bird column for further advert.

TESTIMONIALS ARE

only slight proof of value, but the one below tells exactly what good value my birds are for money: Aberdeen, Sept. 8th. Sir,—Received Goldfinches quite safe; kindly accept my thanks for sending such good birds; shall show all three this season. Yours, W. McKenzie. I have grand stock large cock Goldfinches, peartree birds, pink of health, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, 12 12/6; larger birds, fit for immediate exhibition or moulers, and personally selected, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, dozen 16/-; hens 8/-; large red-breasted nut-brown cocks, cock brown Linnets, Goss birds, finest songsters living, every one warranted a cock bird, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/; genuine brancher cock Skylarks, now in song, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-; Roller Canary box cages, practically made, 1/- each, three 2/6, twelve 9/-; Thrush cages, wire sides, largest size, 2/6, double trap cage and Greenfinch, 1/3 complete, single 9d., double trap and cock Linnet, 1/6, slugie 1/-; anything and everything sent out on approval, and unless every satisfaction is given, money returned willingly without comment; sex guaranteed in each and every instance.—Sylvester, Practical Bird Catcher, Staffordshire Aviaries, Walsall.

THE LANCASHIRE LINNET KING.

I have been the largest Linnet catcher in the town for over 30 years. My birds are all warranted cocks, well on seed, and in the pink of condition; three for 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; special picked birds, 8d., 10d., and 1/- each. I hope to give satisfaction to everyone. Write to me and you will find me straightforward and honest. No fancy prices, nor yet hens for cocks.—P. Brade, Bird Stores, 89, Hammond-st., Preston, Lancs.

ENGLISH GOLDFINCHES.

WE have the largest stock of these beautiful birds in the kingdom at prices that cannot be equalled (neither by linnet kings, lark kings, or any such clap-trap royalty; our prices for cock Goldfinches, all on hard seed, 1s 1 6 each, or three for 4/-, 12/- per dozen, or specially selected cocks at 14/- per dozen; hens 6/- per dozen; splendid white-legged cock Goldfinches 2/6 and 3/6 each; all guaranteed and sent on approval. We have been patronised by English royalty.—Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk-rd., Preston.

WOULD PEOPLE WRITE

such letters as I publish week after week unless my birds were what I claimed for them? The fact of the matter is this, my birds are correctly described in the advertisement, therefore my customers get what they expect, and expect what they get. I do not describe ordinary specimens as "Massive Giants," nor Irish lime-caught birds as Worcestershire netted birds. I claim to have more Worcestershire birds through my hands than all other dealers put together, and defy contradiction. I have grand stock of genuine Worcestershire netted Goldfinches in pink of health and condition at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/-. Specially selected large, bold birds for exhibition, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few grand, clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, 2/6 and 3/- each. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in perfect health and condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-. Specially selected cocks for show, muling or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Over 70 dozen cock Linnets in stock, and every one guaranteed red-breasted, so customers may rely upon cocks for their money, as I do not stock hens. Clean-moulted two-year-old cock Linnets, in song, 2/6 each; Redpolls, all clean moulted, three 1/3, six 2/3, twelve 3/6; cock Chaffinches, well on seed, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6; cock Greenfinches, three 1/-, six 1/6; cock Blackbirds and Throshes, well on food, 1/6 each; hand-reared talking Magpie, 4/-; Carrion Crow, 2/6; grand lot clean moulted cock Larks, in pink of health, all big, hold birds, not half hens, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; few, guaranteed in song, 1/-, 1/6 and 2/- each. These Larks are all Worcestershire caught, not sea-coast birds, and absolutely finest lot ever seen. Young cock Canaries, in splendid song, 4/- each; hens, 1/- and 1/6 each. All birds are sent out on approval at my sole risk, either on receipt cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and cash fully refunded if every satisfaction not given. See following few letters, and kindly note all are entirely unsolicited, and have never before been published, as I am constantly receiving similar letters, I have no need to repeat them time after time. "Pontefract, August 22nd. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived safely, and looks a fine bird. I thank you very much for the generous way you have treated me, as I had no claim on you concerning the other bird which died, and never expected you to send another in its place. I feel I have found a dealer in whom I can trust. Yours, A. L. Brattley." "51, Talbot-street, Pinxton, August 28th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch, and well satisfied with same. Yours, S. Cathera'l." "West Hartlepool, August 22nd. Sir,—Received Linnets quite safe, and am quite satisfied with them. Yours, W. Thayne." "18, Chambers-road, Southport, August 21st. Sir,—Received Skylark, and am well satisfied with it. Yours, H. Johnson." "7, Midyard, Harrington, September 4th. Sir.—Received the three Goldfinches, and am well satisfied, as they are three very nice birds. Yours, J. Mullen." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorkshire, September 2nd. Sir,—Please send me ¼ lime. I shall send next week for some Linnets, and hope they are as good as last year. I think it is time you called yourself a king (I don't, W. Gore), as your birds have a wide record about here, they have won more contests than any other birds, and we have a few from elsewhere, and they are not so good as the Birmingham Linnets. They are all mad about here to get your birds. Yours, C. Hart." On September 7th Mr. Hart again writes as follows:—"14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorks. Sir,—I have had Linnets from you before, not only one or two, but dozens, and they were the pride of Skinningrove for size and quality, and not only that, but for contest singing, and I must say you are as honest as the day is light. I have dealt with several through C.B., but I find you thoroughly honest and straightforward. I received birdlime and find it far superior to that I had from elsewhere. Please send me six more Linnets. There are a lot of self-styled kings, but you are the king about here, and have proved it by the birds you have sent. Yours, C. Hart." "Dunipace, Scotland, September 7th. Sir,—Thanks very much for bird you sent me. I am highly pleased with it. Yours, W. Binnie." "Chapel-row, Haswell Colliery, September 9th. Sir,—Received the six Linnets all right, and they give every satisfaction, I am well pleased with them. Yours, George Cole." "Huntly, Scotland, September 9th. Sir,—Received bird safe, and am highly delighted with bird and promptness. Yours, G. Murray." "Garston, Liverpool, September 11th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch safely, I must thank you very much, for it is the nicest Goldfinch I have ever seen. Yours, W. Bryant." "10, Sun-street, Nottingham, September 14th. Sir,—Please send six cock Goldfinches. I sent elsewhere for six cocks, and he sent me three hens and three cocks. Yours, B. Wilton." "28, Halifax street, Bolton, September 15th. Sir, Thrush arrived safe, and I am well pleased with him. If I want any more birds I shall know where to send to, so good luck to you. J. Robinson." The above letters are from people who, apart from business transactions, are entire strangers to me. All are open to inspection in their original Government stamped envelopes at any time, and I offer £50 to any person who can prove that I have ever, either directly or indirectly, solicited a single testimonial during the whole course of my business career. All birds sent out are guaranteed well cured and properly on hard seed before sent, and are sent on approval on the distinct understanding that unless birds are perfectly satisfactory, you return them, and I return money in full promptly and cheerfully, without question or comment. Can you imagine fairer terms than these? See Appliance column for further advertisement.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING OF THE WORLD.

And Champion of all Champions, patronised by all the leading exhibitors, Mule breeders and contest singers. I have the finest strain in the world bar none; if you doubt my word look up back numbers of CAGE BIRDS and see the prizes I have won, and the winners I have supplied, and see where the other Linnet kings are. I see one Linnet king try to run down the enormous price I have got for my good birds; well, he is not a judge, and the world can see I am of a different class to the 4/- a dozen Linnet kings. I have the largest bird shop in Leeds, and the cars stop at my door every minute. I am 25 years a recognised judge. Gentlemen, I have the following for sale:—Splendid pear-tree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England; these are the right sort and not imitations, 3/-, 3/6, and a few gems 4/-. I have the largest stock of Linnets in the world for the show bench; my A1 Linnet cannot be equalled for size; beautifully pencilled, steady as rocks; this class of birds stood alone last year, price 3/-. Linnets singing grand, with cage, and my book of secrets, and a packet of mixture, 4/; they have beautiful red breasts; grand cock Larks with beautiful polished cage 3/6; Linnets like I have supplied some of the largest clubs in England 1/-, 1/6 and 2/- each; sure winners. I have the largest Linnet Mule in Leeds, right for the show bench, in show condition, finger tame price 10/6; can win beautiful Redpolls 1/-; Chaffinches 1/-; house-moulted Bramblefinch 2/6; steady bird contest cages 1/6; 15/- per dozen, clubs supplied; best bird-lime in England, 1/- gill, 2/- per pint; book of secrets 1/6; 4 packets of my special mixture 1/-; send your cash to the editor, and your orders to me—that is all I want, all on 7 days approval. Gentlemen, I am in no way connected with any other Allen in Leeds, so don't be gulled; send to the original Linnet firm. Thanking you all for kind patronage at my bird stall in Leeds market, where I sold 34 dozen Linnets last Saturday. Over 1,000 Linnets in stock.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-street, Leeds.

THE SHOWS.

CLASGOW (Confined) NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

The annual show was held in the Grand National Hall, Main-street, Gorbals, Glasgow, on September 12th. The membership is 67, and over 100 exhibits were entered in the contest. The birds were of good style, but somewhat backward in size. The day was bright, but a sharp touch of frost in the morning gave the judges trouble to get the birds to show what was in them. The judges' awards gave satisfaction. The judges were Messrs. Hart (Paisley), Hope (Edinburgh), Low (Dundee), and Webster (Greenock). The president, Mr. McIlwain, was in attendance, and with Mr. Black, the secretary, had the arrangements in excellent order, and to these gentlemen and the committee the success of the event is due. Generally, it was considered a foregone conclusion that Mr. McClure would again win the cup and medal. Contrary to this the cup was carried off by Mr. A. Buchanan (Glasgow) with a neat yellow cock of Belgian type. Mr. A. Lang's yellow hen was the runner-up. It was stated that Mr. McClure's best young birds were late bred.

YELL. CK. A.C.: 1, cup, and medal, Buchanan, neat, erect, prominent shoulders, decided droop, clean front, straight body and wing, Belgian type; 2, McIlwain, superior size, good body, had softened down and would not be drawn out in the afternoon; 3, J. Orr, nice body, wing, and drive, good size; 4, McClure, good size, erect, excels in body and wing; 5, 7, Stewart; 6, Bott; 8, Renwick. BUFF: 1, Ward, neat smart buff cock, nice body and wing, well up, good drive and neck, sweet head, wins easy; 2, Knox, erect, fine drive, good style; 3, McIlwain, good all-round stamp; 4, Gray, grand solidly-built bird, not fairly through the moult; 5, Banks, nice body and wing, average drive; 6, Lang; 7, McCormack; 8, Orr. YELL. HEN: 1, Lang, in first feather, took a splendid position, favourite with visitors; 2, Ward, modern type, well up, good drive, smart and ready in movement; 3, Bennett, modern, compact type, fine top, long neck, sweet head, erect, nicely proportionate; 4, McLellan, better size, modern style, good top and drive; 5, McClure; 6, Renwick; 7, Muir; 8, Orr. BUFF: 1, Fulton, well set back, grand top and drive, fine body and wing, wins easily; 2, Blair, erect, nice drive, quick in movement; 3, Gray, well built, solid hen, good bib and drive; 4, Stevenston, erect fine head, neck, and drive, good body, nice action; 5, Orr; 6, Blair; 7, Fleming; 8, McCormack.

MOFFAT.

A splendid show of cage birds was held in connection with the Moffat and Upper Annandale A. and H.S. on September 11th. The show was held in a large tent in the show yard, and proved a great success. Mr. Johnstone, the energetic secretary had everything in apple-pie order, and was ably assisted by Mr. J. Millar. The Scotch Fancy classes were small, but some good birds were staged by Messrs. Thompson and Lawson. Border Fancies made a nice show, some grand specimens being on view. Mr. Robinson won the B.F.C.C. medal with a nice foul yellow. Mules and British were a fine lot, being greatly admired by the crowds of visitors. Mr. A. Walker (Lesmahagow) judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

SCOTCH FANCY: 1, 2, Thompson; 3, Lawson. BUFF PIED.: 1, 2, 3, Thompson. GREEN OR FOUL: 1, 2, Thompson; 3, Lawson. YELL. PIED: 1, Thompson. BORDER YELL.: 1, 2, Clark; 3, Watt; 4, Varrie. A judging competition will follow. Messrs. Woolhouse, Foster, Kent, and Lovesy kindly gave special prizes. Arrangements were completed for outing to Amberley. Mr. F. Easterling (Battersea) was elected to membership. Several special prizes were offered for annual show, and the classification for same had been arranged by a sub-committee, but was held over till next meeting.—ROGERS and MAZZONI, Hon. Secs.

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Meeting held in Halls, 122, Ingram-street, Glasgow, the vice-president, Mr. Ball, in the chair. Applications for club patronage were then gone into. The following were successful:—St. Andrew's, Broughty Ferry, City of Glasgow, Kelty and Blair adam (conditionally), Glasgow and West of Scotland, Cupar, Kilsyth, Scottish National, Broxburn, and Bathgate. It was arranged that the trophy subscribed for be in the form of a shield, the winner to have his name engraved thereon, also a gold medal, and the runner-up a silver medal. The trophy to be competed for at the following shows: City of Glasgow, Cupar, Scottish National, and Bathgate, most points to count. Exhibitors to nominate six birds. Members' subscriptions are now overdue.—A. W. WATSON, Sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

Meeting held September 12th, in Buchanan's Hotel, Edinburgh. There was a large gathering of members, Mr. C. R. Drysdale, hon. president, in the chair. The following volunteered to assist the executive on show day, and were accepted, Messrs. W. Rough, A. Smith, J. Dalgleish, J. McLennan, W. Rodger, and J. Robertson. Entries of birds for competition were then taken. I would again request members when sending entries to give a clear and full description of each bird, class, and price to be sold at, also to let me have entries at their very earliest, but not later than September 21st. This will help me to get catalogue ready for show. Birds per rail must reach Hall Friday evening September 25th. Judging begins Saturday 9 a.m. We anticipate a good show, and hope to be favoured with a large assemblage of members and fanciers.—J. R., MEIKLE, Sec.

TWITTERINGS.

Dr. Rogerson (Dundee), writes: Will Mr. Mitchelson, of Kirkcaldy, who wrote me recently, kindly forward his address?

My address is now 25, Holdich Street, Peterboro', instead of No. 4, writes Mr. H. Popple. I give this notification as schedules seem to be going astray.

The only fanciers' journal read here now is CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Clark (Moffat), and its contents are eagerly discussed by the various fanciers every week.

Mr. J. Broxup, naturalist, of Burnley, writes asking us to request Mr. G. Dixon (Cumberland), to send on his full address, so that birds ordered may be forwarded.

Kindly note that my address is now 19, Alexandra Road, St. Ann's Road, S. Tottenham, London N., writes Mr. Thos. D. Jackson. Letters and schedules should therefore be so addressed.

We note that at the next meeting of the Wallsend and Mid Tyne C.B.A., on September 24th, the question of "When is a Clear not a Clear?" is down to be discussed.

I have changed my address from Northcote Street, writes Mr. H. Dickson, the well-known breeder and exhibitor of Norwich Plainheads, to 65, Turner Street, Northampton.

At our annual show, to be held November 25th and 26th, writes Mr. F. J. Bingham, hon. sec., Tonbridge and Dis. F.A., all classes (except a few members' classes) are absolutely open. Schedules will be out shortly.

Amongst the many testimonials published in his advertisements of British Birds, by W. Gore, of 131, Gooch Street, Birmingham, two of them published this week will be of special interest to Linnet fanciers, who on no account should miss reading them.—ADVT.

Any fancier wishing to become a member of the Crook Original C.B.S. and P.S., writes Mr. A. Bowes, the secretary, will kindly note that September 21st is the last date for subscriptions to be paid to allow them to compete for members' cups and specials.

We hear that Mr. F. J. Bingham, of 88, Barden Road, Tonbridge, has been appointed hon. sec. of the Tonbridge and Dis. F.A., in place of Mr. Kirke who, owing to his removal from Tonbridge, finds it impossible to devote the necessary attention to the society's affairs.

A highly interesting "Bird Number," one of a series of monthly magazines issued by the Californian Promotion Committee (San Francisco), reaches us by courtesy of Mr. Fred. Hammond (Bradford), and to certain of its novel features we shall hope to refer in a future number.

I have received intimations from the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club and the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club that our society has secured their patronage, writes Mr. R. Whitton, secretary, Broughty Ferry C.B.S. Open Show, and shall be glad if exhibitors will make a note of this.

Owing to our next meeting night falling on Race Saturday, writes Mr. C. Irvine, secretary of the Ayr and Dis. C.H.C., the meeting has been postponed till Monday, October 19th, when we hope to see a large turn out of members and friends. Mr. Dan Swan will give a washing exhibition.

The judges at the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O. A. show, to be held in the Grand National Halls, Gorbals, Glasgow, on Saturday, September 19th, writes Mr. Thos. Smith, the hon. sec., are Messrs. Hamilton (Caldercruix), J. Watson (Glasgow), J. Kean (Edinburgh), and D. Clark (Rutherglen).

I hear on good authority, I regret to say, that Mr. W. H. Bamsey (late secretary of the Derby C.B.S.), is now, and has been for the last six weeks, confined to his bed, writes "A Fancier." I am told that he now lies in a critical condition, his sufferings being very severe. I am sure we all hope for his speedy recovery.

We learn that the City and Suburban A.C.B. hope to arrange to play one or two other London societies at cricket during next summer, the secretary, Mr. Wynn, being desirous of placing these events in the regular "fixture list" of his association. Such pleasant means of whiling away an afternoon ought to become popular.

We are informed that a show is to be held by the Earlston P.P. and C.B.S. on October 31st, at which cage birds will be well provided for. Mr. J. Sinton (Selkirk), will judge the Border Fancy Canaries, and Mr. J. Mason (Peebles), the Norwich Canaries and British birds. The secretary is Mr. John Brockie, 3, Jamefield, Earlston, N.B.

The Bramley and Dis. O.S., writes Mr. E. Craven, the hon. sec., have secured a spendid room for their annual show on November 7th in the Bramley Church Schools, Hough Lane. This room has been engaged for the first time. It is well lighted, and is close to the cars. We are providing 27 classes, and have been favoured with the patronage of the Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C.

The Stirling and Dis. O.S. Club show, to be held on November 21, writes Mr. G. Hislop, the secretary, is open to all residing within ten miles on one side, and as far north and west, so that Stirling is the nearest club to which exhibitors can belong. The subscription is 2s. 6d., and the latest date for admission to membership so as to entitle persons to compete at the show is October 3.

At the next meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club, on Thursday next, September 24th, at 8 p.m., at headquarters, "The Feathers," Great Chapel Street, Westminster, there will, write Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, the hon. secs., be a discussion on the keeping of insectivorous birds, which Mr. G. E. Weston has kindly promised to open. All fanciers and friends are invited to be present.

We notice that provision is made for ten cage-bird classes in the schedule of the members' show, to be held by the Bush Hill Park Utility and Exhibition F.S. in the Institute, Percival Road, Bush Hill Park, on October 17th. The judge is Mr. J. D. Hamlyn, and the secretary is Mr. A. F. Uncle, 112, Fotheringham Road, Bush Hill Park, Middlesex. The show will be opened at 1 o'clock by the Rev. H. G. Gray.

At the committee meeting of the City of Glasgow O.A., held on September 10th, writes a correspondent, the president, Mr. Jardine, stated that a friend of his, a Mr. Thos. G. Paterson, would present to the city show a solid silver cup and gold badge for the best young Scotch Fancy or young Belgian. The cup is to be won three times (not necessarily in succession) before becoming the property of any one person.

Mr. John B. Henderson (of Glasgow), holiday-making in the Far North, sends us a charming picture-postcard from Hjaiteyri, Northern Iceland, and rightly surmises that it will be the first we have received from a reader of CAGE BIRDS in that locality. He states he will soon be home again and amongst the stock. Perhaps Mr. Henderson may have something to tell readers concerning the bird-life in far away Iceland.

What a record for Sandiford's colour feed! Sold 1½ tons more than last year. I give you proof. There is not another colour-feed on earth—only imitations which claim success from my feed, "because they give specials." I give you value for money. No one can deny that in the two sections "where you must have colour to win," at last Crystal Palace, Norwich and Cinnamons, every 1st prize winner never tasted any colour-feed but our Royal Red. (ADVT.)

I was surprised and delighted to see a drawing of my Green Crest hen on the front page of CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. J. Pooley, and I think great credit is due to your artist for his life-like drawing. I showed her four times, winning 1st Horticultural Hall, 1st Wimbledon, 1st City and Suburban (special best in show), 2nd Crystal Palace (special best Crest shown by a member of the L.P.O.S.) I thank you very much, and with your paper C.B. every success.

For list of SHOW DATES FIXED, see page 157.

Mr. John E. Donald (Aberdeen), has been appointed Crest judge for the annual show of the Aberdeen O.S., which is to be held on December 25th and 26th, writes Mr. John Bryson, the sec. Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot), is to judge the Norwich, and Mr. G. Finnie (Aberdeen), the British and foreign birds.

Members of the Enfield F.A., writes Mr. A. Neve, will kindly note that owing to our late secretary, Mr. Mills, having left Gordon Hill to take larger premises, he has had to resign his position. I have been appointed secretary in his place, and am hoping to receive the support of the members. They will, therefore, please send a bumping entry for the annual show, the date of which will be announced shortly. My address, to which all communications should be sent, is Bush Hill Cottage, Winchmore Hill, N.

Just now, says the "Bristol Times," an effort is being made in the upper part of Gloucestershire to secure the proper observance of the order for the protection of the Goldfinch, fears being entertained that this exceedingly pretty and useful bird may become extinct. It will be remembered that the County Council Protection Order came into force some years ago, when the numbers of Goldfinches in the county had diminished almost to a vanishing point, and it should not be forgotten that they are protected all the year round.

A correspondent writing from Peckham wonders how it is that the local dealers cannot supply such birds as Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Siskins, Twites, etc. He states that being desirous of purchasing these species, he went round the shops in the district, but failed to discover any. He must remember, for one thing, that it is too early in the season for Siskins and Twites; also, that owing to the operations of the Wild Birds Protection Act in the surrounding counties, metropolitan dealers do not find it easy to obtain English Goldfinches and Bullfinches.

"British Birds" (shilling monthly).—The September issue of this magazine contains an interesting article on bird roosts and routes, by Mr. Bruce F. Cummings and another by Mr. W. H. Mullens, M.A., on "Some Early British Ornithologists and Their Works," which forms the third of this series. Mr. F. B. Kirkman, B.A., also continues his fine series of articles on "Variations in the Nests of the Arctic and Common Terns"; the instalment is accompanied by some excellent photographs. Some observations on the more important additions to our knowledge of British Birds since 1899, by H. F. Witherby and N. F. Ticehurst, and a large number of "Notes" go to complete a capital shillingsworth.

The interest that is being taken in the society by the secretary of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S. was, writes Mr. E. Meades (Plumstead), fully shown by Mr. Hamer on Thursday last coming up to our meeting from Bucks, where he is spending his holiday, and returning to end the same, which I hope he will much enjoy. It is to be hoped that each member will show a like interest in the society, also other fanciers, by supporting our venture at the Amersham Hall on October 8th and 9th, by giving us a good entry, which will show Mr. Hamer that his efforts to make the fixture a great success are appreciated. I might say that there is a good number of specials; also a good number of classes.

A Rare Albino.

Mr. S. R. Ellison writes from Cramlington to a Newcastle paper to record the appearance of an "all-white or cream-coloured Swallow," seen by him at West Sleekburn Farm. This is a very rare Albino.

A Dainty Dish.

Since Mr. Rider Haggard ferociously attacked the Sparrow, the question of this bird's usefulness has been much discussed. Any cook who has prepared "Quail pie" at an eightpenny four-course dinner will answer for that.

Little Willie Knew!

At a certain school examination one of the questions asked was to explain the reason for the use of the hyphen in the word "bird-cage."

There must have been a young fancier amongst the scholars, for one of the replies was "The use of the hyphen in the word bird-cage is for the bird to stand on, and is made of stick."

Rare Birds in Norfolk.

A fine adult Sabine's Gull in full summer plumage was shot on Breydon Mere, Gt. Yarmouth, on September 2nd. Also an adult Sandwich Tern was captured on the 5th, on the same waters, writes Mr. W. Lowne. A Turkey Vulture was shot at Caister, two miles from Gt. Yarmouth, some ten days ago. It has the appearance of being an escaped bird, and is no doubt one of the lot lost by Mr. Hamlyn a few weeks ago.

The Dinner Gong.

In Miss North's "Recollections of a Happy Life," she describes how a lady whom she visited in Brazil had many tame pets; there were two Macaws, one, called "the mayor," red and green. "The mayor" was much attached to one of the cats, and they would huddle close together in the sun for hours, scratching each other's heads. There was also a Peacock which mounted a certain tree every evening at six and screamed; if the cook were asked why dinner was late, she would probably answer, "It is not time, the Peacock has not screamed yet."

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

THE PORTRAYAL OF PRIZE WINNERS.

Would You Like to Have a Portrait of Your Successful Bird as a Memento?

It has for some time past been evident to us that the system under which prize winners have hitherto been illustrated in CAGE BIRDS has left much to be desired. It has, for instance, generally been necessary, when a successful exhibitor desired a particular bird of his to be portrayed in CAGE BIRDS, for him to have to send his bird to a London show, where, by arrangement with our artist a sketch has been taken of it for the owner, the picture subsequently appearing in this journal. Exhibitors in Scotland, the North of England, and Wales, have consequently in many cases been unable to have their favourites delineated before an admiring cage bird world.

Good News.

For the forthcoming show season we have, however, been able to make such arrangements as will enable any exhibitor in the country to have his bird portrayed either upon the front cover or in the inner pages by the best available artist in the country, at the lowest possible cost. Mr. H. Norman, whose work on "Cage Birds" with pencil, pen, and brush has for some years now placed him in the position of premier artist of the Fancy, intends visiting a number of large provincial cage-bird shows, where his services will be freely available (by arrangement with us) for the purpose of sketching prize winners of every variety. A list of such shows, with the dates, is herewith appended, and from this it will be seen that north, south, east, and west will be thoroughly and equally represented.

Give Your Instructions Now!

Orders for the sketching of exhibits at any of these shows should be placed at once with our Manager, who will be very pleased to communicate terms, dates, etc., to all desirous of seeing their birds pictured in the leading bird journal.

Apart from the wide publicity accorded to such sketches, there must be something particularly pleasing in the notion of having a permanent, accurate, and skilfully-drawn memento of one of your prize winners. The original drawing will be given to you after it has been reproduced, and the price for the whole transaction we honestly declare to be a mere 25 per cent. (one-fourth) of its proper cost. Both Mr. Norman and ourselves are making considerable financial sacrifice to secure this equal pictorial representation for exhibitors. We should be very pleased, both of us, to see the idea taken up with enthusiasm, and as many commissions placed with us as we can cope with.

N I S I E W I—All Treated Alike.

We have not selected the dates and shows given below in any preferential spirit, but by reason of the fact that our artist, in connection with his judging engagements and his own private business, happens to have those particular dates available. We hope next year to be able to make such arrangements with him as will secure his presence at our other centres, but meanwhile we feel sure that our readers will hail with delight the prospect of seeing prize winners from every part of the country depicted in CAGE BIRDS, instead of, as hitherto, a majority of exhibits depicted from amongst those appearing at London shows.

The List of Shows Mr. Norman Attends This Year.

In addition to the shows given underneath, our artist will be attending all London fixtures appearing in our Show Dates Fixed column, including, of course, the Great National Crystal Palace Show which we hope to illustrate on just as extensive a scale this year as we have in the past, and, if possible, more fully than ever before.

Herewith we give the list of shows referred to above, and would again impress upon our intending clients to communicate with our Manager immediately, should they wish to see their birds portrayed on or in CAGE BIRDS this season:—

October	16th.—	City of Glasgow.
,,	20th.—	Plymouth (Western Counties).

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Go Light and Die.

"Anxious."—Your feeding is probably at the root of your trouble, and just those specimens which have some little weakness or delicacy of constitution are affected by it, and sooner or later succumb. Breeding should be quite over before this time, so I am assuming you have no young but what are already able to do for themselves. Therefore, feed and treat as follows for a week, and you will probably find your trouble vanish. Give an unlimited supply of good sound Canary seed as a staple, and separately a small teaspoonful per bird of summer rape twice a week, a pinch of hemp twice a week, and three times a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg-food, or bread and milk. Give extras alternately and on different days, so that the birds get a different one each day. Give a scrap of green-food, or a few plantain stalks, every other day. For the birds that are now ill feed as above, but do not give the hemp seed. Give a small piece of bread dipped in milk, slightly sprinkled with maw, and two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it in place of the hemp. Also well mix two drops of the emulsion in the sponge cake each time you give it until they are well. In their drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and twenty drops of whiskey for the first three days; after that give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and fifteen drops of chemical food on the alternate days. Continue this for a week, when you may leave off the acid, but continue the chemical food for a week or two longer. Keep cage clean, well strewn with gritty sand, and see the birds are not troubled with red mites.

The Finishing Touch.

Learner.—If you do not mind a little expense to make a good job of your combination flight and breeding cage, I would advise you to finish it off in the following manner. First of all sandpaper it over smoothly inside and outside, finishing inside with No. 1, and going on outside to No. 00. Blow away all the dust from the joints, etc., and run a little stream of boiling glue all about the inside joints, letting it go gently so as to sink into the joints and fill them up flush. When cool enough, wipe over the edges of the glue so that when dry they will not form a ridge. Set aside to dry. Next brush over the inside lightly with turpentine, and whilst this sinks in the surface get a tin of ecru bath enamel and thin down enough to give a very thin coat with an equal bulk of turpentine. Stir it thoroughly together. Now give the inside a coat of this, putting it on as thinly as possible, and working it down well into all the corners. Let this dry well, and then give another thin coat of rather stronger enamel. If this does not seem to have covered it well enough, let it dry and give another thin coat. Always give two or three very thin coats in preference to one thick coat, which is apt to make the job look blotchy and amateurish. Now fill up any cracks about the outside, nail holes, etc., with beeswax. Brush over with a coat of thin size, made in a thin cream with venetian red. When dry, rub off the surplus, and the outside is ready to polish or stain. The former requires a little practice to ensure a good job, so I would advise you to use stain. Either mahogany or ebony (black) as will best match the other furniture in the room. As before, apply it in thin coats, using a fair-sized camel-hair brush, and using it always in the same direction—along the grain of the wood. Two coats should be sufficient, allowing each to dry hard before applying the next. When both coats are dry and hard, apply a coat of clear copal varnish. This is a slow-drying varnish, and will give you plenty of time to work it on nicely to make an even surface. The inside of this cage could be washed out quite safely without any danger of warping it. If you require a rather cheaper method, which will be less permanent and not so safely washable, use an enamel paint, such as Aspinall's, instead of the bath enamel, and apply it in the same manner.

More Errors of Diet.

North Wales.—If the deaths continue after a week or so of the following prescribed treatment, I would advise you to have a post mortem on one of them to ascertain whether you have a mild type of septic fever among them. But I have no doubt whatever that be the immediate cause of death what it may be, the predisposing cause is your method of feeding, which is far from correct. Adopt general treatment recommended to "Anxious," and treat birds that are ill in same way. Of the samples No. 1 is not suitable for a staple diet for confined birds. It contains too much linseed and inga. A teaspoonful per bird as an occasional treat would be beneficial, but that is its only proper use for Canaries kept in cages. No. 2 is a very useful form of egg-food for rearing young, and might always be used if the birds do not pick out the grains of egg and reject the rest. No. 3, remark to No. 2 applies here if the birds eat the food freely, though, as a rule, I prefer a freshly-made food for the small quantity the young should have. No. 4 is a very fair sample of gritty sand, and quite suitable for the floors of cages of small birds.

A Troublesome Yorkshire.

Nunhead.—Your bird either caught a severe chill on its journey, and was exposed to draught soon after, or it came from a warm room to one that was considerably colder. Am inclined to think one of the last two causes is the correct solution. It is certain some such exposure has taken place somehow. Another point which will increase the trouble is that the bird appears to be either dropping into moult or badly infested with red mites, as shown by his constantly picking himself. Examine cage well, especially about the perch ends and joints of door, and if you find any mites take steps to eradicate same. Keep it in a snug place free from draughts (you need not necessarily overheat it), and in a nice bright position. Do not give cold baths until it is better. Feed as advised to "Anxious," and in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water mix twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together. Give this two days in every three until trouble is removed, and pure water on each third day. By the way, you can scarcely hope for the bird to resume its song now until after its moult, which should commence very soon, even if it is not already in progress.

Eggs Not Hatching.

G.K.—The eggs were certainly not unfertile, as you call them, seeing they were addled after being sat upon for the full time. An unfertile egg will still remain quite clear, and to all appearances new laid, after being sat upon, if the shells are perfect; but if the shells are too porous they often dry up, whereas in a fertile egg, which is one that has been fertilised by the male, when sat upon the germ will start to develop into a chick. The process of development may be arrested, and the germ die from various causes, at any stage of development, when the result is either an addled egg or a chick dead in shell. The cause of addled eggs in the great majority of cases is either weakness in the germ, due to one or both birds being out of condition, or to the eggs getting chilled during incubation. In your case I am inclined to think it was due to the hens being out of condition, and this opinion is strengthened by the fact that they only laid two eggs in each clutch. You should feed the birds well during the moult and get them into a good hardy condition by next spring, and then avoid mating too early. Provide yourself also with a pair or two of common Norwich for feeders, in case the Crested or Crest-bred hens do not make good parents. You will find fuller particulars as to feeding and winter treatment in CAGE BIRDS' "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you say you have, than it is possible to give here.

Any Other Variety.

Wood.—1. If there is a covered portion to your aviary to keep out the wet, and where the bird can retire to at will for shelter, there should be no necessity whatever to cage them up and bring them indoors. All the ordinary common types of the Canary are quite able to winter outdoors if they have not been coddled before turning out, especially if they have a nice space for exercise. 2. The chances are greatly in favour of this bird being a common German hen. They are decidedly smaller and paler in colour than Norwich. The weak attempt at singing is not always a criterion as to sex. Many hens do this. If it is a cock it should come in song as soon as the moult is over, and then the throat will be seen to throb and pulsate very plainly as it sings. 3. If your aviary is large, so that the birds have plenty of exercise, the Canaries will take no harm whatever from eating the teazle and other seeds placed there for the British Finches.

Aviary Accommodation.

C. Farrell.—As your aviary is only two feet wide, you might have made a double-tier one of it, by adding a floor midway between top and bottom, when its accommodation would have been just double what it is now. In calculating how many birds an aviary will accommodate, height is of little account, but floor space is very important. As it stands, your aviary will only accommodate 14 birds the size of a Norwich Canary. Being placed near a window you must be careful that it does not get a cold draught in it when the window is open. The Roller would undoubtedly sing better in a smaller cage by himself than he will in this aviary in company of a hen. You should certainly not keep cocks and hens together now, unless you wish to encourage futile attempts at breeding.

What is Maw Seed?

A.V.—The maw seed of commerce is certainly not the seed of the common garden or field poppy. The seed of these species is usually of dark brown hue, whilst the bluish-grey colour of maw is natural to it, and not caused by any manufacturing process, as you imagine. Although not quite certain of the identity of the maw of commerce, it is the product of an Indian species of the poppy family—the common opium poppy. Still, I see no objection to using the dark-coloured seed of the wild and garden poppies, especially for British birds. I have used it myself without any ill effect whatever. This was many years ago, and I confess that if both kinds are equally accessible, I prefer the bluish imported seed on account of its rather larger size.

Bowel Trouble.

Anxious (Swansea).—You do not say whether you are colour feeding the birds or not. If so, it would be interesting to know how your "feed" is mixed. You also omit to say how you feed. On Wednesdays and Saturdays you say you give a pinch of seed. Is it linseed that you mean? If it is, or if you use any colour food containing crushed linseed, stop it at once. First of all see all your seeds are perfectly sweet and good. Feed on plain Canary, with a small piece of bread and milk every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed for the first week; after that substitute a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it for the bread and milk. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash, well shaken together, in each two tablespoonfuls of water. Give this every second day for a week, and on alternate days four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. After the first week these may be discontinued if the birds are better, and twenty drops of chemical food given instead each day for another week or fortnight. Have sent reply by post in the exceptional circumstances, though you failed to comply with Rule 7.

Undesirable Companions.

F. Satchwell.—Your birds are suffering from constipation, which is undoubtedly caused by their eating the soft food provided for the Blackbird. It is never a good plan to keep Canaries and insect-eaters together, unless in very large places where they have, so to speak, unlimited space. Either separate Canaries from Softbills or devise some plan to prevent their getting at the food of the latter; otherwise you cannot expect any permanent cure. Add a small teaspoonful of Epsom salts to each half pint of drinking water every second day until constipation is removed. Also give a greater variety of green-food, such as adding a little of the flowering heads of groundsel, or a spray of watercress, or chickweed. A bit of ripe pear or plum would also be useful occasionally instead of apple on account of their aperient qualities.

Troubles in Battalions.

Dublin Tyro.—I have little doubt but that the birds are subject to draught or damp, although the arrangement of the door and window, as shown on your plan, does not seem much like it. Perhaps there is a stairway, fireplace, or some outlet in the same corner as the cages which draws the current of air from the door round that way before it gets to the window. If any draught at all exists you must remove the birds. Farther along the same wall almost opposite the window, but a trifle nearer the door, seems to be a good position, judging from your plan. Feed on plain Canary seed as a staple, and give a small teaspoonful of summer rape twice a week, a pinch of hemp twice a week, and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake three times a week. Give these separately and alternately. Give a small spray of green food every second day, and when this is not available substitute a bit of raw or boiled carrot, or a bit of sweet apple. Keep cages supplied with gritty sand, see that they are not infested with red mite (I rather think these gentry are the cause of the bareness about the head), and do not give cold baths until the breathing is alright. In the drinking water give ten drops of glycerine, and as much Epsom salts, every second day for a week, as will cover a sixpence, and for the next fortnight twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together; on the alternate days give twenty drops of chemical food. Should the birds continue dying leave one of them "post-mortemed" to ascertain whether you have fever among them.

Yorkshires Giving Trouble.

C.N.M.—The room is either too cold or there are abnormal fluctuations of temperature in it, as you say you are sure there is no draught. Keep birds in a fairly warm room, where the temperature is equable until the moult is quite finished. Of course, you must not go to the extreme of overheating the birds. Feed as advised to "Dublin Tyro." 1. Give the hen twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together in two tablespoonfuls of water for drinking. Give this every second day until all wheeziness has disappeared, and on alternate days twenty drops of chemical food in the water. 2. Treat the cock the same as No. 1, except that you need only give about three doses of the eucalyptus mixture; but continue chemical food for a fortnight. The rapidity of the moult is all that could be desired, provided you prevent his taking cold. 3. This depends solely upon the individual and its surroundings, so that a definite reply is impossible. But it should be quite through the moult at this rate by the end of October. 4. The box cage you contemplate making will be a very suitable one. The size is large enough for ordinary purposes. You could make the change at any time now. 5. Answered in No. 4.

Thrush and Skylark.

Barber.—If you turn to our issue of the week before last, you will find in the reply to "Blackbird," full directions for the proper feeding of Thrushes and Blackbirds. With regard to Skylarks, my own method of feeding and treating them is as follows: As a stock food, mix game meal (without grit) or crushed puppy biscuits, three pounds, finely ground silkworm pupae, half-a-pound, meat meal, good ants' eggs, and dried flies, a quarter pound each, by weight. It will keep a long time, and the ingredients are obtainable at most up-to-date food shops, or through our advertisement columns. A few mealworms and other insects should be frequently given; also a little seed in a separate dish. This food can be moistened with a little water (it should be made crumbly moist, not into a sticky mass). But a little finely minced green-food (chickweed, lettuce, watercress, etc.), or grated raw carrot, or mashed cold boiled potato is by far the best. Clover grass (either a turf of it or some chopped fine and mixed in the food) is also one of the best possible things to give a Skylark to make it sing, and keep it healthy, and assist it during the moult. The game meal is practically identical with meals sold as pheasant and partridge meals, and either can be used. A dust bath is essential, or the birds will be pestered with parasites, one of the worst troubles of Lark-keepers.

Shrubs and Birds.

W. H. Shoobert.—1. In a small aviary tenanted by many birds, it is quite impossible to keep shrubs and greenery generally in a presentable condition, except by having the said shrubs in pots and changing them frequently that is, giving one set a "rest" out in the garden, while a second set is in the aviary. Birds not only soil shrubs and plants, but seed-eating birds usually quickly tear them to ribbons. I found holly lasted as long as any, while thorn and gorse bushes also did good service, likewise ivy trained round old stumps, etc. Box, privet, etc., you have tried, you say. Ferns and the ordinary creeping rock plants would not hurt birds, I should think. 2. I should advise you to get a cock Linnet as mate for the hen. The Chaffinches are not particularly likely breeders, and you might, with advantage, drop them and replace with, say, a cock Siskin and hen Bullfinch. If you keep the cock Chaffinch, then he might take to a hen Brambleinch as a mate. A hen Bullie would make a good partner for the cock Goldie; or the hen Canary would doubtless suit him. The less pairs you have in the place, the better the chances of breeding.

About Goldfinches.

Rather Doubtful.—Strange things occasionally happen, of course, but I must candidly say that I should not like to have to depend on a broken-winged Goldfinch filling the eggs of my own missing hens. In fact, I should have to be driven to it before I put such a bird in with a hen. As regards cock and hen Goldfinches, the head of the hen, when viewed sideways, is always rounder looking, while the beak is shorter, and not so stout at the base—the cock, with his flatter skull and longer beak, looks, and is, longer in the head. In the cock bird the black feathers surrounding the beak and running from base of beak to the eye, the black band at back of the head, and the black shoulders of the wings (wing-butts) are really black—that is to say, a deep, intense shining black, often shaded with green on the wing-butts. In the hen the black on these parts is very, very rarely a deep, intense black, but is distinctly greyish (ashen-black) and the wing-butts are usually distinctly brownish, or greyish-black tinged with brown. Even in Greypates, when just beginning to strike into moult, the deep black feathers can be seen coming through on the shoulders of the cocks, contrasting distinctly with the grey nestling feathers. If you buy a Greypate in which they are to be seen coming, you can bet on its being a cock. Then, of course, in the adult, the blaze offers another excellent guide, as you know.

Linnet Ailing.

H. Bentham.—From what you say, there does not seem much hope for the bird. You do not state whether he has commenced to moult, but judging from the blue beak you speak of, I take it he has not, and perhaps this has something to do with his being queer. You should transfer his cage to a warm corner of a heated room, and cover it up (especially at night), and see if this causes him to drop into moult. I don't like your seed mixture. I have often said that niger and hemp are not good as regular items for Linnets; while the proportion of teazle and canary is not sufficient. As you have the back numbers, you should look up the reply to "H. H. Wood," in issue of August 29th. Your best chance lies in a thorough change of diet, offering a liberal supply of seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain, and thistle heads daily. Add to its drinking water (assuming the water-vessel to hold two tablespoonfuls) 8 to 10 drops of tincture of gentian, and keep this up for about a fortnight should the bird improve.

Weeds and Mule Breeding.

Light Mule.—The weeds you send are (1) persicaria and (2) knot-grass. In their seeding stage both are excellent for seed-eating birds, most of the Finch family liking them. Linnets in particular are very partial to knot-grass, and feed largely on it in their wild state; but, as you yourself have found, it is liked by most Britishers in captivity. As regards your muling problem, I don't think it matters one jot about the pairs being double yellows, providing they are big birds; and you describe yours as such. You are sure to get some buffs next season, and then you could double-buff with a pair or two, if you thought it advisable. You have evidently got a good hen in the yellow Norwich Plainhead; take care of her. Pair her next season back to her father (No. 1 pair), and pair her brother with the yellow Lancs. Plainhead hen (No. 2 pair). If you lose the father, then pair her with her brother, and get a stout-built buff, pink-eyed Yorkshire cock, which blows clear, and is bred for clears, to put with the Lancs. hen (go to a reliable fancier for it). For the following season, of course, the idea is to pair up the best youngsters from each of the two couples. But it would be wise to test with the Finches some of the progeny of the Lancs., to see if they throw light feathers. Should they do so, you are alright. If the contrary, then I should keep two or three couples from pair No. 1 entirely by themselves, and inbreed for another season some of the young from pair No. 2, when they ought to be safe to cross in with any of the others.

Brevities.

Weeds and Shows (D. F.).—The lengthy weed is plantain, the other hardheads. They may be given to all British seed-eaters that show any liking for them; there are few that do not. Goldies and Siskins are particularly fond of hardheads; Linnets, Redpolls and Twites of plantain. You will find all the cage-birds show announced in the columns of CAGE BIRDS in due course—that is, as the data for holding them approaches.

Mule Ailing (Anxious).—In two tablespoonfuls of the bird's drinking water, stir fresh daily six drops of chlorodyne; use a glass or pot vessel only. Commence with two or three drops, and work up to full dose. There should be improvement in 7 or 8 days. It is a cold. A little bread and milk sop daily would help, if bird will eat it. Look under "General" for answer to eat query; that is out of my line.

A Light Mule (Erin).—Judging from the description you give, your light Goldie Mule is a very decent specimen indeed (I presume he is clear on the back, for you do not state this). He is certainly, at all events, worth exhibiting at a show, and if of really good shape and colour, he ought to annex a prize. It would have helped me greatly when answering you if you had sent a rough sketch showing how much dark plumage he has.

Featherless Bullie (R.N.S.T.).—It seems extraordinary for a hand-reared bird to remain practically featherless. What food did you rear it on, and how can you tell it is a hen? I know that I cannot sex young Bullies myself until they begin to "strike" on the breast. You make no mention of green food, fruit, etc.; and possibly you are not feeding the bird properly (see reply to "Mr. Finch," in issue September 5th). Keep it in a warm corner of a heated room, with cage covered over at night, and this may remedy matters. Stir a small teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water every day for a week; every other day afterwards. Use a glass or pot vessel only.

Two Matters (Country Reader).—I should think the lesson to be learned is not to buy "hand-reared" Linnets when offered at the price you name. I don't know any reason why you should lose your birds if they are healthy when you get them. If you get a vigorous youngster, you ought to experience little difficulty in keeping it. Have acquired a good few 1908 Linnets myself, and have not lost a single one as yet. Your seed mixture is not at all to my liking; see reply to "H. H. Wood," in our last issue but one. If the greenhouse is kept at a high temperature, and the heat is a moist heat (as I expect must be the case), then I am afraid your birds will not thrive in it; in fact, to this I attribute the bad rearing results of your past season with Canaries.

Young Thrushes (In Doubt).—They will grow out of the habit. You should give each bird a large cage, keep the floor very clean, and feed them well, not forgetting the vegetable ingredient in their food.

Sex of Larks (A.M.).—The two safe guides to the sex of Larks are the size of the bird and the spread of the wings. The hen bird is always much smaller than the cock, and much less bold in manner; further, she has never the length of wing. She generally has more heavily-streaked (pencilled) plumage.

Young Thrushes (E. Fear).—I can quite believe that bread and milk, with bread and hempseed, seem too relaxing a diet for your Thrushes. I don't think they will thrive long on it. Full details of the proper way to feed were given by me the week before last; see reply to "Black bird." You should certainly cage each youngster up separately, seeing that they "fight tremendously," as you put it. They will sing far more freely and better (assuming them to be cocks), if each has a home "on his own." If you keep one cock in the aviary, and find him a mate, he might breed next spring.

Drinks a Lot (Poor Bill).—Some Linnets seem to drink a lot, but in reality use up the water "sprinkling" the cage wires, to say nothing of themselves. However, you are the best judge. If his water-vessel holds about two tablespoonfuls, stir ten drops of tincture of gentian into it. This may break him of the habit; though an excellent tonic, it is very bitter. He should have a bath, of course, according to season. If ineffectual write me again.

What Bird (Barro).—Your bird is a cock Blackcap Warbler. The food mixture you particularise is not at all bad, but I am sure one of the usual mixtures for small insectivorous birds would answer better—or "half-and-half," if you like. This species is very fond of ripe fruit, remember.

Eleven Years Old (W. Goode).—I really don't see why you need to trouble about breaking your old Mules, now quite blind, of its habit of "biting its claws." It does no harm. As the bird gets to its seed-box, you can rest assured that it takes sufficient food to properly sustain life—it would hardly be singing so well if the reverse were the case. I don't think it wise to feed too exclusively on niger seed; the bird will eat other seeds all right. Try some maw and teazle as well. Yes; the moulting period is now with us, but many birds, I expect, have not as yet commenced to shed their feathers.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Exhibiting Foreign Birds.

Amateur.—Consult our advertisement columns, and get some good cage-maker's list, one for preference who makes a speciality of show cages. The size, etc., must depend on the bird, which is to occupy the cage—for Whydahs the cage must be sufficiently high so that the bird's tail will be clear of cage bottom when the bird is perching, and the seed and water hoppers shou'd be placed within reach of the perch. The semi-box type cage suits most birds, as does also a pale sage green enamel of the inside and black for exterior wood and wirework. Birds must be steadied prior to the show. Most judges will pass a bird at once that dashes from side to side while being examined. Whydahs, if properly caged, should not break their tail; it is a matter of roomy cage and a proper arrangement of perches. At any rate it must be done, and you are no heavier handicapped than other exhibitors in this respect. The small foreigners you name, when in fine condition, have all been in the money. It all depends on the particular show. When there are only two classes, more showy and imposing birds would stand a better chance. You must get a schedule of the show you wish to compete at, study the conditions and make your entries in accordance therewith. If this is not clear to you, repeat query re points, you are not clear upon.

Treatment for Lorrikeets.

W. G. Stocker.—Blue Mountain Lorrikeets are not at all fragile birds, and so long as they are kept free from draughts, even the temperature of an unheated room would do them no hurt. Of course nearly all species of foreign birds are more or less fragile during their first few months in this country, but once they are over this they are not at all difficult to keep. I have a pair of red-collared Lorrikeets, which are similar to the Blue Mountains, in my outdoor aviary, which are very fit. Milk-sop, fruit, and a little Canary seed is all I find they require. They are very fond of lettuce, and such extras as sponge cake, and plain biscuits, and I should advise you to bring the diet of your birds on to similar lines, but do not stop the rice suddenly; stop the hemp seed at once. Soak a piece of sponge cake in Dinneford's Magnesia and give this to the birds when partially dry and repeat after a day's interval. But so far as the few details you give me go, I should say, the correction of the dietary will soon bring about an improved state of general condition.

Treating an Amazon.

W. J.—It is something to have got rid of the cold, but the fact remains that the bird is in a generally unhealthy state. Keep it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, making the drinking water the colour of port wine. Give boiled maize every other day and well dust with flour of sulphur. Otherwise let your diet be as per my previous reply. If the continued use of the chemical food should give rise to constipation, a dose or two of Dinneford's Magnesia will soon put matters right. Note.—The bowels must be kept moving freely, but not watery loose. Keep this bird warm, but not in a vitiated atmosphere and also spray it with chilled water twice a week, but guard carefully against draught till dry. The condition of the plumage will improve with returning health. Get a box of boney and borax from your chemist and with a small camel hair brush lightly paint its tongue with same. I do not think there is much wrong with the eye and unless it becomes swollen I should leave it alone; but if swelling supervenes, then bathe it with a zinc eye wash (from your chemist), but I hope there will now be a gradual improvement in the bird's condition.

Hints on Gouldian Finches.

C. Wells.—The price you have paid is full value, but not perhaps excessive. I hope your cage is a roomy one, and it should be of the semi-box or box type. Gouldians do not flourish in a confined space. The straw covering is alright, and should make good sleeping quarters if they use it. They are certainly not very fit—make their drinking water just saline with Epsom salts for one day, and follow this by making it (the drinking water) the colour of pale port with Parrish's Chemical Food till they are better conditioned. Diet, canary, white and spray millet seed, a few oats, and as much grass in flower (seeding grass) as they will eat, but it must not be frosted or sodden with wet when offered to the birds. If they will take them, a couple of meal-worms will do them no harm, neither will a small piece of crumbled sponge cake sopped in boiled milk. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, stand the cage where the birds will get plenty of fresh air, yet not be in draught. I hope you'll have luck with them, but they are rather fragile till they get over the hardships of importation. You will, of course, give them opportunity for a daily dip and keep their cage tray well sanded with fine grit. Some individuals are fond of "Paddy" (rice in the husk).

Grey Parrot in Moult.

Constant Reader.—(1) Spray with quassia solution every other day, and guard carefully against draught till dry. Give one or two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful in the drinking water, with two days' interval between the doses, but though the bowels should move freely they must not be allowed to remain watery loose—three doses of the magnesia should be ample. (2) Your diet is quite in order, but I should not replenish the seed tin too often, and then when the sunflower seed is eaten, the bird must satisfy its hunger with that which remains. I prefer the following seed mixture:—2 parts canary seed and oats, and 1 part each hemp, wheat, dari, small maize and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together. (3) The temperature of your dining-room is ample, but I always cover up my Parrots in cages at night both summer and winter; but a space about 3 to 6 inches diameter should be left uncovered at top of cage for ventilation purposes. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and when not giving the magnesia make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food.

Parrot in Poor Condition.

Pilot.—Leave the drinking water continually in the cage, and for the next month or more make it the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Diet: A seed mixture of 2 parts canary seed and oats, and 1 part each of wheat, dari, hemp and sunflower seed, well mix and always keep a supply in the cage. Also give ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts, and green food (a little fresh lettuce or other salad as in season); the toast will do no harm, just moisten it in the drinking water, but do not give it tea in any form. Otherwise you are treating the bird alright, but its diet has not been sufficiently varied, and you may be a little time getting it to take to the other items named above; but in time it will do, and with the changed dietary I am of opinion its condition will improve. Note.—A very fat bird is very far from being a healthy one as a rule.

Budgerigar with Cold.

W. L. S.—You tell me nothing about the bird, nor how you treat, nor the kind of cage you keep it in, etc.; so that I can but give you a haphazard sort of reply. If it is kept indoors in a cage see that it is out of draught. Get from your chemist the following mixture:—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts;—for use take a small portion of the mixture, add double its bulk of water, and let the bird have only this to drink for a few days. If it will not drink then give a few drops daily direct to the beak, and if the bird's ailment is really a cold it should soon yield to the treatment. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seed, a few oats, green-food (fresh lettuce and green in flower) which must not be offered when frosted or sodden with wet cuttlefish and grit. If you supply me with fuller details I may be able to give you more definite help.

Birds for Unheated Room.

Paradise Whydah.—The size should have read 18ins. long, by 11ins. deep, and about 2ft. high. It should be of the box type, with top half wire, the front wire being rounded off at the top towards the back of cage. Pale sage green makes a good interior enamel, with black for the exterior. The size of the cage must really be determined by the length of the bird's tail; it should be high enough to admit of a perch being fixed, so that the bird's head would be clear of top of cage, and its tail clear of the sand tray; also the food and water hoppers to be placed, so as to be easy of access from the perch. I should say some of the more brilliant Fruit-eaters and Tanagers would suit you best for exhibition—fine condition, beauty and rarity, of course being the points to consider when purchasing. Superb, Tricolour, Blue, Maroon, Palm, Green and any other bright and rare species which happen to be on the market: Gold-fronted Bulbuls, Hangnests, and some of the rarer and smaller Parrakeets—such as Stanley, Many-colours, Blue-bonnets, etc., with any uncommon insectivorous species you can pick up—as for instance, rare Starlings, silver-eared Mesias, the brighter plumaged Thrushes and any uncommon Buntings, the rarer Waxbills, Violet-eared, etc.; Greenfinches, Gouldian, Painted, etc. In point of fact study the market, and as opportunity offers, snap up any rare, brightly plumaged birds that are to be had. Of course when purchasing newly-imported stuff in the winter, they should be kept for a time in a cage in one of your living rooms, till they get hardened off a little.

Various Parrots.

W. D. R.—(1) I have never kept the Cuban Parrot, but have often noted it during my many visits to the Parrot House at our London Zoo, and it always appeared to me a quiet species, I cannot call to mind an instance in which I have heard it really screeching. (2) In a large Parrot cage, preferably an oblong one, Many-colours can be kept under the same conditions, and on the same treatment as that given in the reply you refer to—they do not need meal-worms, but should be offered a varied diet, as advised in the reply you have noted; neither are they fragile after they have got over the hardships of importation, etc., but all birds must be protected from draughts. (3) Do you mean a King Parrakeet, a brilliant green and red species—or what the dealers' call a King Grey Parrot. If the former they are a quiet species and do not indulge in much whistling, etc., but are more loquacious when a pair of them are kept together. If it is the last-named, then there is plenty of time, keep it in your midst, let it hear plenty of conversation and talk to it, and the talking and whistling will follow in due course—there can be no fixed time; individuals vary so, and yours is full young yet.

PARK & LAKE AVICULTURE

Young Ring Dove Bare.

No Name.—It is difficult to name the disease which has caused one only of your young Ring-Doves to be bare and scurfy on the back. Perhaps the cage is infested with insects, or perhaps the old birds have been breeding too freely during the three years you have kept them, and the young are coming weakly. These birds are very hardy as a rule. You had better destroy the affected young bird, and thoroughly clean out and repaint the cage. You do not say what size your cage is; personally, I think these birds should have a very large one, so that they can fly from perch to perch. Also, see that your feeding is properly varied; small grain, bird seed (especially when breeding), and a turf to pick at, also a lump of rock salt. If the birds are constantly breeding, destroy one egg of each clutch—the first egg in one, and the last egg in the next, as the first egg generally develops into a cock, and the last into a hen, in these birds and pigeons.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Budgerigar (H. E. Fishburn).—Chronic softening of liver; recent inflammation in which the lungs became involved.

Zebra Finch (Miss K. M. Westley).—"Severe chill," or inflammation of liver and lungs, ending with apoplexy.

Gouldian Finch (E. G. Watts).—Enlargement and softening of liver, rupture of blood-vessels of that organ—apoplexy. The lop-sided gait noticed some few weeks ago was probably the first seizure. More exercise and less food is indicated.

Canary (B.H.).—Softening of liver, rupture of blood-vessel of that organ—apoplexy.

Canary (H.J.C.).—Liver disease, malnutrition anæmia. More fresh salad as food, or Parrish's Syrup of Phosphates as medicine might have kept it in a better condition of health.

Canary (Perplexed).—Chronic ulceration of liver and lungs, ending with acute inflammation.

Canary (Loulon).—Bird-fever. Instructions for isolation and disinfection have frequently been given in these columns.

Canary (J.M.H.).—Fever of infectious character. All healthy looking stock must be run into perfectly clean cages, and all old cages and room must be disinfected.

LEGAL.

Answered by A BARRISTER.

Kilgenan (Pem.).—You are entitled to sue him for the 10s. 9d. due, but you were in the wrong in not keeping on for another fortnight. If you kept away from works for nine days without any reasonable ground, he may have a cause of action against you.

Anxious.—If the facts are as stated by you in the first instance, he can only sell subject to your life interest. The stamped letter is an agreement for a lease on which you assert your rights. The purchaser might give you notice, but you would have your remedy against the vendor.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Glasgow and Western Counties Young Bird Show (J. H. Adam).—You ask us to publish a cutting from another paper, giving the results at the above show. While we are now, as we have always been, anxious to oblige the members of your society, the pressure of current matter is such that we feel we should not be justified in occupying space with a report of a show held so long ago. Had the report reached us during a reasonable period after the event, we would have published it with pleasure.

Cat Ailing (W.J.S.).—Cats are not exactly in our line, but we are always anxious to oblige readers, so we submitted your letter to a friend of ours, expert in such matters, and he replies:—"Your cat is evidently suffering from distemper in a very severe form. Keep her warm, feed on strengthening foods, and give a teaspoonful of cod liver oil twice a day. Wash the eyes and nose three times daily, with warm water in which you have mixed a little Jeyes' fluid."

Colour-Feeding (L. Mortara).—The pods (or fruit) sent are the right kind to impart colour to the plumage of birds. The difficulty would be to get the birds to eat them as they now are. It is much more convenient to use the "tasteless pepper," as now on the market, combined with soft food. If you experiment with any, we shall be pleased to learn the result.

Reports (J. O. Williams).—Accept our thanks for your kindness in sending reports of the two shows mentioned in your letter.

Subscription (David Bruce, Montreal, Canada).—Your subscription is paid until October 30th, 1909. Many thanks.

Suggestion (S. J. Gardner).—We are very much obliged to you, and will give your suggestion our consideration. It seems to have promising features, though the idea is not new to Fancy journalism.

Question Night (A. Morris).—Thanks for kindness in sending report, which we will print in the earliest available issue.

Dead Canary (J.C., South Norwood).—We do not undertake to examine dead birds at this office. If you will kindly refer to "Post Mortems" (see the query pages), you will find this clearly stated, and the address given where bodies should be forwarded. The sample of seed looked to be alright.

Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S. (Curry and Hutchinson).—Your "club notice" of meeting September 17th (posted September 9th) did not reach us until after we had gone to press.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROPOSED NEW SOC. FOR OPENSHAW, DROYLSDEN & GORTON.

SIR,—For intending members it has been proposed to call a meeting with a view to forming a Cage Bird Society at the Boilermakers' Arms, Abbey Hey Lane, Nr. Openshaw, on Monday, September 21, at 8 o'clock prompt. Will all fanciers who can, please attend and give us a good start off?

J. G. GARBUTT.

WHAT OF THE SEASON?

SIR,—My experience is very similar to that of "Bert." The few birds I have—Canaries and Goldies—are about two-thirds through the moult. This fact of exceptionally early moulting of birds I couple with another. It is this, for many years past I have always had a few sunflowers in my garden, and this year they have seeded in record time, counting from the opening of the flower bud until the seeds are fully formed. Working on these two instances of nature making haste to be ready for winter, I think it might be fairly safe to predict an early one. I sincerely hope this will not be so, but think this will prove correct.

WM. PAULL.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

SIR,—Your issue of last week, September 12, contains a letter signed by six members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland, and to which I wish, with your permission, to draw attention, lest some of the readers of your valuable journal may attach undue importance to it. By the way, the signatures should be only two, as follows, Mr. J. J. Cloke, one, the remaining five "one." This letter will be measured at its proper value by the disinterested and self respecting members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland. It is well known amongst the Fancy here, in Ireland, that the following gentlemen—Messrs. Sheridan, Fry, Sboledice, Huggard, and Farrell, are, as far as the Fancy is concerned, at least only one. What one of the party says, the others say "ditto" to; and the same parties are otherwise closely connected, as has been pointed out on several occasions in the columns of your paper. Any member elected on successive committees, only holds his position on same by agreeing to all or some of what this said party says or does. If your views are contrariwise, you are marked for removal at the next election.

RICHARD F. DUIGENAN,
Hon. Treasurer Y.C.C. of Ireland.

THE USE & VALUE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—What Mr. Hadwin calls thread saffron is known generally as hay saffron, and is the stigma and styles of crocus sativus. "Witherings' British Plants," dated 1830, says: "The stigma of this plant is the saffron of the shops. It was formerly greatly esteemed as a cordial, but is now nearly discarded. It gives a beautiful colour to water, wine and spirits." I have used saffron with rum and sugar for the purpose of breaking birds into moult earlier than usual, so that they might get through in good time. The result was that they did not moult any earlier than birds which had had no saffron. I have also used it as an ingredient in a cake with eggs and sugar, which I was advised to use by a Prescot fancier many years ago, as the real thing in feeding for natural colour. As I never fed any Greens I cannot say what effect it has on them, but with Norwich and Yorkshires my experience is that it is useless for producing colour.

J. F. SMITH.

SIR,—After carefully reading the letters on the above subject, I must say that my experience of Crocus saffron has been most satisfactory. In one case I had a Linnet that had stopped in its moult through being transferred to another house, and having head under wing looked as if it was going to be a bad case. But on looking up some back numbers of CAGE BIRDS I found some advice on the subject by Mr. G. E. Weston, advocating the use of dandelion juice and saffron, and after the use of a dose of the dandelion juice, and then the continued use of Crocus saffron during its moult, it quite recovered and got through alright. My second case was my Siskin, which was very mopish in its moult, but with the same treatment it is now picking up wonderfully and dropping its feathers quite rapidly. My experience of Crocus saffron is that it is a very good stimulant for any cage bird; but as to its colouring properties I cannot speak, not having tested it for this yet. My continued good results from the use of Crocus saffron, however, makes me think that it should be used by every keeper of birds during the moulting season. The meadow saffron, which Mr. Hadwin speaks of and advises the use of in his letters, although increasing the secretions of some organs, has the counteracting effect of diminishing the action of the heart, which, while the bird is in the low state occasioned by moulting is not to be desired.

F. RUSSELL.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

SIR, Referring to Mr. Currah's letter in your last issue, re Mr. Crawhall's suspension, I may say that Mr. Crawhall did not carry out the determination mentioned by Mr. Currah of appealing to the Executive Council of the C.B.U. against the decision of the District Committee, though he had the opportunity of doing so. But, while admitting the offence, he seems to have preferred the more heroic course of protesting by resigning from the Societies of which he was a member. Failing an appeal, the Executive Council could hardly deal with the matter, and could only confirm the decision of the District Committee who had had it under consideration, and were in the best position to judge of the merits of the case. GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE,

Secretary, Cage Birds Union.

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR, When I sent you my last letter I had no intention of writing again on the "ticked" subject, but seeing that so many are in favour of schedules reading "dark flue not to be disqualified in clear classes," I want to ask one important question, viz., If I enter a bird with dark underflue in a "ticked" class (which I consider its proper place) would it be disqualified? Or is such a bird eligible in both classes? Again, I say, let clear classes be clear, and all marked or ticked birds, no matter how small they are, be entered in the "ticked" class, providing there is one. Then fanciers will know what to do. If dark underflue is allowed in clear classes, then, I think clear classes will cease to exist; for a bird with a tick, no matter how small that tick or underflue may be, can never be a clear bird.

ARTHUR HARRIS.

SIR,—The Coventry O.S. several years since realised the judges' difficulty respecting the above question, and to avoid any unnecessary handling of the birds, and any misunderstanding on the part of exhibitors, they have had printed in their schedules under the heading of Clear Classes: "Birds with dark underflue or tick not showing should be shown in the above classes." The interpretation of the above rule is, that if the judge cannot see any tick or dark underflue while making the bird pass from perch to perch in the show cage, he is not to remove the bird from the cage to look for it. The society is of opinion that the above rule conduces to more careful and equitable judging of Norwich Canary show points.

GEO. PETERS, Hon. Sec. Coventry O.S.

SIR,—At the meeting of the Sunderland C.B.A. on September 12, the drawing up of the schedule for the annual show was under consideration. At the commencement Mr. W. Reid asked the members if they had been giving attention to the correspondence appearing in CAGE BIRDS under the heading of, "When is a clear not a clear," and being answered in the affirmative by all present, he stated that, in his opinion, birds with invisible ticks or marks should be allowed to compete in the clear classes. He stated that it was most unsatisfactory, both to judges and exhibitors, that birds should have to be handled in order to determine whether they were clear or ticked. To the judge, because it often gave the opportunity for adverse criticism upon his awards, owing to the bird perhaps not having regained the trim, first-class appearance it had previously to being handled. For no judge who knew his business would handle a bird to look for a tick without having definitely settled in his own mind its respective position in the prize list, and while some birds will begin to plume themselves as soon as they are put back into their cages, others will sit and mope behind their prize-cards the whole day long. This, no doubt, often accounts for the "our choice for first, etc.," which one sometimes saw in the show reports in the Fancy Press. It was also unsatisfactory to the exhibitor, as it sometimes meant the loss of a few feathers from the bird's plumage, and also the more frequent washing of an exhibit than would have been necessary had the bird not been handled. He also thought that by allowing thigh-ticked birds to compete in clear classes a certain amount of fraud would be done away with, for it was a well-known fact that if some of the supposed "clear" birds were taken from the shows and kept by disinterested persons for a few weeks, it would be found that they were really ticked birds. Another fact was that if an exhibitor were rather short of good clear birds for show, and had plenty of thigh-ticked ones, he would not hesitate for an instant to make for himself a good clear bird or two (unless he was a very exceptional sort of gentleman who objected to winning a prize by these means, and these gentlemen, he was afraid, were very few, although you will meet many who will declare that they are constituted that way). These were hard things to say, but they were true, and they knew it. He supposed they remembered the case of a well-known exhibitor who was disqualified two years ago for showing a thigh-ticked bird in a clear class, yet the same bird won either first or second in the same class the previous year, and also won first in the same class last year. Regarding the question as to whether a thigh-ticked bird would be a better colour than a clear bird, Mr. Reid said he thought that the question of green blood was rather overdone, and stated that in his opinion it all depended upon what kind of green blood you used, and upon the selection of the birds when pairing up. He proposed that the schedules should read: "Clear or invisible ticked," and "Visible ticked, unevenly marked, or variegated." Mr. J. Riseborough seconded the proposition, which was supported by Mr. W. F. Swan, and carried unanimously. It was also decided to write the secretaries of the other Northern Societies, to learn whether they intended to take any steps in the matter, with the object of settling this vexed question once and for all. REID & MADDISON, Secs.

SIR,—I see Mr. Gregor has another letter in CAGE BIRDS re ticks. I have no desire to take up much of your valuable space; perhaps I might have explained myself better in my last letter, but I tried to show the folly of allowing these lightly-ticked birds to be shown in clear classes. One reason is that clear classes are generally better filled, and if you take away from the weaker you make it still weaker or else tend to blot it out; hence my remarks about Bodmin, which do not in any way reflect any discredit on the business of the committee; quite the contrary, seeing they pay full prize-money in every class. Their amalgamation of the two ticked classes through not having sufficient entries last year is quite in keeping with their "minding their own business." I really do not see the need of any alteration if exhibitors would only state on entry forms where the slight tick is. I just mentioned about the ticked bird for I had to show they were there, although difficult to locate. I trust Mr Gregor will see this. My remarks referring to his letter were not written in any way against him, but for the good of the Fancy which, as a breeder and exhibitor, I take great interest in. I was pleased to see a letter from Mr. J. C. Barnes on the subject. I should think the C.B.U. could settle the whole thing, but what they say let us all abide by. T. TREVENA.

TO DEAL WITH HUSKS AND WASTE SEED.

SIR,—I should be glad if some kind reader could tell me what would be a good way to catch the waste seeds and husks thrown out by the birds. I have a breeding-cage, hung up in my bed-room, and I have bred a few young ones, but they make an awful mess with their seeds about the floor, and if anyone could tell me of something that would prevent it, or catch it before falling on the floor, I should be much obliged.

THE MAKING OF BIRDLIME.

SIR,—Could any reader please let me know through the columns of your paper how oil bird-lime is made? I tried some lately, and it was not a success, being too hard.

T. KELLY.

SIR,—I should like some information on bird-lime making. I want to make some that will not freeze in the winter nor run in the summer. I hope some reader can help me.

PERCY WATSON.

The following recipe for making bird-lime was given some time back by one of our correspondents, and may be useful to the writers of the above letters.—EDITOR.

Take one pint of best raw linseed oil, put into an old quart saucepan, put on the fire and simmer gently for three or four hours. On no account let it boil; stir every few minutes. No change will be noticed until after the second hour, then it will show froth on top, this being a sign of thickening. It must be given every attention or it will boil over. When it gets about as thick as treacle take it off the fire and pour into a pan of cold water; stand till cool, then work it up with the hands till it shows no signs of having water in it. This will be found to work on twigs quite easily. It can be taken off when not in use, and used over and over again. If too stiff, mix with it a little of the so-called "treacle." Boiling will thicken it if needed. Made properly this will hold anything from a Wren to a Blackbird. An outhouse is more suitable for the boiling purpose than the kitchen, as the preparation has a very sickly odour.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—I have read with great interest the letters of Messrs. Hammond, Dean, and Crisp, and first of all I would ask what right have Messrs Hammond and Dean to interfere at all with the S.Y.C.C. patronage? Are they members of the above club? If not I conclude they are like a lot more of the Yorkshire mushroom fanciers; they want to do all the talk and interfere with everything, and are ready to be drawn on to try and upset everything they can. They have no need to go to the S.Y.C.C.. It looks to me as if Mr. H. retired from the Y.U. so that he could have more time to interfere with other people's business. I would advise you, Mr. Hammond, to look at home and make your Union perfect first before you start to dictate to anybody else what they should do and whom they should pick for judges. If Mr. Hammond makes a few enquiries he will find that in Mr. Crisp he is talking to one who is a fancier and one who does not come up to Yorkshire and tell us what we have to do, and one who has done more for the Fancy than anyone in the Yorkshire Union. Mr. Crisp has a perfect right to protect the Society to which he belongs. I would also like to draw Mr. Hammond's attention to his first letter and his remarks about our judges, such as, clogs, brushes, teeth, paint, etc. I think such remarks uncalled for. I read some few weeks ago about a mighty chairman of a Specialist Club saying that they would not allow the C.B.U. to dictate to them, and one or two lines down he says they ought to pick the judges for the C.B.U. Here is another sample of the Yorkshire Union dictators.

HORTON.

BIRDCATCHING, AND THE PERSECUTION OF BIRD-CATCHERS.

SIR,—I ought to have been more explicit in regard to the use of the terms "amateur" and "professional." By an amateur I mean a person inefficient in the art of bird-catching, and by a professional I mean exactly the opposite, whether he gets his living by the work or not. Really, the financial aspect of the question did not enter my mind at all, as I was dealing with the persecution of experienced trappers by officers who knew little or nothing of bird life. My friend "An Undesirable" will therefore now easily understand that those who know their business so well as to be able to give points to others, would not be considered, for the purposes of this correspondence, amateurs or undesirables. I must therefore ask him to adopt another nom de plume. But surely my friend must have met the person who gets an attack of the bird-catching fever for one season. This is the man who, on the impulse of the moment, buys a call-bird of some sort, and also half a pound of new bird-lime, to "go out catching." The day arrives and away our amateur goes accompanied by a friend. They cut some stout twigs and smear them very thickly with new lime. Should some luckless bird alight on these twigs, both men will run up to the little prisoner, already covered with soft lime, and, with excited hands, roll it into the lime so that, in extricating the little thing, they have to leave its tail, some of its flights, and many small feathers, on the twigs. The sequel may be guessed. This miserable little creature dies in a paper bag, or little threepenny travelling cage, before it is carried home, or soon after, for our amateur knows nothing of the methods adopted by experienced hands in taking a bird off the twig, in cleaning its soiled feathers, and in properly "meating it off." This picture is not overdrawn. Then there is your more ambitious amateur who buys clap-nets and uses them, his brace-birds, and the fresh-caught birds, with a recklessness born of ignorance and conceit. The brace-birds are "fresh-caught" (no trouble has been bestowed on their training and steadying), the brace is made of cord, having a hard knot tied where it crosses the back, and having no swivel to prevent the entanglement of the bird. Now, these are the "undesirables," whose interest in birds is not permanent and deep enough to induce them to continue the game for two seasons. They are the persons who sometimes give just cause for a prosecution, and I suggest a licence as a means of clearing the field of them, for humane catchers suffer through their bungling. What I complain of is that the officers of the R.S.P.C.A. fail to discriminate between the casual and the skilled catcher, who handles his apparatus most efficiently, and certainly treats the most important part of his outfit—his decoy birds—with the tenderest care. It is in defence of the latter I write, as he is being confused with the casual, and his attitude towards feathered pets is being misrepresented. I am sure "Novice" and "One of the Undesirables" are with me in my desire to protect one who does his work so humanely and who supplies both the fancy and the general public with some of their most charming pets. When a good catcher is pounced upon unreasonably, let him state his case in your valuable journal, and I believe there will be a response to his appeal for assistance in working up his defence. I appeal to the Editor to support me, when I say, that, personally, I am not financially affected by anything amateurs or professionals may do or say in connection with bird-catching or bird-catchers, but I write from a desire to see justice done to a certain class, and from what I believe is a fair knowledge of the question. I claim to remain a true BIRD LOVER.

SHOW SECRETARIES AND OFFICIALS.

Kindly Give This Your Attention.

For the purpose of completing our show-reporting arrangements, we want to know AT ONCE the dates of all the shows which provide classes for cage-birds, in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. We already have a fairly full list of fixtures, which will be found printed below. Will secretaries and officials of societies please look over this list, and notify us at once should the name of their show be missing from it. Also will those who have not yet sent in the names of their judges kindly do so, and the number of classes they will be offering (if not definitely settled, then send the number you think likely to be offered).

A Postcard will do, but post it at once. Fanciers will oblige by calling the attention of the friends of their society to this notice, so that none may be overlooked. We want the date of every show going to be held during the 1908 9 season, with the other particulars where possible.

Here are the names of the fixtures we have already on our list:—

Aberdeen, Accrington, Alnwick, Ayr, Altrincham, Ashford (Kent), Arbroath, Avonbridge, Ayr O.S., Broughty Ferry, Broxburn, Burnley, Battersea, Bolton, Bristol C.B.S., Barnstaple, Blackburn, Blaydon-on-Tyne, Bo'ness, Bramley, Bodmin, Bristol, Bradford West, Burton-on-Trent, Bournemouth, Brighouse, Bradford East, Bromley, Buckhaven, Birmingham, Bristol F.A., Berwick-on-Tweed, Blackwood, Bury, Birmingham, Burton-on-Trent C.B.S., Crook and Dis., City of Glasgow, City of Bradford, Cambridge, Clapham, Caterham, Cheltenham, Carmarthenshire, Cleator Moor, Carlisle, Consett, City of Hull, Crook Original, Cardiff, Coventry Godiva, Cockermouth, Coventry O.S., Cupar, Canterbury, Castle Douglas, Crystal Palace, Camborne, Cambridge and Cambs, Cradley Heath, Chester, Dysart, Darlington C. and B.B.F.A., Derby, Dulwich O.S., Dulwich and Peckham, Darlington C.B.S., Dunfermline, Dalkeith, Dover, Darley Dale, Darvel, Dublin, Dundee, Denny and Dunipace, Dumbarton, Dudley, Deeleshill, Exeter, Earlston, Eastbourne, Edinburgh Southern, Edinburgh Eastern, Egremont, Edinburgh Open, Frome, Faversham, Falmouth, Glasgow and West of Scotland, Great Harwood, Grimsby, Gloucester, Gateshead, Great Horton Good Intent, Great Horton O.S., Gosport, Greenwich, Garston, Gravesend, Guisborough, Harrogate, Halifax, Hastings, Hayle, Hucknall Torkard, Hinckley, Hamilton, Hartlepools, Huddersfield, Houghton-le-Spring, Hucknall, Herne Bay, Highgate, Hampstead, Ilkeston, Inverness, Johnstone, Kelso, Kelty and Blairadam, Kirbymoorside, Kirkcaldy, Kilmarnock, Keighley, Kilmaurs, Kings Heath, Kirkby Stephen, Kent County, Kilsyth, Kendal, Leeds, Longton, Liverpool, Leicester Hand in Hand, Leek, Long Eaton, Llanelly, Laisterdyke, Littleborough, Loanhead, Liskeard, Leamington, Leigh, Leith, Luton, Lowestoft, Leyton, Lurgan, Liscard, Liverpool O.S., Lesmahagow, L.C.B.A., Leeds R.C.C., Manchester, Morpeth, Middlesbrough, Margate, Morecambe, Merthyr Tydfil, Morriston, Muirkirk, Millom, Manningham, Merthyr Dowlais, Markinch, Matlock, Murton, Newcastle, Nottingham, Norwich Alliance, Northampton Good Intent, Newmilns, Northampton Hand in Hand, Neath, North Manchester, Norwich, Norwich P.C. of Ireland, Oakham, Oldham, Ormskirk, Perth, Plymouth, Peterborough, Potteries, Portsmouth, Preston O.S., Perth, Pendleton, Plumstead and Woolwich, Pwllgwaun, Paisley, Penrhiwceiber, Pathhead (Kirkcaldy), Penzance, Pembroke, Queensbury, Rochdale G.J., Ramsgate, Rochdale O.C., Rotherham, Rochester, St. Andrew's, Scottish National, Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A., Sunderland, Sheffield, South Shields, Stockton-on-Tees, Swansea, Selby, Swindon, Sale Open, St. Helens, Stonehouse, Skelmanthorpe, Sandy Lane, Shipley, Sudbury, Scottish Metropolitan National Derby O.A., Sunbury-on-Thames, Sidmouth, South London, Sanquhar, Stamford, Torbay (Paignton), Tideswell C.B.I.S., Tonbridge, Thornton, United Metropolitan, Warrington, Wellingborough, Worcester, Welsh National, Watford, Weston-super-Mare, Wolverhampton, Weybridge, Wallsend and Mid-Tyne, Whitehaven, Wigan, Whitburn, Widnes, Windhill, Wirksworth, Wakefield R.C.C., Whitby, West Stanley, Wakefield, Wimbledon, York.

Some Dates Wanted

Airdrie and Coatbridge, Brighton, Carnarvon, Reading, Reigate, Tredegar, West of Scotland.

SELKIRK O.S.

Meeting held at headquarters September 2nd. It was agreed to hold another open show on Thursday, October 15th. The following gentlemen were appointed office bearers: Mr. Robert Thomson, President; Mr. W. B. Thomson, vice-president; Mr. W. H. Reid, secretary; Mr. Adam Gill, treasurer; Messrs. R. G. Thomson and Alex Dickson, auditors.—W. H. REID, Sec.

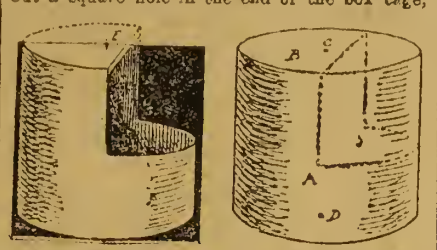
LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

At our meeting held at the Railway Hotel on September 2nd, a fairly large number of members and friends attended, the president (Mr. J. Lambert) being in the chair. Mr. R. Halliday (Shipley) gave a lecture on preparing for exhibition, which he did in a splendid manner. Many questions were asked and answered to everyone's satisfaction. Mr. C. Stebbings proposed, Mr. E. Padgett seconded, and Mr. A. Hiles supported, a vote of thanks to Mr. Halliday, which brought a most instructive evening to a close.—A. BOTHOMLEY, Sec.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 28th at headquarters, when a good number of members and friends were present, to listen to Mr. Weston, who had kindly attended. Many questions were asked Mr. Weston, and were very ably answered by him. Seven new members elected, and two others nominated. The secretary, Mr. Reynolds, informed the meeting that owing to business he was leaving London and going to reside in Nottingham, and was therefore compelled to resign the secretaryship. His resignation was received with great regret, and permission was given him to hand over the books to the assistant secretary until a secretary is elected. Our loss is Nottingham's gain.—GEO. H. NEAL, Assist. Sec.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

SEED BOX FOR END OF BOX CAGE.

Sent by J. Douglas, 11, Trafalgar Road, Beeston, Notts.

The following is a description of an idea for dispensing with the usual feeding arrangements at the front of a box cage:—Take a round tin, about 3 ins. in diameter, and cut it to the shape shown in A. Now take a piece of wood about ¼ in. thick, and cut it to a semi-circle, as at B. Fix it to the tin, as shown. Cut a square hole in the end of the box cage, but first make two holes, shown at C and D, in the tin. Now place the tin in the hole, fixing it by two small nails through holes at C and D, as shown at E, F, thus making pivots for the tin to revolve on. In the tin place an ordinary round glass feeding vessel, to contain either seed or water. The result will be found to be extremely satisfactory, as when seed is required to be given to the bird, one simply turns the tin round so that the opening is outside, then put the glass, with seed inside, and turn the tin round again inside the cage. Of course, two tins—one on each end—will be required.—J. DOUGLAS.

Seed Box for Wooden Ends of Cages.

AN EASILY CLEANED SEED HOPPER.

Sent by J. Wharton, 47, Langton Street, Seedley, Manchester.

I send a sketch of seed box with glass sliding front and bottom. I find this box has a great advantage over others of its class, as the bottom can be drawn out, making the whole thing very easy to clean. Still another advantage it possesses is that when taken out all the corners can easily be got at, therefore leaving no harbourage for red mite. The bottom is sloped to back, to prevent shaking out of place; also, the glass front rests on the glass bottom. The slides are cut in the usual way; then with a saw cut A and B to take the glass; also there is a saw-cut C in back of box, as shown in figure D. Figure E is a piece for the front, to fasten the sides together, and this should be fastened under the glass bottom. Figure D and E should be same length.—J. WEARTON.

SINGING CONTESTS.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, Leeds, on September 13th, when some good singing was heard. Mr. H. Allen judged to perfection. Timekeeper, Mr. Lacey. 1st and 2nd, Hardcastle; 3rd, Crowther.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Contest held at Prince Albert Inn, on September 13th, when 16 birds sang. Result: 1, Binns; 2, Lawriman; 3, Farrar. Judges, Messrs. R. Jackson, and J. Clark.—W. DEAN, Sec.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

BINGLEY O.S. has arranged a good syllabus of members' shows, lectures, etc., for the coming winter season. The first of these was given by Mr. R. Halliday on Tuesday week last, and a good number of members and friends put in an appearance, and the lecturer was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his services. At the members' show in October, the society has arranged for a judging competition to take place in conjunction with it, one of the classes being chosen for the members of try their skill upon in placing the birds in the same position as the judge. At the end of the month follows a discussion on "Diseases of birds," the leader being that well-known fancier, Mr. J. Wilman. For November, a members' show and a washing competition are down, the officiating fancier at the latter being Mr. W. A. Cowgill, who will be able to show them a point or two concerning the interesting and necessary art. In December they are to emulate their Wibsey brethren, and try their hands (or rather their stomachs) with a fine supper, followed by a members' show as usual on Boxing Day. Then in February they bring the season to a close with a lecture on pairing, by Mr. S. Dean.

THE correspondence columns of last week's CAGE BIRDS contained a letter in regard to the formation of still another club for the upholding of one of the many varieties of Canary, the latest being in the interests of the Green-marked Yorkshire. The writer, Mr. W. H. Shackleton, brings out very ably the inestimable value of this bird for both the breeding and the show room, and without doubt the many admirers of this variety will, in my opinion, rally round the promoters, and help to place their favourite bird on a proper footing and try to secure for it the place in the shows which it so well merits.

THE Year Book of the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club is now in the hands of its members, and proclaims the club to be in a good position. The trophies, etc., are to be competed for at ten shows, the first being Queensbury, with Mr. C. A. House as judge on October 24th, so that intending competitors will have plenty of time for their birds to get through the moult and into hard and dry feather. The competitions are divided into three sections, Open, Amateur, and Novice, so that all branches of the Fancy have a chance at the spoil, and in addition prizes are given for best fourths in both cock and hen classes, whilst the novices have 5s. for most points at each of the shows. Members must be enrolled one month before they can compete for any special; so all fanciers that possess birds of this variety should let their names and fee (1s. 6d.) go up at once.

YORKSHIRE County B.B. and M.C. experiences a great amount of trouble in fixing up patronage. They have had a good number of applications, but date and judges have clashed in such a manner that many societies have had to go disappointed. A list of placings will be found in the report of last week's meeting, and any society providing four British classes on other dates and with other judges than those mentioned in the list, will be almost certain to gain this society's patronage, if applied for.

Bird Catching and Snaring for Amateurs.

A Paper by Mr. H. J. Hawes (Forest Gate), read before the Members and friends of the L. and P.O.S., on September 17.

There is no doubt that all in this company have, at one time or another, obtained most valuable information from our Fancy Press, relative to the rearing and keeping of birds, both Canaries, British and Foreign, but I think I am correct when I assert that there has not, up to the present time, been any allusion in paper form to the catching of British birds, and so, with your kind attention, I will endeavour to enlighten you upon the various ways and means employed by most fanciers and others who choose bird-catching either as a sport or for a livelihood. No doubt, gentlemen, you are now quite familiar with the croakings of more-or-less ignorant persons who, through want of knowing better, rush into print with some startling headline such as, "Are birdcatchers a rough class?" or, as I once saw in a paper, "Forty-four hen birds found in a field, left behind by a bird-catcher." So, I am sure you will not grudge me an endeavour to defend the birdcatcher in a small measure from what at times appeal to myself as being libellous and insulting charges made by those so-called "fanciers" in their attacks upon the man who chooses bird-catching as a sport. Compare it with the many more cruel sports of the well-to-do man, such as badger-baiting, stag-hunting, etc.! I maintain that, carried on with that kindness of heart and feeling, which must be, and is, characteristic of our true fanciers, there is nothing in bird-catching and snaring which can bring discredit upon any who may feel disposed to take up one of the most health-giving and pleasurable pastimes I know of—and I can boast of being conversant with many outdoor sports. And just one word in defence of the "professional" bird-catcher: I trust I may never have to mix with worse company, for most of them I have met have proved good-hearted men, civil, and, above anything else, good fanciers, knowing a good specimen when they get one, and knowing, last, but not least, how to properly keep one.

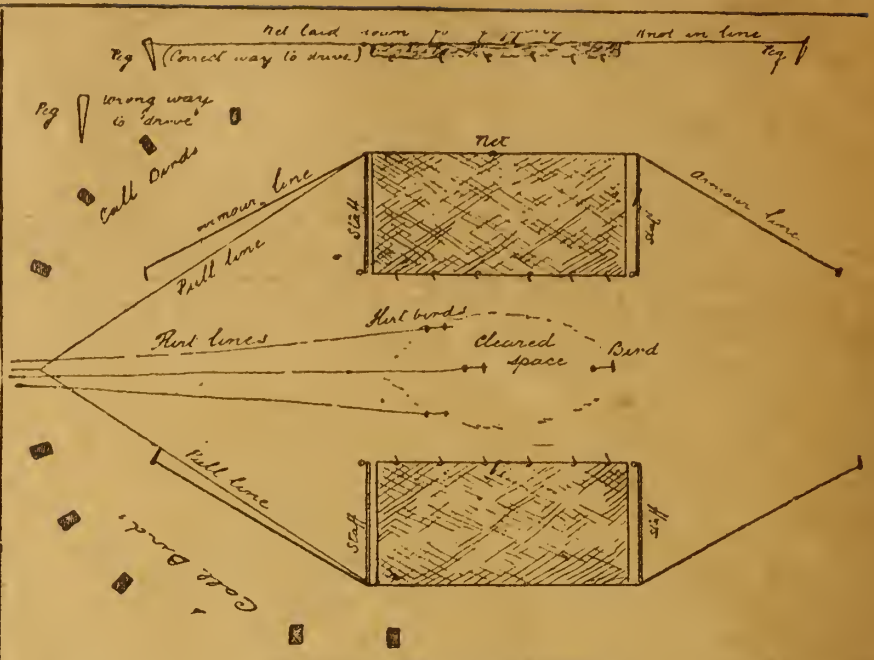
The Use of the Clap Net.

Now I will endeavour to get to the main subject. As there are so many and various ways of bird-catching, I propose first to deal with the more familiar method, known as the clap-nets, and with their accessories. There are many men who stand by the assertion that a net must be thirteen yards long by six feet wide. Others stand by a net which measures nine yards long and four feet six wide, and that being the kind of net I myself use and have proved to fulfil all my requirements, I will endeavour to give you, in detail, the way to lay such nets, also how to arrange the flirt sticks and flirt line, decoy or braced bird, the call birds, pull line, and everything appertaining to this particular method of bird-catching.

The first thing one must do who aspires to catch birds, is to know where to "pitch," according to the time of season. I will start from the beginning of the "man made law" of the open season, which in the county in which I live opens on the 16th of August and lasts up to the 16th of March. On that date in August you will find birds which are termed "branchers" are the most prevalent. These are the young birds which have been bred during the season, and are just branching from tree to tree, so to speak. To catch them you will want to select as a spot, if possible, some wooded country surrounded by pasture land which is cut up, as it were, by hedge-rows, which may be studded here and there with an oak or suitable tree. You will select your pitch, or lay out about 15 to 20 yards from the hedgerow, in a direct line of flight to one of the low-branched oak trees. Then, if you have the desired song or call birds, I can promise you some good sport among the wild birds.

We will proceed to work. You undo your pack, and the first thing to your hand should be your nets, which, if you be a careful catcher, should be undone by just slipping the armouring cord through one loop, when your line and net should easily be laid out ready for you to proceed with your pegs. Having satisfied yourself that the spot is right, you undo your tool bag and put out the tools needed to lay down your nets. You will select from their number your mallet and two holding pegs. Then take your net, lay it down just roughly upon the spot, take the end of the top (or armour) line, which is looped to receive your peg, and drive the peg hard into the ground in a slanting position, so that when you are straining your net at the other end the top peg resists against itself, so to speak. Having made sure that your first peg is secure, then proceed to treat the other end of your net.

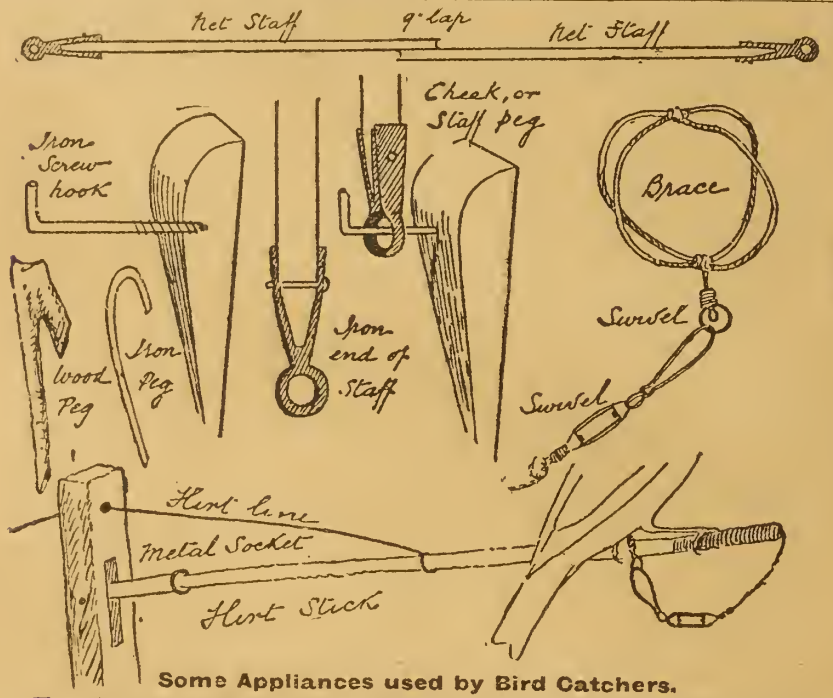
A Delicate Operation.



This second operation requires a certain amount of careful manipulation, for herein lies success or failure, for if you peg this end too slack, or, on the other hand, too tight, failure is certain. To be correct, you must proceed by slipping the peg through the aforementioned loop in the end of your armour cord. Then strain your net, so that on being struck the cord will "twang," then release the net, so as to allow it to run back towards your first peg (or head of your net) for about nine inches. That, you will find, will leave your nets when laid with just enough tension to give them that spring and life which is so essential to their proper action.

Now we have to determine the lap of the nets when sprung (I give my net a nine-inch overlap), and this is got by undoing your controlling staffs (which number four), and by taking two of these and allowing them to overlap nine inches (the distance is guessed) in the centre when laid out (that is, almost end on end). Now lay them on the ground, one socket-end touching the peg of the net already laid, and the staffs running at right angles, so that the socket-end of the second staff determines the place of and position for your head peg of your second net. Drive the head peg in the ground (with the loop of the net over it), and with great care pick up your two staffs and go to the other end of the nets, then strain your armour line, and release it again, as you did to the first net. Now drive in your last peg in the place indicated, by measurement, by the socket on the staffs.

Having pegged your nets out, you must now set about making the hinges, as it were, for them to work on. These are called by many and various names in different counties. I myself have been in nearly every county in England, and know these hinges as "shows," "sprouts," "hoblers," etc.; but as my county and birthplace is the "Garden of England," the definition given there must to me be the right and best one, naturally, so I will call them the "cheeks." Of these you have four, one for each corner of your nets. If you inspect a pair of nets, you will find that where your netting proper starts and finishes, about four inches from the nettiug there is a knot on the armour line, and as your net lies upon the ground, these knots indicate the spot where you must drive your "cheek" into the ground. These "cheeks" have screwed into them a metal hook, over which you slip the socket-end of your staff. Now, your staff is provided with a slot, cut across the top, and you slip your armour cord into this slot, so that it will run against the knot. Repeat this operation until you have a check and staff to each corner of your nets. Now you must peg the nets to the ground, and you will find provision made for this in your nets, for at each corner should be a worked loop, which you draw towards each cheek and peg down to the ground with a wire crook (square with the face of your check), and continue to peg down the whole length of the net at intervals of every yard. This treatment to both nets completes your work, so far, that is, as the nets are concerned.



Now we must get those nets to pull over, and this is the way one must proceed. Go to your tool bag and get out your pull-line, which should be very strong cord, about 50 yards long. At one end is an arrangement like a letter Y, which is termed the "choppings." One of each of these two sections of the pull-line has to be fastened to each of the staffs nearest to you when facing the nets, and be tied in such a manner that they can stand a great strain when one pulls the nets over. The knot termed the double-half-hitch, is the one I employ, as this particular knot has the advantage of getting tighter the greater the tension put upon it. One must also bear in mind when tying the pull-lines to the staffs that they must be tied evenly, for if you use more cord on one staff than another, you will have one wing flying over before the other, when the consequence may be that your nets will "chop" (meet in the centre when coming over), and then you will lose your bird, or birds, as the case may be.

The Working of Clap Nets.

The upper figure shows one side of the net as at first laid out, before the staffs have been put in position. The wrong way to drive in the pegs is shown in the top left-hand corner; they should be put in slant-wise, never upright. The main figure shows the clap-nets ready for use, the two nets stretched taut backwards by the staffs, with pull-lines, flirt-lines, flirt and call birds, "runner" bird (in front of the flirt birds), all in position.

Some Appliances used by Bird Catchers.

The net-staff shows the method of holding to get the nine-inch overlap when laying out the nets (measuring the distance). The 'cheek" shows the iron hook, and also the staff fixed on same. The wood peg shows a ready-made one, cut from a hedge; the iron peg is that used to peg down the nets. The arrangement of swive's on the brace and its attachment is clearly depicted, likewise the flirt stick, flirt line, and the peg which carries them, while the braced bird is seen at the end.

GLASGOW (Confined) SOUTHERN ORNITHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held in the National Halls on September 7th, when there was a large attendance of members. Mr. E. B. Bullions (president) occupied the chair. Arrangements were made for the forthcoming show to be held in the National Halls on October 31st. It was resolved to have 12 classes and two for amateurs, with first, second, third and fourth prizes in each class—Ayrshire blankets for firsts, white satin quilts for seconds, half-dozen knives and forks for thirds, and half-dozen dessert spoons for fourth prizes; and gold medals for cup bird and best bird of opposite sex. Thirty-three specials were allocated down to the ninth birds, the same as last year. Messrs. J. Arnott (Sauchie), D. Caldwell (Baillieston), D. Black (Govan), and J. Watson (Glasgow) will act as judges. Entries are to be in the hands of the secretary a fortnight before the show. The secretary was empowered to appoint other two judges if he thought it necessary after receiving the entries. The most of the members have had a very successful breeding season, and it is anticipated the show will be the best one the club has had for a number of years.—JAMES FLEMING, Secretary, 368, Cumberland-street.

Notes on the Border Fancy Canary.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. S. Hadwin (Liverpool), before the members and friends of the Altrincham C.B.S. on June 30th.

Use of Marked Birds.

These marked birds will also be found very useful in building up a strain for even marks. The even marks are one of the most beautiful sub-divisions of this variety; indeed, this is practically the only variety where the even marked is cultivated. We have occasionally a class at some of the Yorkshire shows for even-marked Yorkshires, but these are few and far between, whilst in the case of the Borders even-marked classes are the rule at all good shows.

The markings differ from ordinary ticks or variegations in the plumage and have to be in certain clearly defined positions on the birds, viz., the eyes, the inside wing, and the outside feathers of the tail. And there must be no other markings or ticks on the body feathers of the bird, that is, visible markings. Markings on the underflue of the feathers are not taken into consideration.

The markings must also be level in the sense that only both eyes, both wings, and both sides of the tail count; one eye and one wing mark, although being two marks, would not count as a two-pointed specimen.

There is no royal road to success in even-marked breeding; the only system is in being careful to mate only those birds together that show the technical markings clearly defined, and so balancing them until the desired object is produced. By balancing the markings, I mean that one must take say, a bird with a left eye mark and pair it to a bird having a right eye mark, and follow out the same plan in the case of the wings and tail. It is not often advisable to pair two two birds together possessing the same marks, as by doing so the markings would be likely to come too heavy.

The beauty of markings consists in their form. The eye markings want to be as like a pair of spectacles as possible, whilst the wings and tail want to have the same number of feathers marked on each side. Whilst the whole of the feathers in the wings are eligible as markings, the inner feathers joined together at the back give a more finished appearance, and are held in the greatest esteem.

For the purpose of fixing the markings when obtained, slight inbreeding could be resorted to, although I do not care for inbreeding as a general rule. It has its uses for this purpose, care being taken to see that all birds used for inbreeding are thoroughly strong and robust. Father and daughter, mother and son are the pairs I like best for inbreeding, but brother and sister may occasionally have to be used. But I must say I do not like to use such near relations if it can be avoided, once the markings are thoroughly fixed in their proper places; and if the markings are found too heavy, a cross with a clear-bred bird would be desirable. I should prefer the cock to be the marked bird, and the hen to be specially good in type and quality.

Concerning Green Borders.

The Green Border is a most delightful bird, if a good one, and being of such fine quality they throw up the rich green colouring far better than do either the Yorkshire or Norwich Greens. The type is not so good at present as in the clear and ticked varieties, but there is a marked improvement being made in this respect. The principal failing in type is that they are rather too slight and skimpy in feather. This I attribute to the fact that the bird in the past has been largely bred double yellow.

It is very rarely that a good Buff is seen on the show bench, and those that have been put out have not stood much chance against the yellows; and it is probably because they have not stood the same chance that they have not been bred for. Why the judges should discard a buff I do not know, because if these birds were judged for pure sound green colour they would beat the yellows hollow, and I venture to say a buff in nine cases out of ten is a more typical bird, being better filled in all round, and altogether more nicely moulded. However, now that the international contest is a yearly fixture, and four classes in Greens are provided at these contests, we may hope to see a better state of things prevailing.

As regards the breeding of the Green Border, the same rules apply as in the Yorkshire and Norwich Greens, type only being different. There is one good thing the Border breeder of Greens possesses over his Yorkshire and Norwich brethren, and that is the wealth of good marked birds he has the choice of.

There is no doubt the birds with fixed marking go a long way to improve the pencillings or markings in a Green, and without pencillings a Green is as much a washed-out specimen as a Lizard would be without spangles. The best Greens, like all other varieties of the Canary family, are produced from opposites, viz., yellows and buff, and the best coloured specimens are produced by crossing the buff cock with the yellow hen. As colour comes mainly from the cock side, the best and deepest coloured birds should be used, whilst it is to the hen we go for type and quality, as well as style. Hence the hen is the predominant partner in this respect. There is one reason why it is not advisable to breed with too many buff cocks, and that is that colour (yellow or buff) very largely follows the cock side; or in other words, buffs will be bred more largely from buff cocks and yellows from yellow cocks.

One point in favour of those who argue for double yellowing is that in double yellowing it is not necessary to introduce light blood, the yellows in themselves tending to keep the birds from getting too dark. By not using the light blood a greater proportion of self-coloured birds are bred.

A Word about Moulting and Showing.

The points against the idea of double yellowing are want of depth in the colour and skimpiness of feather crest by too much yellow blood. I also firmly believe that Buffs have a far greater stamina than yellows; so, taking all things into consideration, the best results will be found from the use of Buffs and Yellows.

There is another variety of the Border family, viz., the Cinnamons; but as these are very much in the making at present, I cannot say much about them. The chief difficulty is to get cock birds; hens can be had in fairly good numbers. Taking into consideration the possibility of obtaining cock birds of this variety, the same rules for breeding as I have already laid down in connection with the Greens would apply, care being taken to keep the two colours separate. I am more than ever convinced that the crossing of the Cinnamon with the Green is bad for both sides from a colour point of view.

Now, having bred your birds, and in the breeding kept a watchful eye on colour production, the next thing is to get a good clean moult. Of course, the pepper-box must be rigidly excluded from this variety. As they are a very hardy variety they usually go through the moult very easily. In the case of birds not commencing to break up, or, having broken up, get stuck in the moult, a little saffron mixture should be used, and when the moult is nearly over a good iron tonic will tighten them up and get them into show condition.

To keep them clean and help to get them through the moult quickly, I like to put them behind curtains of a thin, gauzy kind whilst the moult lasts. Baths are also, in my opinion, a necessity at this time; they not only help the birds to cast their old feathers, but also help them to get the new ones. In fact, they are the best possible conditioner I know, and condition tells, no matter whether it be in the moulting, the breeding, or the show season.

For feeding, a little extra linseed may be used at this time, otherwise the ordinary feeding as regards seeds may be used; and a little boiled carrot occasionally helps to gloss the feathers and improve the colour.

The Border is a bird very easy to show. Of course, the clears and ticks require washing occasionally, but they come through the wash very quickly, and as they are so sprightly, they soon dry and plume themselves. If they are kept in thoroughly clean cages, with a little crushed oats at the bottom of the cages, and are given plenty of baths, there is no need to wash them for every show, especially if the shows are close together. At the same time it must be borne in mind that the Border must always be shown in spotless condition. The standard show cage is oval topped and all black.

BENGER'S
is quite distinct from any other. It possesses the remarkable property of rendering milk, with which it is mixed when used, quite easy of digestion by infants, invalids and convalescents.
Benger's Food is sold in Tins by Chemists, etc., everywhere.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

From Mother to Nurse.

My neighbour is a Canary breeder. Whilst on his holiday he found a nest with five young Linnets in it. These he brought home, thinking he could hand-rear them; but when he got home he found they would not take the food. He didn't want the little birds to die, so he parted a hen Canary from the three young ones she was rearing and placed he Linnets in a little box on the bottom of the cage with her, leaving the cock bird to feed her young ones. The hen at once commenced to feed them, and has reared them since splendidly. The five are alive and doing well.—Sent by William Lloyd (age 11), 51, Stafford Street, Norwich, Norfolk.

*While on Holiday

While on my holidays at Aberystwyth I took particular notice of the birds of that locality. Carrion Crows were feeding in the harbour when the tide was out. Gulls, principally Black-headed ones, were to be seen almost everywhere. A couple Oyster Catchers were busily engaged in search of food on the seaweed-covered reef. Several Cormorants gave a display of diving, this being their way of obtaining the fish on which they live. A flock of fifteen Whimbrels flew by one evening, and where I bathed every morning four Ringed Plovers and a Knot were running to and fro near the water's edge. All the birds except the Gulls were new to me, but my father told me what they were.—Sent by Frank Few (age 12), 10, Buckley Street, Wigan.

* Devoted Parents.

The story is told of a Linnet's nest of four young ones which some children carried home, intending to rear and tame. The parents fluttered around them all the way home attracted by the chirpings. The nest was placed in the nursery window, and soon the old ones approached and fed the young. Then the nest was placed on the nursery table, and still the young were fed; yet again, to try their attachment, the nest was placed in a cage, and still the old birds entered the room and fed their offspring. But, unluckily, when the cage was set outside the window a shower of rain drowned them, and the poor parent birds continued to hover around the house.—From Bishop Huntley's "History of Birds." Sent by N. Tebb (age 14), "Sandfield," Putney Heath Lane, Putney, London, S.W.

Lord Strathcona, the veteran High Commissioner for Canada, is the latest convert to join in the crusade against rats. His remote hermit island home of Colonsay in the Hebrides, inhabited by some ninety families, has just been the scene of a campaign against these vermin, in which the islanders under skilled supervision laid down bait made specially with the contents of hundreds of tubes of Danysz virus jelly—very deadly to rats, but quite harmless to other animals.

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Doings of the Swift.

The majority of our summer migrants have left us, and all that are visible are a few stragglers of the feathered hosts that came in the spring. These must have increased immensely during the splendid summer weather we have experienced, for the weather conditions have been favourable to the nesting and rearing of birds. During our ramble yesterday, the only migrants we saw were a few Doves on the stubble, a stray Flycatcher, Martins, Swallows, and a couple of screaming Swifts. The latter birds come with the last batch of migrants in the spring, and are among the first to depart, generally leaving us some time during August, just previous to which they are particularly active in the evening, and during harvest when the labourers work right up to sunset. The screaming of the Swifts, as they indulge in their aerial flights, circling high in air or darting swiftly round the corn shocks and ricks, is frequently the only evidence of bird life so late in the day, and often when work has been suspended through lack of light, these sooty denizens of the air can be heard high over head. These birds are continuously on the wing, never settling upon the ground, on trees, or the roofs of houses, from the first peep of day until all other birds have retired to rest. All the long summer's day these powerful winged creatures hawk hither and thither, a favourite spot in a village being the corner of the church, where, with loud screaming cries, they chase each other rapidly round the tower or steeple. The nesting of the Swifts is carried on mostly in the dark in some crevice or fissure in a tower or building, or under the tiles of old cottages. When they are sleeping or incubating, appears to be the only time when they cease from flight. Settling at the opening, the parent bird shuffles to the nest, sitting tightly until evening, when she issues forth to feed and to stretch her wings, and possibly rid herself of the obnoxious insects which these birds appear to have always upon them. Swifts differ from the Swallows in being single brooded only, and in laying only two pure white eggs. The young appear to be fully developed and fledged before they leave the nest, as I have seen them fly straight away, and join the old birds in their flights. Nor do they appear to become branchers and settle upon housetops and trees to be fed by the old birds, as the House Martins and Swallows do. It is just possible that for a time they are fed upon the wing.

HOW PLEASED WE ALL OF US ARE

when we make a particularly fine bargain!

And the finest bargain ever obtained by a bird-keeper in the history of the hobby is a copy of "CAGE BIRD'S ANNUAL."

That is not what WE say; it is what EVERY BIRD-LOVER says who has purchased this Marvellous Compendium of knowledge on all Birdy Matters.

Such Stupendous Value has never before been offered.

See what You Get for Your Money.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars of subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.

SPRING NET TRAPS.

Strongest, cheapest, and best self-acting spring net trap on the market; not cheap, worthless rubbish, but the genuine article, as supplied to Zoological Gardens, London, and all the leading catchers. CAGE BIRDS says: Is very well and strongly made, acts instantly; most convenient size, and the latest pattern. Quite simple to work. Ready baited for Finches and Softbills at one setting. Price, 1/6 each, three for 4/-, post paid. Special trap cages, best out, with partitions for call birds, only 1/- each, post paid. Full instructions.—W. Cornwall, 707, Lincoln-rd., Peterborough.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capehill, Birmingham.

FROM THE EDITOR

of CAGE BIRDS to the smallest customer I have one and all speak in highest terms of praise of my catching appliances. All are made from the finest materials by practical men who are not only expert net makers, but thoroughly experienced bird catchers as well. Clap nets made from 60/-, 9 ply, genuine thread, ¾-inch mesh, 3 yards long, 4/- pair; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-, 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all guaranteed 5½ feet deep, and strike 4 feet. All clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up with pegs, poles, and lines, all ready for immediate use. Sparrow nets for ivy, stacks, hedges, etc., fitted on 14 feet bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto, on 19 feet poles, 6/6 pair, complete. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird netting, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; post free; accurate measurement guaranteed. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and most simple on the market, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each. All above have separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. The original Japanese bird lime, guaranteed absolutely stronger than any other, will not run in sun or freeze in winter, ½-lb. 6d., ¾lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. This is the ideal birdlime for bird-catching, as I guarantee it to hold a Hawk, Rook, or Fowl, and to catch every bird clean, not make them a mass of treacle. Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Round or square-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen, 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 4/-, 5/-, and 6/- dozen. All kinds cages in stock; please send stamp for wholesale prices. Solid hemp pull lines, specially spun, without snarl or "back twist," 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Everything required by bird-catchers in stock. For full printed list send stamp. See following few testimonials, which say more for my goods than I could ever say myself. "The Gardens, Belvoir, September 5th.—Sir,—Please send following. I had a net trap from you and caught many birds with it, and was quite satisfied.—Yours, A. Barber." "48, Kelham-street, Doncaster.—Sir.— Thanks for netting promptly to hand; marvellous value. Shall want more.—Yours, T. Holton." "4, Spring gardens, Higham Ferrers, September 15th.— Sir,—Please send ½-lb. lime. I had some very good from you last year.—Yours, R. Stokes." "Woodford Grange Cottages, Thrapston.—Sir,—Clap nets I had from you give every satisfaction. Please send following.—Yours, W. Meacock." "Newnham, Winchfield, Hants, September 16th.—Sir,—Clap nets, etc., received safely. They are quite satisfactory, and have instructed Editor to pay you deposit.— Yours, W. Cherrett." "Yew Tree Cottage, Clutton. —Sir,—Received cages safely, and am perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Hughes." "13, Milk-st., Frome, Somerset.—Sir,—Please send sample yard netting. An old friend of mine bought a pair nets from a firm in this county, and he will want some more very quick. I think you will have no difficulty in supplying me with better than he has got.—Yours, H. Rivers." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, September 19th.—Sir,—I have tried the birdlime, and found it as stated. Whenever a bird touches it, it is like a fly in a spider's web, completely helpless. —Yours, J. Farrington." "14, Plantation-row, Mansfield.—Sir,—Netting to hand, and am entirely satisfied.—Yours, J. Warsop." "25, Wellington place, Llanwrist.—Sir,—Please send sample lime. A friend sent to ——— for some, and it wouldn't catch a fly; it was like oil.—Yours, W. Evans." "64, Hitchin-road, Luton.—Sir,—I shall always use your netting, as I think it best on the market.—Yours, H. Coote." "Gedney, Holbeach, September 4th — Sir,—Sparrow net to hand. It is a very good one, and dirt cheap, as are all your nets.—Yours, C. Cubley." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS says the netting and hemp pull lines used in my nets are of finest quality, and should stand a great amount of wear. Thousands more testimonials open to inspection any time, therefore I have no need of making a great fuss over an isolated one like a baby over its first doll. Kindly note everything sold by me is sent on approval, either on receipt each or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction is not given. All the leading catchers swear by my appliances, and swear at others. See British bird column for further advertisement.

such letters as I publish week after week unless my birds were what I claimed for them? The fact of the matter is this, my birds are correctly described in the advertisement, therefore my customers get what they expect, and expect what they get. I do not describe ordinary specimens as "Massive Giants," nor Irish lime-caught birds as Worcestershire netted birds. I claim to have more Worcestershire birds through my hands than all other dealers put together, and defy contradiction. I have grand stock of genuine Worcestershire netted Goldfinches in pink of health and condition at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/-. Specially selected large, bold birds for exhibition, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few grand, clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, 2/6 and 3/- each. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in perfect health and condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-. Specially selected cocks for show, muling or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Over 70 dozen cock Linnets in stock, and every one guaranteed red-breasted, so customers may rely upon cocks for their money, as I do not stock hens. Clean-moulted two-year-old cock Linnets, in song, 2/6 each; Redpolls, all clean moulted, three 1/3, six 2/3, twelve 3/6; cock Chaffinches, well on seed, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6; cock Greenfinches, three 1/-, six 1/6; cock Blackbirds and Thrushes, well on food, 1/6 each; hand-reared talking Magpie, 4/-; Carrion Crow, 2/6; grand lot clean moulted cock Larks, in pink of health, all big, bold birds, not half hens, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; few, guaranteed in song, 1/-, 1/6 and 2/- each. These Larks are all Worcestershire caught, not sea-coast birds, and absolutely finest lot ever seen. Young cock Canaries, in splendid song, 4/- each; hens, 1/- and 1/6 each. All birds are sent out on approval at my sole risk, either on receipt cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and cash fully refunded if every satisfaction not given. See following few letters, and kindly note all are entirely unsolicited, and have never before been published, as I am constantly receiving similar letters, I have no need to repeat them time after time. "Pontefract, August 22nd. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived safely, and looks a fine bird. I thank you very much for the generous way you have treated me, as I had no claim on you concerning the other bird which died, and never expected you to send another in its place. I feel I have found a dealer in whom I can trust. Yours, A. L. Brattley." "51, Talbot-street, Pinxton, August 28th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch, and well satisfied with same. Yours, S. Cathera l." "West Hartlepool, August 22nd. Sir,—Received Linnets quite safe, and am quite satisfied with them. Yours, W. Thayne." "18, Chambers-road, Southport, August 21st. Sir,—Received Skylark, and am well satisfied with it. Yours, H. Johnson." "7, Mill-yard, Harrington, September 4th. Sir,—Received the three Goldfinches, and am well satisfied, as they are three very nice birds. Yours, J. Mullen." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorkshire, September 2nd. Sir,—Please send me ½ Fine. I shall send next week for some Linnets, and hope they are as good as last year. I think it is time you called yourself a king (I don't, W. Gore), as your birds have a wide record about here, they have won more contests than any other birds, and we have a few from elsewhere, and they are not so good as the Birmingham Linnets. They are all mad about here to get your birds. Yours, C. Hart." On September 7th Mr. Hart again writes us follows:—"14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorks. Sir,—I have had Linnets from you before, not only one or two, but dozens, and they were the pride of Skinningrove for size and quality, and not only that, but for contest singing, and I must say you are as honest as the day is light. I have dealt with several through C.B., but I find you thoroughly honest and straightforward. I received bird time and find it far superior to that I had from elsewhere. Please send me six more Linnets. There are a lot of self-styled kings, but you are the king about here, and have proved it by the birds you have sent. Yours, C. Hart." "Dunipace, Scotland, September 7th. Sir,—Thanks very much for bird you sent me. I am highly pleased with it. Yours, W. Binnie." "Chapel row, Haswell Colliery, September 9th. Sir, Received the six Linnets all right, and they give every satisfaction, I am well pleased with them. Yours, George Cole." "Huntly, Scotland, September 9th. Sir, Received bird safe, and am highly delighted with bird and promptness. Yours, G. Murray." "Garston, Liverpool, September 11th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch safely, I must thank you very much, for it is the nicest Goldfinch I have ever seen. Yours, W. Bryant." "10, Sun street, Nottingham, September 14th. Sir,—Please send six cock Goldfinches. I sent elsewhere for six cocks, and he sent me three hens and three cocks. Yours, B. Walton." "28, Halifax street, Bolton, September 15th. Sir,—Thrush arrived safe, and I am well pleased with him. If I want any more birds I shall know where to send to, so good luck to you. J. Robinson." The above letters are from people who, apart from business transactions, are entire strangers to me. All are open to inspection in their original Government stamped envelopes at any time, and I offer £50 to any person who can prove that I have ever, either directly or indirectly, solicited a single testimonial during the whole course of my business career. All birds sent out are guaranteed well caged and properly on hard seed before sent, and are sent on approval on the distinct understanding that unless birds are perfectly satisfactory, you return them, and I return money in full promptly and cheerfully, without question or comment. Can you imagine fairer terms than these? See Appliance column for further advertisement.

1908 Read these few Unsolicited Opinions 1908 and remember all originals can be seen bearing official post marks. This has a far greater significance than some may think, yet a moment's reflection and the importance and difference from many others will be seen.

Just read the result of young stock from one pair of birds supplied by me this year. Surely to the most sceptical it is proof positive of the high quality of stock birds, and how they should be matched:—

3 Specials,
4 Firsts,
3 Seconds,
2 Thirds,
V.H.C. and Commended.

67, Hunter-road, Hillsbrough, Sheffield. July 13th, 1908.—I thought perhaps you would be interested to know how I got on with the pair of Norwich I got from you. First nest four eggs, three young ones (I broke one testing them). I showed them at the Novice Table Show, and got, with a yellow-marked, 1st prize, with a marked buff, 1st, and clear buff, 3rd. Second nest three eggs, three young. Showed one of first nest and two of second nest at another table show, got 2nd and 3rd and v.h.c, another man's yellow getting first against my buffs. On the 11th inst., it was our Nest Feather Show, I showed all the six young ones. With the clear yellow I got 1st, and special for best bird in Novice Norwich, with two clear buffs I got 2nd and commended, a marked yellow got 3rd, and two heavily marked buffs got 1st and 2nd. I also got special for most points in Novice Norwich, and also silver medal. I have also three more young ones in the nest a week old, all from the one pair I bought from you. I think it very good indeed. I feel sure you will be pleased to learn this. I thank you very much, and I am more than satisfied with them, and if I can do any good in the way of business, I shall be only too pleased. Trusting you may prosper in your business, as well as other ways. J. Woolhouse, to W. Rudd.

Foreign Buyers please note this.

Vancouver, B.C., Canada. August 31st, 1908.—Birds arrived in good shape, in spite of long journey. They are a splendid lot for the money. Could not have got better anywhere else. Will you kindly send me a line when you have some more young Yorkshire cocks and hens. I want the same as you have sent me this time? I will forward order for same. K. S. H., to W. Rudd.

67, York-road, Waltham Cross. September 15th, 1908.—Bird received. I am very well satisfied. Thanking you for same. F. Bentah, to W. Rudd.

Mount Pleasant, Porthleven, near Helston. September 17th, 1908.—Cages to hand; please accept my best thanks. I am well pleased with them. H. Oliver, to W. Rudd.

New Town Dairy, Knutsford. September 18th, 1908.—Birds arrived quite safe, pleased to say they give entire satisfaction. R. Blythe, to W. Rudd.

Blenkinsop Buildings, Newbottle. August 17th, 1908.—Received the birds safe, and I am highly satisfied, hoping to give you another order shortly. A. Harrison, to W. Rudd.

Tower-street, London, E.C. September 11th, 1908. —The Bullfinch duly arrived in good condition. It is a very nice-looking bird, and I am perfectly satisfied. C. E. Brain, to W. Rudd.

A Hard Fact.

Market-street, Lutterworth, July 8th, 1908.—Will you please send me a tin of Eggestine. I can say with truth that I find no other food equal to your Eggertine for rearing young birds from the nest. I can say that I have some very good, healthy and strong birds by using it, and I have not lost one young bird whilst using Eggertine. I tried one other food, and lost two in a very short time. F. Clarke, to W. Rudd.

44, Elliston-street, Hebburn-on-Tyne. September, 1908.—Norwich cock arrived safe, in good condition, and I am very pleased with it. I have been taken in by sending to other so-called dealers, but never again. I know now where to send for birds and be dealt with honestly. J. Houghton, to W. Rudd.

Lawn Cottage, Tisbury. September 19th, 1908.—We received the Canaries quite safe, and are more than pleased with them. W. Weeks, to W. Rudd.

9, Chimney-lane, Balsham, Cambridge. August 16th, 1908.—Please send another tin of Eggertine. I find birds thrive so well on it. A. Brown, to W. Rudd.

54, Aspendall-road, Birkenhead. September 4th, 1908.—I received the birds, and a fine lot they are. I am very well pleased with them. J. Gartham, to W. Rudd.

Helin, Windesmere. September 10th, 1908.—The pair of Canaries arrived quite safely this morning. I am very pleased with them. They seem splendidly healthy. G. Moss to W. Rudd.

60, Becket-avenue, East Ham, London, E. September 8th, 1908. I received the bird quite safely in good condition, this morning, and like it very much. I will give you another order shortly. J. G. Moody to W. Rudd.

Up to contention.

76, Willis-street, Ashton. August 18th, 1908.—I received Yorkshire hen quite safe, and am more than pleased with same. I see you have acted up to your contention, that it is not the price but the quality you receive. G. Swinden, to W. Rudd.

7, Spring-terrace, Richmond. September 19th, 1908.—Birds arrived all safe, and give satisfaction. F. Carless, to W. Rudd.

Molenan, Carrigans, Londonderry. September, 1908.—Thanks for safe delivery of bird, well packed and not like the one I sent for to a certain man, paying nearly double the price, and getting the bird two weeks afterwards closed in a small soap box, only a German hen. H. Rutherford, to W. Rudd.

13, Bowden-street, Burslem. September 3rd, 1908. —Received birds to day in splendid condition, and quite lively. I am very pleased with same. Thanking you for your straightforward dealings. H. Bradbury, to W. Rudd.

5, Field View, Burton Lane, York. September 7th, 1908.—I received the bird safe, and it gives every satisfaction. W. Cooper, to W. Rudd.

7, Crawshay road, N. Brixton, London, S.W. September 17th, 1908.—Birds arrived safely, and in good condition. Am very satisfied with them. O. C. Toms, to W. Rudd.

Hastings. September 18th, 1908. The bird arrived quite safe and in good condition. I am very pleased and well satisfied with it. D. Barnes, to W. Rudd.

469, Gloucester-road, Horfield. August 22nd, 1908.—Just a line informing you of safe arrival of the four Yorkshire hens. Am more than satisfied with same, shall be wanting some number of Norwich hens shortly, and will take good care to send you the order. E. W. Chesterman, to W. Rudd.

Inkerman-road, Bitterne. August 22nd, 1908.—I received the birds quite safe, and I think them splendid value for money. C. Oakley to W. Rudd.

2, Alexandra-villas, Sandy Hall, Croydon-road, Beddington. September 5th, 1908.—Birds arrived safely and in good condition. I am very pleased with them. B. Hibbins, to W. Rudd.

8, Union-street, Cowley road, Oxford. September 14th, 1908.—Birds arrived quite safe, and I am very pleased with them. H. Emanuel, to W. Rudd.

2, Glossop terrace, Pencoed. September 13th, 1908.—I received the bird quite safe. I am very pleased with it. W. Litte to W. Rudd.

95, Llanover-road, Wembley. September 15th, 1908.—Just a line to say that birds received are in every way satisfactory. T. J. Heale, to W. Rudd.

Court Moor, Fleet, Hants. September 17th, 1908.—Bird arrived safe to-day. Am very pleased with it. E. Bourne, to W. Rudd.

Worth Double.

Drumcal Lodge, Blackcock-road, Cork. September, 1908.—I received birds quite safe, and in good health, and I am very pleased with them. They are worth double the money. They are a fine size. An old fancier was looking at them, and he said they were worth double the cost. E. Wall, to W. Rudd.

53, Upper Kennington Lane, London, S.E. September 16th, 1908.—Bird arrived safe and sound, and I am very pleased with it, later on I shall favour you with other orders. A. B. Young to W. Rudd.

4, Howard-street, Penrith. September 18th, 1908. —Bird arrived safely and in good condition. T. Trahan, to W. Rudd.

37, Holmes-street, Smithdown-road, Liverpool. September 11th, 1908.—Bird arrived this day. Very pleased with same. Thank you for kind attention. S. Walker, to W. Rudd.

TWITTERINGS.

Kindly note, writes Mr. D. Greenwood, that I have changed my address to 16, Standish Street, Burnley, Lancs.

Kindly state in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Wm. Roberts, that my address is now 55, Haywood St., Skelton, Staffordshire.

Kindly note in CAGE BIRDS my change of address, writes Mr. F. Archer, breeder and exhibitor of Crests, to 39, Caulfield Road, Peckham, London, S.E.

We purpose holding an open £5 limit show on October 31st, writes Mr. W. F. Monk, hon. secretary of the Halstead and Dis. F.A., when we hope cage bird fanciers will support us.

Mr. Chas. Houlton has been engaged to judge at our show on November 28, writes Mr. T. H. Tiffin, hon. sec. of the Ormskirk and Dis. C.B.S., and 28 classes have been provided.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. B. Simpson, from Springwell Terrace, Northallerton, to 31, Broughton Terrace, Harehills Lane, as schedules appear to be going astray.

The 8th annual show of the Braintree and Dis. P. and F.A., writes Mr. F. A. Hunnable, the secretary, will be held on November 7th, when there will be 5 open classes for cage birds, Mr. J. F. Hills, Sudbury, being the judge.

The Selkirkshire P. and P.A. have, we understand, decided to include classes for cage birds at the annual show to be held on November 28th, in the Victoria Halls. The Secretary is Mr. Andrew Stillie, Heatherlie, Selkirkshire.

We are providing 17 classes for Canaries, writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, hon. secretary of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.C., 2 for Mules or Hybrids, 16 for British birds, and 3 for foreign birds at our annual show to be held on November 7th.

I was very pleased to see a sketch of my Buff Pied Cock as the frontispiece to CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. J. Dalgleish. You made the address "Trinity, Brechin," instead of Trinity, Leith. I wish your paper every success.

We had an increase of four members at our last meeting, writes Mr. R. H. Turner, hon. secretary of the Morley and Dis. C.B.S., making 26 members in all. Our next shows will be on November 7th, December 5th, and January 2nd.

About 60 special prizes, write Messrs. Thomas and Webster, hon. secretaries of the Ramsgate and Dis. F. and F.S., are to be offered in connection with our annual show on October 21st, and exhibitors have the option of either medals to value or cash.

I have received intimations from the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club, the British Bird and Mule Club, and the Border Fancy Club, writes Mr. Walter Neilson, hon. secretary of the Broxburn and Dis. C.B.S., that our society has got the patronage of those clubs.

We hear that Mr. Samuel Dean, the secretary of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S., will give a lecture on "Preparing birds for Exhibition," before the Pendleton and Salford O.S. at their next meeting on September 28th. Fanciers and friends are invited.

Kindly state that there are numerous cage bird specials to be offered for competition at our show on October 15th, which are not stated in the schedule, write Messrs. Christmas and Smith, secretaries of the Blackwood F. and F.S. Mr. J. H. Payne is judge.

Amongst the many testimonials published in his advertisements of British Birds, by W. Gore, of 131, Gooch Street, Birmingham, two of them published this week will be of special interest to Linnet fanciers, who on no account should miss reading them. (ADVT.)

Kindly inform readers of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Geo. Sanderson, hon. secretary of the Kent County C.B.A., that owing to the original date fixed for our show, viz., December 3rd and 4th, clashing with Folkestone, we have changed it to November 17th and 18th. The judge will be Mr. J. North, of Reading.

Kindly note that after a period of 12 years' service as secretary of the Northampton Hand-in-Hand C.B.S., writes Mr. A. W. Law, Mr. J. Nason has had to resign his position on account of pressure of business. The vacancy has been filled by myself, my address being 89, Upper Thrift Street, Northampton.

We hear from Mr. Robt. Whitton, hon. sec. of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S., that a change has occurred with regard to the judges for their annual show to be held on October 10th, Mr. Jas. Strachan (Arbroath), having been engaged as one of the judges of Scotch Fancies, in place of Mr. H. B. Melrose, who finds himself unable to be present.

We have every prospect of a good show on November 5th, writes Mr. Fred King, hon. sec. of the Carmarthenshire C.B.S. Lady Jenkins (Cardigan), has promised to open it, and there is sure to be a fine attendance of county gentlemen and of general fanciers. I shall not be at all surprised if a number of good sales are effected during the day.

We have received from Mr. H. Hill, the secretary of the Bradford East O.S., a copy of the society's syllabus of lectures and social evenings for the winter session. The programme includes lectures by Messrs. S. Dean, H. J. Chittenden, R. Halliday, and others, and an "Impromptu night." Meetings are held fortnightly at 8 o'clock.

Kindly state that we will receive entries for our show until September 29th, being an extension from the 26th, writes Mr. A. B. McIntyre, secretary of the St. Andrew's O.S. show on October 3rd, and also that we have sent out 1,200 schedules. Anyone wishing one may have same on application to me at 31, South Street, St. Andrews.

Kindly mention in your valuable paper that we are holding a members' show on October 24th in the Public Hall, Kirriemuir, writes Mr. Wm. Grewar, secretary of the Forfar and Dis. C.B.I.S. We are giving 20 classes, and are hoping to have a good turn-out. The annual show is to be held on January 1st and 2nd, when over 30 classes will be provided.

The open show of the Metropolitan C.B.A. will be held on October 29th and 30th, writes Mr. F. J. Martin, the corresponding secretary, when Mr. Thos. Heath will judge Yorkshires, Mr. G. Gardner the Norwich, and Mr. H. Norman the remainder. There will be 40 open classes, and there will be many valuable cups and money prizes offered for competition.

Peterborough show, £5 limit (the Amateur's Palace), are giving ten classes each for Yorkshires and Norwich, thirteen British, three each Borders and Mules, two Cinnamons, and one each Dutch Frills, Crests, and Crest-breds; and having the finest railway service, and the best three judges in the country, the secretaries advise readers to give them a good entry.—(ADVT.)

Owing to Mr. Adam Melrose being unable to judge through illness, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, hon. secretary of the Loanhead and Dis. C.B.S., we have secured the services of Mr. Wm. Thornton (Edinburgh), as Scotch Fancy judge for our show on October 10th. I am sure Mr. Thornton will give entire satisfaction, and it is the hope of every fancier in this district that Mr. Melrose will have a speedy recovery.

It was unanimously agreed at our last meeting, write Messrs. Curry and Hutchinson, secretaries of the Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S., that the subscriptions of members who have been unable to pay same owing to their being out of employment through the recent strike be waived for this year, and that such members be allowed to exhibit in the members' and other classes at the annual show, on payment of course, of the ordinary entrance fee.

Schedules for our third annual open show, to be held on October 17th, writes Mr. R. S. Black, hon. sec. of the Darlington C. and B.B.F.A., will be sent out this week end; any exhibitor not receiving one by Tuesday will oblige by sending me a postcard, and a schedule will be sent per return of post. We are looking forward to a good entry, and hope exhibitors will do us justice by sending their exhibits. The show will be held in the Corn Exchange, which is well lighted, and free from draughts, and every attention will be given to the birds as at our previous shows.

As the dates of Peterborough show coincide with the annual fair, we are, writes Mr. S. L. Cocks, well favoured by railway excursions. Fanciers can seldom visit a first-class show at less than fare and a quarter rate, so I have ascertained the various prices for their benefit:—Gt. Eastern from Yarmouth, Norwich, and Lowestoft to Swaffham, 3s. 6d.; Colchester, 4s. 9d.; Bishop's Stortford, 3s. 9d.; Cambridge, 3s. 3d.; St. Ives, 2s. 3d.; March, 1s. 6d.; Lynn, 3s. 3d.; and Wisbech, 2s. 3d. Gt. Northern, from Keighley, Halifax, Bradford, Batley, Dewsbury, Leeds, Wakefield, 4s. 9d.; Dunstable, Luton, St. Albans, Hatfield, Derby, 3s. 9d.; Cambridge, Hitchen, Nottingham, Leicester, Newark, 3s. 3d.; Biggleswade and Sandy, 3s.; Boston, 2s. 3d.; Huntingdon and Spalding, 2s.; Grantham, 2s. 9d.; Stamford, 1s. 3d.; and Kings Cross with the suburban stations, 5s. 6d. Midland, from Derby, 3s. 9d.; Nottingham and Leicester, 3s. 3d.; Stamford, 1s. 3d. I have omitted intermediate stations, which, of course, are included in the reduced fare arrangements. The London and North Western I will send next week.

THE PORTRAYAL OF PRIZE WINNERS.

A Gratifying Reception Given to Our New Scheme for the Coming Show Season.

We are pleased to be able to state that the announcement made in last week's CAGE BIRDS with regard to the portrayal of provincial prize-winners seems to have given considerable satisfaction amongst all classes of our readers. Numerous enquiries have come to hand, and we hope to book a good many commissions for Mr. Norman to execute during the forthcoming season.

There is one point we should like to make a little clearer, and that is that exhibitors can place their orders for sketching birds at any of the undermentioned shows conditionally upon their winning a prize. Should they be unsuccessful, the order will be treated as not having been given.

It will, of course, also be possible for exhibitors to make arrangements with Mr. Norman at the show in the hour of victory, but it will ensure an earlier reproduction IF THE ORDER IS PLACED RIGHT AWAY.

For terms, positions, etc., apply immediately to the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 134, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The List of Shows Mr. Norman Attends This Year.

In addition to the shows given underneath, our artist will be attending all London fixtures appearing in our Show Dates Fixed column, including, of course, the Great National Crystal Palace Show, which we hope to illustrate on just as extensive a scale this year as we have in the past, and, if possible, more fully than ever before.

Herewith we give the list of shows referred to above, and would again impress upon our intending clients to communicate with our Manager immediately, should they wish to see their birds portrayed on or in CAGE BIRDS this season:—

,,	20th.—Plymouth	(Western Counties).
,,	22nd.—Bristol.
,,	30th.—Manchester.
Nov.	11th.—Carlisle.
,,	14th.—Nottingham.
,,	25th.—Cardiff.
,,	27th.—Leeds.
Dec.	11th.—Gateshead.
,,	31st.—Edinburgh'	(Scottish National).

Messrs. J. Robson and E. A. Lovell (Bristol), have been engaged to judge at the annual show of the Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S., to be held on January 5th, 1909, writes Mr. Daniel John, the sec. Should any fancier of the club wish to guarantee any classes, or give any specials to the society to be won at the show, the secretary will be pleased to hear from same, as the society's schedule is now in hand.

Help Wanted at Wellingboro'.

The entries for Wellingboro' show will not close until Sunday, September 27th, writes Mr. W. Howe, the secretary. At the time of writing I have only got 20 entries in all the 31 classes put together. I do hope exhibitors will give us a good entry this year, as we had a big loss last season, being put to double expense through having to postpone our show.

Echoes from the Glasgow National Derby Show.

Edinburgh led the way; the quality of the Scotch Fancy was good; that the cup-winner was a gem; that some good birds were shelved; that the secretary was justly pleased with himself; that the owner of the £100 pair was there; that he seemed interested in several of the "ticket-holders"; that his advisor accompanied him; that there was a fine turn-out of breeders; that "Mac" was in the tickets; that he enjoyed his holiday; that the Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby had over 300 entries up to Saturday 19th; that there are many surprises in store there.—SCOTS FANCY.

He Crows Longest Who Crows Last.

It having come to the knowledge of the police that game was being served out of season at a certain restaurant, one day an inspector visited the place, and ordered dinner, one of the courses being "pheasant."

He finished his meal leisurely, then called the waiter and said: "Will you ask the guv'nor to step this way a minute please?"

"What shall I say it is for, sir?"

"I am Inspector Snaffleu, and I wish to notify him that he will have to answer for selling pheasant out of season. I have secured the necessary evidence against him."

"But, sir, it—it wasn't pheasant you had."

Inspector (uneasily). "Wasn't it? What was it then?"

Waiter (cheerfully): "Crow."

Through a Bird-room Window.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR,

About a week later a porter toiled up to the Vicarage sad and weary, bearing a cage of Gargantuan proportions, covered with sacking, in which were the savages. I got them inside, for the row they made was simply hideous, undid the sacking, and lo, the Solomon Islanders were revealed to view. I may as well say here, in passing, that they had been known in their past life as Solomon and Rose. I thought the latter name unsuitable, and with a nice regard for Bible history, we re-named them "Solomon" and "The Queen of Sheba."

"Solomon" I found was a gentleman of moderate size, about the same girth as a small Moluccan Cockatoo, but with a very red and evil-looking eye, suggestive of drink; on his head he wears a beautiful sulphur-coloured crest, which he can erect at pleasure—or anger; on his cheeks he has (although it sounds a bit Irish) a blush of sulphur colour. The rest of his person is snowy white, with a dash of sulphur under the wings; strong and wicked-looking feet complete the picture, set off by a beak that would break a bar of iron asunder. When he is in full dress, I have no doubt he will be rather a taking gentleman, but on arrival he was positively indecent, being absolutely naked in that part of the body where a City Alderman keeps "his corporation," and his shoulders were so bare that I seriously contemplated making him a warm singlet!

"Rose," or "The Queen of Sheba," as she is now, had a rather wild and scared look about her, as though, like the immortal Mrs. Gummidge, she was always on "the worrit." She had also a decidedly undressed appearance about the neck; in fact, she might have been some ancient Duchess on her way to Court, for she showed a great deal of long and scraggy neck. She, too, had had a sulphur crest. But Solomon, possibly not approving of female finery or the order that ladies going to Court must wear feathers, had apparently removed it. This left her a wild and uncanny look, and combined with a bold, brown eye, gave her a very reddish appearance. The rest of her person was clothed in what should have been a dazzling white, but which was, to put it mildly, a bit weather stained.

Cockie's Little Ways.

I hope I may be excused if I make a slight extract from their late owner's letter:—"Our two dogs are glad that Rose and Solomon have departed, as when the Cockatoos screeched the bulldog would sit on the stairs and howl enough to take the roof off, and the toy black and tan would whine until tears ran down her face. It was quite a "concert." A few years ago, when they wanted to nest, we wired off part of a bedroom and put great logs of wood in, and they enjoyed it tremendously. They picked the wall paper off in strips and nibbled holes all round the frame work of the window; so we did not put them up there again."

How I cried with laughter as I picturned the scene described with so much unconscious humour. I wrote one day to their late owner pathetically bewailing their destructiveness. His reply was not encouraging: "I am not surprised at your account of the ruined aviary. When I first had the Cockatoos I wired off a large bay window in a spare bedroom, and, as I thought, protected every piece of woodwork with wire netting. Unless I had seen it, I would never have believed the destruction done by the pair in a few hours. The window sashes were nibbled the whole length, and a broad board, about nine inches wide round the ceiling, has pieces out of it as large as a tea saucer. To this day I cannot imagine how they supported themselves to do the mischief." (I can; they hung head downwards and so went to work). The letter continues "Their seed was supplied in biscuit tins, and these had their sides torn out and flattened. They seemed possessed of the 'old gentleman,' and did the mischief out of pure cussedness. After all my time and trouble I was obliged to return them to the cage, for otherwise I believe they would have wrecked the house! About three years ago, when I was taking the spaniels for a walk, the birds managed to undo the fastening of their cage. Rose went round the room knocking down ornaments, and Solomon got out of the French window. At that time drainage was in progress, and at the opening opposite this house the cutting was thirty feet deep. Being the most dangerous part of the road, an old watchman was posted there, and my wife asked if he would catch the bird? 'All right, mum,' he said, and hobbled after Solomon. Shortly after he cried out, 'I've got him, mum.' Then there was a brief and bloody scuffle, accompanied by dreadfully sulphurous language, and then a groan: 'By ——, he's got me!' He had, too, in the fleshy part of the palm of the hand, and hung on like a bulldog. Even when we had managed to get him into his cage, he was still holding on. The man bled like a pig, and made the carpet in a nice mess."

Sunshine and Rain.

I laughed till I cried over that letter. I had better have wept in reality. I felt I was fairly in for it, and as they were here, I should have to make the best of them. It was not long before I learned to sympathise with that bulldog, the toy terrier, and the ancient watchman.

When inquiring about a new continent, one naturally asks for its most remarkable produets. I can safely affirm that in the case of my two friends it was the voice. These two Cockatoos could give points to any musician on the vexed question of "voice production." When they are carrying on a quiet orderly conversation, it reminds you of a captain on an Atlantic liner giving his orders to the crew in a storm; but when they are fairly roused up, excited, they would almost wake the dead. Sometimes, you know, when a friend tells you rather a tall story, you say very quietly, "It's a bit large for my belief hatch, but if you can get it down yours, you are free and welcome to ship it." Well, I am telling the solemn truth when I say that I heard Solomon making some observations to his partner at our station, which is a good mile from the Vicarage.

The Solomon Islander is a deeply trying creature, who, when you are in want of a quiet morning snooze, and just as you have tucked the clothes up to your chin, scares you until you feel positively wicked and get up and throw things at him. I have often felt towards that bird as Herod the Great is said to have done towards the inhabitants of Jerusalem—he wished they all had only one head, that he might cut it off! What makes it so aggravating, not to say maddening, is that the brute never seems to be where you throw the things at him. You could swear he was just where you shied that empty soda-water bottle, but instantly comes from exactly the opposite direction his "Weigh, weigh, wagh."

Love and War.

He is a ventriloquist, and anyone experienced in Cockatoos soon finds that he is not driven away or destroyed by the artillery of missiles, but merely lies low until the tyranny is overpast, or his victim has got back into bed again, and then off he starts as fresh as ever, with his "Weigh, weigh, wagh" in an ever increasing crescendo. Whether he is talking to his lady love, or whether he wants me to come out and fight him, I do not know, because my knowledge of Cockatoos is limited, but there are times when I don't talk to him "with a sweet mouth."

Sometimes people ineautiously take liberties with Solomon and try to scratch his head. They don't try a second time! Solomon resents such liberties. A friend tried once and got caught by that awful beak. He blamed me! I said people should be very careful in handling strange Cockatoos, and the scratched one promptly gave into me, and said things that I will not repeat about "That fool of a bird."

Have you ever seen a very deaf old lady trying to hear what is said to her? She puts up her ear trumpet and says, "Eh, my dear! what did 'you say, the house on fire?" "No," you yell. "I said—it was—a—fine—day." Well now, that just reminds me of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba conversing. "Wagh," he yells. "Wagh," she replies, in a milder way, with her head on one side. "Weigh, weigh, weigh," he yells; "why—don't—you—listen—to—what—is—said—to—you, you old idiot; if you are deaf, why don't you go to a doctor!" And poor Sheba subsides—for a time.

I am rather vain of these Cockatoos, and I naturally desire to show them off, but I regret with but very little encouragement. Indeed, my friends say quietly, but forcibly, that if I do not get rid of them they will leave—not the village only, but the country, and devote the remaining years of their life to sweeping crossings abroad; they say they would rather do this than face these birds again. Besides, they say, it is very unkind and unnecessary to make a fellow aviculturist go and say things which will only make things harder for him in the time to come. In a future paper I hope to speak of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba in domestic life. But what the future holds, who can tell?

DULWICH O.S.

Annual Outing.

Beautiful weather prevailed on the occasion of the outing to Amberley (Sussex), by the members and friends of the Dulwich O.S., on September 13th. The muster was not quite so strong as was anticipated, owing to several having missed the train. Doubtless 8 a.m. Sunday is a strong pull after the hardships of the week-days. Nevertheless a happy band gathered not exactly with the object of studying that most dear to them, viz., bird life, as on the occasion of the country ramble last spring, but with the idea of having a sociable and enjoyable day. Nor were they disappointed. The pleasant walk along the banks of the river Arun through wood and glen, to the picturesque district of Arundel will long be remembered by the party. After a short halt at the "Black Rabbit" for refreshments, a brisk walk over the Duke of Norfolk's estate brought the party back to Amberley by 2 p.m., where full justice was done to the excellent lunch provided by mine host of the "George and Dragon," and presided over by Mr. Frank Gain ("News of the World.") The scenic beauty of that walk impresses itself on one's memory. The party after lunch divided into small groups for short walks, etc., some going for a row on the river. Tea was partaken of early, and after the party had been photographed by Messrs. Lovesy and Crabb they entrained for town, arriving back by 8 p.m. Great praise is due to Mr. W. J. Lovesy for the excellent arrangements.—G. F. WOOLHOUSE.

Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

Weeds and Seeds of the Field and Wayside described.

By R. MORSE.

ERRATUM. — The second paragraph of the last article in this series, which appeared on page 14, should have been headed "Sweet Vernal Grass" (Anthoxanthum orderatum), the illustration only having reference to "Field Gentian."

Bilberry (Vaccinum myrtillus).

This is a small shrub, with branched, angular stems. It is often called Whinberry, and sometimes Whortleberry. The leaves of this species are egg-shaped, and have saw-like edges. They are not evergreen, as in the less common Red Whortleberry or Cowberry (Vaccinum Vitis-Idoea), but fall off as the winter approaches.

The flowers hang separately in a drooping position, and are almost globular. They are flesh-coloured, and have a wax-like appearance. The berries are dark blue, with a glaucous hue upon them, and are a favourite food of many birds. They have an agreeable taste.

The Bilberry is a common shrub, being abundant in many of our woods, where it may be found in bloom from April till June. The berries, or fruits, are gathered and made into tarts in some country districts, but the addition of some more acid fruit is really necessary to make a palatable "dish."

Mistletoe (Viscum album.)

This parasitic shrub is well-known as a decorative plant at Christmas, but only comparatively few have seen it growing. It does not grow out of the ground, as most plants do, but roots itself in the growing wood of various trees, in which position alone it is able to grow. It is an interesting experiment to stick some fresh seeds to the undersides of the branches of an apple tree, and watch the growth. The seeds easily adhere, as the berry contains a glutinous substance.

The Mistletoe is in bloom during most of the Spring, but is not then generally noticed, as it is much more conspicuous in the Winter, when the trees are bare and its berries ripe.

It has been provided by Nature with a splendid means of seed-dispersal. Birds are attracted by the edible berries, which, being viscid, necessitate an occasional wiping of the beak against the bark of a tree. Some of the berries thus get left sticking to the tree, and soon commence to grow. From whatever part of the berry the root proceeds, it curves towards the tree supporting it, and after piercing the bark, continues to live upon the juices of its host.

Autumn Gentian (Gentiana amarella.)

This little plant generally strikes one as being particularly erect, but it is not by any means tall, only reaching a height of about six or eight inches as a rule. The stem is square and has on it many leaves placed opposite to one another, but they have no leaf-stalks.

It is of a purplish hue, and is generally much-branched. The flowers are numerous and rather large, but only expand in the bright sunshine. Each one is cut up into five parts, and is of a pretty purplish-blue colour. In shape, the flowers somewhat resemble funnels, and the "throat" of each one delights to grow on dry, chalky, pastures, where it blooms during August and September. I know of an old disused chalk-pit in Cambridgeshire where the "Blue of the Gentian bell" is the predominating colour as every Autumn draws nigh, and in contrast to the white chalk, it forms a sight not easily to be forgotten.

Field Gentian (Gentiana campestris.)

Another common species, similar to the one just described, is the Field Gentian. This also grows in any pastures, but may readily be distinguished by its flowers, which are pale lilac in colour, and only four-cleft instead of five, as in the Autumn Gentian.

All the Gentians are exceedingly bitter, and are often used in various forms as a tonic by many country-folk. This is in addition to its being largely used as a food for cage-birds.

Wallflower (Cheiranthus cheiri.)

The wallflower is a well-known member of the cabbage family of plants, known to botanists as Cruciferae. To the natural order (which does not contain a single poisonous species), belong Watercress, Winter Cress, Shepherd's Purse, Gold of Pleasure, and hosts of other useful and well-known plants, some of which have been described and illustrated in CAGE BIRDS.

Plants of this family contain considerable quantities of sulphur and nitrogen, and therefore have a very unpleasant odour when decomposing. Many have valuable stimulant properties, and some are used in medicine as a remedy for scurvy.

The Wallflower blooms throughout most of the Spring, and large quantities of seed may easily be gathered during early Summer, and stored for future use. Although this flower may often be found growing in an apparently wild state on old walls, etc., it is not really a native of this country.

Cornflower (Centaurea cyanus.)

This handsome flower is largely cultivated in gardens, although it is a true English wild flower. It commonly reaches a height of about two feet, and its stems are slender and somewhat branched. The leaves are rather long and narrow, the lower ones being toothed. The outer florets of the flower are generally of a beautifully rich blue colour, and the inner ones contain stamens with purple knobs at the tops of them, called anthers.

A cornfield containing these flowers mixed with scarlet poppies,—and such a sight is by no means rare,—makes a picture never to be forgotten by those who appreciate the wonderful beauties of Nature.

The Cornflower blooms in late Summer, and may sometimes be found covered with flowers even in October, or later. Varieties of this plant with white, purple, and other coloured flowers are sometimes grown in gardens, and may now and again be found wild. The Cornflower belongs to the Composite Family of plants, which includes the Thistles, Daisy, Dandelion, Marigold, and thousands (about 10,000 in all) of other plants. It ripens abundance of seeds soon after flowering, and thus considerable quantities can easily be gathered.

Clover.

There are many species of clover occurring in a wild state in this country, some being common, and some very rare. I will give descriptions of a few of the commonest and most plentiful species.

RED CLOVER (Trifolium pratense).—This is the Clover which commonly grows in meadows, and is known to almost everyone. It has a very sweet scent, and the blooms contain abundance of "nectar"—the fluid from which the bees make honey. It is a perennial plant, and remains in bloom the whole of the Summer months. The seeds should not be gathered until the florets have become brown and crisp.

SULPHUR COLOURED CLOVER (Trifolium ochroleucon).—This grows plentifully in a few of the eastern counties, although it is generally described as a rare plant. It sometimes grows to a height of eighteen inches, and may easily be recognised by its cream-coloured flowers. The flower-heads are at first almost round, but they afterwards lengthen considerably, and change to a brown colour. It is in bloom during July and August.

WHITE OR DUTCH CLOVER (Trifolium repens).—This is the common White Clover of meadows and waysides. It has a creeping stem, and the leaflets sometimes have a light band and a purplish spot near the centre. The white flowers are sometimes tinged with pink, and after fertilisation, they turn brown and bend downwards. This species, like the Red Clover, may be found in bloom throughout the whole of the Summer.

CRIMSON CLOVER (Trifolium incarnatum.—Although not a truly wild plant in this country, the Crimson Clover sometimes occurs as an escape from cultivation. Fields of it are quite common in many parts of England, and when a good crop is seen in full bloom, it is a grand and beautiful sight, reminding one of a huge crimson carpet spread across the field from end to end.

It is a downy plant, and the flower heads, instead of being globular as in the species already described, are cylindric, and may reach a length of two or even three inches.

It would be almost impossible to mistake this plant for any other, as it is such a distinct and beautiful species. A white variety may occasionally be found. The Crimson Clover flowers in June and July, and is an annual. The Clovers belong to the Pea Family (Leguminosae), and produce an abundance of seed.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

I have had an extra good breeding season. I have finished up with over 400 birds, and I have some real good ones among them both in Yorkshires, dark eyes and Cinnamon marks and clear pink eyes, and in Norwich Plainheads. J. WILCOCK (Eccleshill).

Hybrids at Kilmarnock.

Hybrid breeding has been a great success in Kilmarnock this season. As many as 16 have been bred by various breeders, namely, 6 Goldie-Bullies, 3, Linnet-Bullies, 3 Siskin-Greenfinches, 3, Linnet-Greenfinches, and 1 Redpoll-Siskin. This is a fair collection amongst six breeders. One breeder had as many as 11, but only managed to rear six. Mules are also good. Canaries in all sections are very numerous, and some good ones may be looked forward to.—R. MCCAW, secretary, Kilmarnock C.B.F.C.

Seven Sisters B.B.A. (King's Lynn).

Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to report the work of the above club, as it is formed to improve the Norwich Plainhead. I must say the members have worked hard this season, and some very good young birds have been bred. The approach of the show is causing our members to get their birds into condition to stand the test they are usually put to at that time. The following is a list of breeders' results:—C. Grenfield (seven pairs), 66 youngsters; R. Hatchy (nine), 50; C. Richardson (seven), 41; T. Simpson (six), 39; A. H. Cole (eight), 35; R. Edmunds (three), 19; R. Harrod (three), 13; F. Bocking (two), 10; J. Davis (one), 4.—R. EDMUNDS, hon. secretary.

In and Around Glasgow.

The season of 1908 has ended well in and around Glasgow. A lot of grand birds have been reared, and the shows will be a treat. The Cockerhill breeder, who has 14 young by one cock, has reason to be proud of his achievement. They are of exceptionally fine quality, and the stock that will beat them will exceed anything we have seen in the way of Scotch Fancies. The breeder is a member of the Glasgow Southern O.A. The Springburn breeder, who won with his 1907 young yellow cock bird, has managed to secure another at least equally promising, which will put him in a position to keep his name forward in the yellow cock class. He has been fortunate for quality. The Maryhill fanciers have no reason to complain, and if their birds are thoroughly moulted they should be in the chief honours. They have laboured well, and it is time they were in the red tickets. Nowhere in and around Glasgow is there a more enthusiastic band of fanciers than at Clydebank; they pay great attention to style, and very neat birds have been reared. The size promises to be on the up grade, and fanciers in this quarter should have a nice local show. The Partick and Scotstown fanciers have had a bad time of it. However, they usually manage to secure a few honours, and are looking that way. Rutherglen can now boast of enthusiastic fanciers; they have taken to the Scotch Fancy, and in course of time with a little perseverance should redeem the lapse from the king of cage birds. Norwich and Border Fancy breeders are strong here. The Bridgeton contingent have no reason to be discouraged; a well-known breeder has already figured in the honours this season. The reputation of this district has every appearance of being maintained in open competition. The Govanhill fanciers have had more than ordinary success, and with the quality they were operating upon, they are bound to distinguish themselves. A good deal of Mr. McClure's strain is in Govanhill. The East End fanciers have had success, and a number of promising young birds are spoken of. Size and quality prevail, which are considerations of prime importance. The Strathbungo fancier has not been blessed with many, but the young are very promising; he is not easily discouraged. Several country fanciers have had a good time of it. A Govan fancier who went into an excellent strain has been rewarded with a team of very promising Scotch Fancies. He is to be congratulated, as Govan has been in the background in this particular department. I had a talk with Mr. McQuiston, of Ayr, and was delighted to learn that he has succeeded in rearing two Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids, and one Greenfinch-Bullfinch; he is a keen fancier and merits success. I have not been through all the bird rooms, but those I have visited contain exceptionally promising young birds, recalling the grand old days of the Lawson's glorious breeding success, which attracted so much attention. The outlook is most re-assuring and encouraging, so far as the Scotch Fancy Canary is concerned in the West of Scotland—RAMBLER.

I always look forward to receiving my copy of CAGE BIRDS each Friday, writes Mr. G. H. Smith (Hull); it is the most delightful and instructive paper that money can buy. The "Brainy Tips" I admire very much. Allow me to wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

An Encouraging Record.

We were very pleased, writes F. W. Bradley, of Messrs. Bradley and Coulson (Millom), to be honoured by having our Buff Yorkshire cock (second prize winner at the Palace in the open Buff class) depicted on the front page of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, and we certainly think it brings the artist, Mr. H. Norman, great credit indeed, it being a very good drawing of the bird, and like it in every detail. I might say that this was our first attempt at the Crystal Palace, and I am sure we were more than satisfied, pulling off second in the open Buff and he in the unsighted Yorkshire classes. We have bred some very good birds this season, and hope to be in the running this year. My Palace winner has done exceedingly well for us, always being in either the money or the cards. His son, a young yellow cock, has done even better, only being once out of the money last season, although he was exhibited every week during the show season. I was unable to send him to the Palace, as he fell in the moult about a week before the show. On the whole, we did exceedingly well last season, only running four birds at the most at one show (and at some shows only two), with the exception of Millom. The following are some of our wins:—Morecambe, 2nd, St. Helen's, 1st, 2nd, spl in Buffs; Lancaster, 1st, 2nd, and spl. in Buffs, 1st, 2nd, and spl. in Yellows (four birds in all); Barrow-in-Furness, 2nd and 4th in Buffs, 2nd and 3rd in Yellows, and 3rd in selling class; Cleator Moor, 2nd in Yellows and 3rd in Buffs; Millom, six firsts, three seconds, two thirds, and seven specials; Whitehaven, 3rd in yellow unlighteds and 1st in selling class; Cockermouth, 1st and spl. in Buffs, and 2nd in Yellows; Egremont, 1st and spl. in Yellows, and reserve in Buff; Palace, 2nd in Buffs and he in unlighteds. We won in all over 90 prizes during the season. This, I think, is a fair record for young stagers. We wish your valuable paper every success. It has, we may say, been of great help to us.

IMPORTANT TO SECRETARIES & OFFICIALS OF SHOWS.

An Announcement Which Should Have Your Prompt Attention.

As was announced in last week's issue, for the purpose of completing our show-reporting arrangements, we want to know AT ONCE the dates of all the shows which provide classes for cage-birds, in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. We already have a fairly full list of fixtures, which will be found printed on page 157 of our last number. We ask secretaries and officials of societies to please look over this list, and notify us at once should the name of their show be missing from it. We also want the names of the judges and the number of classes which will be offered (if not definitely settled, then the number likely to be offered).

A Postcard will do, but post it at once. Fanciers will oblige by calling the attention of the officials of their society to this notice, so that none may be overlooked. We want the date of every show going to be held during the 1908-9 season, with the other particulars where possible.

Judges Names and Numbers of Classes.

Of the fixtures given below we are still wanting information as to the judges and number of classes likely to be offered.

Ayr (November 21st); Bromsgrove; Bury; Burton-on-Trent (November 14th); Bridgend; Bromley; Bristol (November 11th and 12th); Consett; Castle Douglas; Cardiff; Cupar; Darley Dale; Dover; Darval; Dudley; Edinburgh Eastern; Frome (December 3rd); Forfar; Glasgow and West of Scotland; Gravesend; Hartlepools; Houghton-le-Spring; Kirkby Stephen; Leeds, Roller; Leamington (Royal); Limavady; Lurgan; Lesmahagow; Murton; Muirkirk; Matlock; Neath; Norwich P.C. of Ireland; Pembroke; Plumstead and Woolwich; Sidmouth; Stonehouse (N.B.); Tonbridge; Thornton; Yarm.

All Particulars Wanted.

Of the following fixtures we require not only the above particulars (where possible), but also the secretaries' names and addresses. Will local fanciers kindly send same on?

Airdrie and Coatsbridge; Blackwood (N.B.); Carnarvon; Camborne; Cambridge (November 24th); Cradley Heath; Dumbarton; Denny and Dunipace; East Molsey; Herne Bay; Hucknall; Johnstone; Kirkyth; Luton (November 4th); Pathhead (Kirkcaldy); Reading; Reigate; Sunbury-on-Thames; Sanquhar; Tredegar; Wiksworth; Whitby.

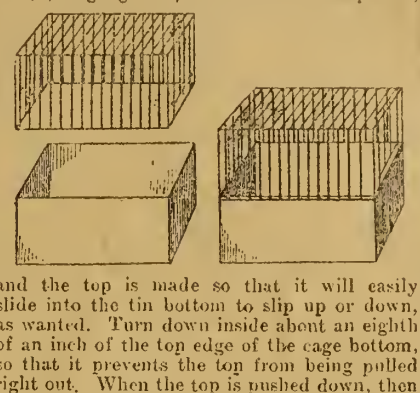
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird-room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 242.

A USEFUL CAGE WHEN CATCHING.

Sent by A. Pennor, 9, Winbolt Street., Great Moor, nr. Stockport.

Enclosed is a sketch of a cage I make and use and find very useful for keeping down the bulk of the pack when catching. The bottom is made of tin, 3in. deep, 6in. long, and 3½in. wide. The top is made of punched bar, ¼in. gauge. Top and bottom are separate, and the top is made so that it will easily slide into the tin bottom to slip up or down, as wanted. Turn down inside about an eighth of an inch of the top edge of the cage bottom, so that it prevents the top from being pulled right out. When the top is pushed down, then this cage takes up but about half the room of an ordinary one; when pulled up, and with a perch put across, it makes a nice-sized call cage. The door is of the usual slide-up kind. A. Pennor.

No. 243.

A METHOD OF MAKING HEAD HOLES.

Sent by G. Doran, 14, Temple Villas, Palmerston Road, Dublin.

Many fanciers object to the round holes for feeding and drinking purposes, and say they often damage a bird's head feathers. The illustration shows an easy method of making a practically square-shaped hole. "A" is bent to shape with the pliers from a single piece of wire. "B" is a wire of the cage front, bent up to form a hook to attach to "A." A little touch of solder at "CC" makes the ring complete; or if "H" is wood, then "CC" can be driven down into it, when soldering will be unnecessary.—G. Doran.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*The Sparrow's Tavern.

Close to my father's stable is a drinking trough, a tavern being situated across the way. One day a Sparrow came to the trough to drink, and finding the water low flew away. But it was not away long before it returned, and finding the trough still low but water dripping from the tap it opened its bill and drank.—Sent by H. Lee (age 11), 107, Monk Street, Derby.

A Clever Yorkshire Canary.

My father gave a lady friend of ours who lives at Finchley a young Yorkshire Canary five months old. One Saturday she thought she would let it have a fly round the room, not noticing that the window was open. The Canary of course flew out right across to the trees about four hundred yards away. She called it and it answered, but did not return. Night came on so she gave it up for lost. But to her great surprise, early next morning there came a tap, tap, at the window. Drawing the curtain aside, she saw the Canary. After a long chase they threw a wrapper over it and caught it.—Sent by Margaret Solomons (age 13), 6, Anthony Street, Commercial Road, London, E.

*Saved from the Cat.

One morning at breakfast time, I went into our yard and came across a little Sparrow unable to fly. I had our cat in my arms, and it got its eye on the bird, and was ready to spring. I told father, who came and caught the bird, and put it among the others in our aviary. And it likes cornheads, of which it gets a lot, very much. It is now strong and is moulting.—Sent by Jane C. Newbigin (age 11), 69, Percy Road, Whitley Bay.

IN THE COURTS.

GOLDFINCHES IN BERKS.

George Seal, of Eddington, Hungerford, was summoned at the Hungerford County Police Court for having in his possession 14 Goldfinches, recently caught, contrary to the Wild Birds' Protection Act, 1880, and the by-laws of the Berks County Council.

P.c. Woodley stated the facts. He said he saw defendant on the platform of the railway station at Hungerford, with a cage containing Goldfinches.—Defendant, who had been before the Court on a previous occasion for a similar offence, was fined 14s., and 6s. 6d. costs. The birds were liberated.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Not Breeding this Year.

Constant Reader of CAGE BIRDS.—If you had given me a few particulars as to how the bird is fed and treated, I might have discovered some cause for its not making any attempt to breed this year after breeding so well last year. It is possible her resources were over-taxed last season, but it is certain she is very much out of condition now. Your treatment is not faultless, by any means. Try what following will do for her, and if there is not a considerable improvement in a few weeks write again, and say how you have been treating prior to this. Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and in addition give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it three times a week. Whilst the moult is in progress give also half a teaspoonful of maw seed twice a week. Give all separately and on different days, so that a different item is on hand each day. Towards end of moult drop maw and give a few grains of lin-seed in its place, and again drop this when bird is quite fine in feather, beginning at the end of the year to give a pinch of inga in its place. In its drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and ten drops of glycerine for three days, and then four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week, and on the alternate days fifteen drops of chemical food, continuing this every second day for a month. Give a little chickweed or plantain stalks daily, and keep cage quite clean and well strewn with gritty sand. Tepid baths may be given two or three times a week. See the bird is not troubled with red mites nor exposed to draughts.

Something Like Croup.

Sinn Feinn.—Keep the birds in a comfortable and regular temperature, where they will be quite free from draughts and chills; do not give cold baths until better. In addition to usual seed diet give them half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on alternate days a spray of green-stuff or a plantain stalk or two. In drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, every other day for a fortnight, and on the intervening days twenty drops of chemical food. Shake former mixture thoroughly to well break up oil before giving. The hen which refused to mate, assuming you were not mistaken regarding the sex of her partners, was probably mated with birds that were very much out of condition. The fault probably did not lay with the hen, or she would scarcely have laid and sat so well.

Young Birds and Fits.

Miss Richardson.—The young birds being late hatched are doubtless of a weak and delicate constitution. The diet may also have something to do with it, but on this point you do not give enough particulars to enable me to form an opinion. It would also have helped if you had mentioned whether the birds were in a good plump condition, or thin and wasted. Try following for a few weeks, and if the birds do not soon improve write again, and give the particulars mentioned. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape seed, and in addition give separately half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day, and on alternate days a spray of seedy chickweed, flowering head of groundsel, watercress, or a few half-ripe seed stalks of plantain or shepherd's-purse. Limit them to this diet for a few weeks at least. Keep free from draught and damp; do not give them cold baths whilst in this condition; and see they have plenty of gritty sand always. Tepid baths may be given occasionally in nice mild weather. In drinking water give ten drops of glycerine, six of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and for the next week five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and twenty drops of chemical food on alternate days. If any bird again has a fit, discontinue the above for time being, and give one drop of warm salad oil in beak each day for three days, and in the water as much bromide of potassium, for the same length of time, as will cover a three pence piece. Then resume above medicine, beginning a the beginning with the acid mixture.

A Remedy Wanted.

J. Stewart.—It is impossible to guess what your birds are dying from without more data to go on. But as it seems like some infectious complaint, your very best plan is to have a post-mortem on the next that dies, to ascertain whether you have septic fever among your stock. In this case there would be practically no remedy save isolation and thorough disinfection. Dr Clarke's handbook on the subject (2d., post free, from this office) would give you far more information than it is possible to do here. Your method of feeding is decidedly bad, so perhaps this may fully account for your losses. See reply to "Miss Richardson" for system of feeding, and adopt the method for your birds. Also give some more fruit if there are any, give the bromide of potassium, when your birds will not need

The Pip Again.

South Africa.—Is your aviary situated anywhere near a poultry run, or do fowls run at large about it? The ulcerated tip of the tongue may quite possibly be nodules of canker, which might have spread from poultry suffering from diphtheritic roup. For a course of treatment see replies to "Novice, Aylesbury" and "Miss Richardson" for a proper system of feeding. When the birds are attacked in this way give a little bread soaked in milk each day, but in your climate you must be careful this does not become sour. A little green food daily would be very useful, and you should endeavour to supply it by sowing a little lettuce seed in pots, or where it will grow quickly. For medicine give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash in each ounce of drinking water daily for a week; for another week give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and twenty drops of chemical food on alternate days.

An Explanation.

Anxious, Swansea.—Thanks for your explanation. As you doubtless gathered from my last reply, the linseed meal you use in your soft food is the chief cause of your trouble. If you discontinued giving this immediately as advised, you doubtless find your stock much improved by this time. The remainder of treatment advised will still be very suitable, with the one variation that you may now add a small teaspoonful of dry summer rape (give separately) to each bird twice a week on days when they are having no other extra. A scrap of green-food may also be given two or three times a week. After the first two weeks' treatment, as already advised, instead of going on to the third week begin over again, and repeat the two first weeks' treatment. This will materially help to remove the abdominal swelling, which, however, will gradually disappear when the cause has been removed. You may continue giving the cod liver oil to those birds that lose flesh for a few weeks.

Night Lights for Rollers.

Geo. Wood.—It is true the nights are longer and the days correspondingly shorter, but I do not see any necessity for giving the birds a light to enable them to feed for an hour or two after darkness has set in. Birds of the size and hardihood of Canaries are not really hurt by fasting through our long winter nights. Indeed I should be more inclined to think the enforced fast was more beneficial than otherwise, seeing the birds have so little to do but eat during daylight. If you wanted to accustom the cocks to sing by gaslight that would be a more valid reason for giving them a light for an hour or two. Still if you wish to try the experiment I would advise you to give the light from seven to nine; turn it quite low at nine and remove or extinguish it fifteen minutes later. This will be better than the plan you suggest. Never extinguish a bright light in a moment or you will probably cause some of the birds to pass a night on the cage bottom, or to damage their plumage in trying to get on a perch.

Fits of Sneezing, etc.

J. C. S.—The bird is either exposed to draughts, or to greater fluctuations of temperature than it is able to endure. It also seems to be rather troubled with indigestion, but as you say nothing about how you feed I cannot tell how far this may be the cause of the trouble. Look up the last few issues for general treatment as to food. Give twenty drops of whisky, five of syrup of squills, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same amount of chlorate of potash in each two tablespoonfuls of water for drinking two days in every three for a week or so. See it is kept free from draughts, and in a comfortable temperature. Also see this and all other birds are supplied with nice, clean, gritty sand, and are free from red mites. Few birds are quite through the moult yet, although it is possible yours may have finished dropping feathers, and have only to complete the growth of the new ones. The cocks will not make much effort at sustained singing until the moult is quite complete. It is not advisable to keep cocks and hens altogether through the winter. Young and old cocks, and ditto hens, may be kept together if space is at a premium. But it is not a wise policy to keep too many birds together in one flight, even if it is a large one. It almost invites contagious and infectious diseases. If possible make at least four groups, viz.:—old cocks, young cocks, old hens and young hens.

Definitions Wanted.

Novice.—1. The clear yellow Norwich marked on side of neck is a ticked bird. A clear yellow has no mark at all, the term "clear" being reserved for such birds. Of course in your case I take it you mean the bird has no other visible mark but the one on the neck. 2. A missing claw, or a deformed claw, will not disqualify a bird on the show bench, but will tell against it always, and more or less, according to the officiating judge, the extent of the deformity, the nature of the competition, and the general type of the bird. 3. A bird with plumage frosted on the back but more yellow on the breast is a buff, and should be shown as such. The absence of "frosting" on the breast would tell against it in competition with a bird more evenly mealy or frosted. 4. If the birds were entered in a class for "Pairs matched for breeding" you would certainly lose points by putting a clear yellow hen with an even marked yellow cock. In certain exceptional cases the pedigree may make them a suitable pair for breeding, but the judge not knowing the pedigree has to make the awards from external appearances, and two yellows must consequently lose points in consequence of appearing badly matched. Of course there is nothing to prevent your putting two yellows together if you wish, but you must be prepared to lose points for doing so. The list of "Fancier's Terms" in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL would doubtless be of great use to you.

Is it the Pip?

Novice, Aylesbury.—I suspect your bird was suffering from indigestion, which gave rise to the symptoms you imagine might be the mysterious "pip." See many replies, the last few weeks for a proper general diet, and if you have similar cases arising give a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with mow seed every second day, and on the alternate days a bit of the following paste about the size of a pea stuck on the wires. Paste—in a small teaspoonful of honey well mix as much chlorate of potash as will lie on a sixpence, and add just enough warm mutton fat to make a paste about the consistency of putty when it is cold. In each ounce of drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, three of tincture of gentian, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week.

Wintering the Stock.

"Only a New Beginner."—A much better plan than turning the cocks and hens loose altogether in the room to moult off and remain there through the winter would be to erect a wire partition across the room and divide it into two, in one portion of which you could keep the hens separately from the cocks. Later on towards spring the wire partition could, if necessary, be covered with very light canvass or any opaque material to keep the sexes out of sight of each other, and thus help to prevent them coming into breeding condition too early. You could get a bird organ from almost any large dealer in Canaries. Consult catalogue of any large dealer whose advertisements you will find in our columns. Sorry I cannot in fairness to the others single out any individual for mention.

Legitimate Bird-catching.

B.K.O.—It only requires a little nerve to catch a bird out of a Crystal Palace aviary. You probably prolong the operation by trying to be, as you say, "as gentle as possible." But to most persons it would doubtless be a very difficult affair; so instead of going into detail how to catch them in the aviary, I will give you another procedure. Get a small empty cage, such as a bath cage or a nursery, place a pinch of hemp on the bottom, and a scrap of green food. Open the doors of the aviary and the small cage as wide as possible, and place the two door-spaces together, and then gently drive the required bird into the small cage by introducing a thin cane on the opposite side of the aviary. When it enters gently slide it along side of aviary until the door of the latter can be closed; then slide the open hand edgewise between the two cages and cover the door space of the small one whilst you close it—and there you are! A little gentle persuasion will soon enable you to drive any given bird into the small cage. In the larger space out of doors you should use a large butterfly net, or you might put in a trap cage with a little tempting food inside, and stand near by with a cane to prevent any but the bird required going into it. The latter is a very useful plan, as Canaries will enter the cage most readily.

A Quartet.

A.P.—1. For the stiff hind claw give rather small and almost round perches—about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. Every day for a week, or until a little power appears to be returning to the claw, catch the bird and hold the foot in a saucer of fairly hot water for a minute or so, then remove it and transfer at once to a saucer of cold water for another minute; then back to the hot. Repeat the changes three or four times, finishing off in the cold water. Dry the foot, and then gently rub in a drop of warm olive oil. 2. It is of little consequence whether you use citrate or sulphate form of iron. I doubt whether either possesses any advantage over the other, so you may just as well continue to use the sulphate with which you are familiar, as begin with a new thing. 3. As long as your birds are moulting alright you do not require saffron to assist, nor anything else. Therefore I would not advise you to get any just, as it were, for the sake of using it. One thing I would advise you, however, viz., as long as your birds are doing fairly well do not be led into giving them this, that, or the other, which happens to be puffed and popular for the moment. 4. The correct distance between perches is governed by the size of the cage or aviary. When the space is sufficient I like to see the principal perches at such a distance that the birds have to make a slight effort with the wings to assist them in hopping from one to another. This gives rise to a large amount of healthful exercise and consequent development of muscle. A few hours a day in a show cage for a few days before a show will be enough to get the birds used to the perches in them. Glad you found previous advice so useful, and our replies "always plain and to the point."

Growth on Wing.

Pont View.—The substance you describe, which appeared last moulting season ripened, and dropped off, and is now growing again this moult, is, in all probability, an abnormal feather growth, and it would hardly be wise for you to interfere with it beyond just touching it with a little pure vaseline or any simple ointment which would moisten the skin, and give the obstructed feather a chance of coming through. Should it form a wart-like growth as before, just slightly touch it with a feather dipped in tincture of iodine. This will hasten its disappearance, so that it may be useful at the latter end of the show season. The danger of attempting any other interference is that a considerable amount of bleeding may result, and even then the renewed growth is frequently of the same abnormal type as before, so that nothing is gained by the interference.

Yorkies Again.

W W. Bath.—The hen is subject to draughts or chills, and perhaps may also be worried by red mite attacks. All these causes must be quite removed before you can effect a cure. Keep the bird in a nice cosy place, perfectly free from draughts or damp, and do not give cold baths until well. A tepid bath may be given on mild fine days. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and give a pinch of hemp separately twice a week, and three times a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it. Every second day give a small piece of green food. In the drinking water give the eucalyptus mixture advised to "C.N.M." in last issue, for a fortnight, and on alternate days twenty drops of chemical food in the water.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Case of a Woodlark.

J. T. Jones.—You don't want to be too hasty in condemning the seller of the Woodlark. As you say the bird is not "very streaky looking" in its plumage, I should think it likely he was quite correct in stating it to be a cock. Anyway, it cannot be expected to warble until it has recovered from the moult. The best cock cage (in my experience), is one of the type known as the "Lark runner," which should not be less than 21ins. long, 11ins. wide, and 10 ins. high, and should have a canvas top, and one perch in the middle, low down. There should be a door at each end; food and water vessels outside. Arrange so that one half of floor can be very thickly covered with a mixture of seed dust and fine sand, and the other half by a clover turf, renewed as required. Run in frequently a wide shallow tin or dish filled with chickweed or other green-stuff, made very wet, and among this the bird will paddle, and so keep its feet in order. When cleaning this cage (and most others, in fact) the best plan is to have another cage of suitable size handy, and run the bird temporarily into it. Insects are just as troublesome to Woodlarks as to Skylarks. The cages of both species should be brushed over at brief intervals with a mixture of equal parts paraffin and methylated spirits, getting it thoroughly into the joints, wire holes, etc. The birds of course, should be in a temporary "home" while this is being done. They can be put back after the dressed cage has stood in the open air for a few hours.

Magpies and Jays.

G.R.—Jays, Magpies, and birds of this class need to be fed on very similar lines. The best and cheapest way to feed is to utilise table scraps largely. As a Mock food you could use broken up dog biscuits (or puppy cakes, or game meal), with coarse Crissel say two parts of either of the former to one part of the latter (by measure). Moisten with hot water, giving it crumbly moist, and mix ing with it table scraps, cooked meat, potatoes, greens, gravy, etc. Give a few trapped mice, young Sparrows, and the like, but not over much raw meat, for much raw meat and offal makes their excreta more than ordinarily offensive: always keep them scrupulously clean. Eggs (raw or cooked), acorns, nuts, peas, berries, fruit, worms, beetles, and grubs are other things they will eat, not forgetting little frogs and the little mice. Spratt's "Game Meal" (without grit), or Clarke's "Melox," or any foods such as these, make excellent stock foods for these birds with a little Crissel and the other things mentioned. Magpies and their relations have very varied tastes. My own bird gets "Melox" mixed with the leavings from the pot of my small insectivorous birds. He eats with great gusto anything offered, from rice pudding to roast duck.

Sex of Nightingale, etc.

Gale.—Except in the breeding season (when the vent is a sure guide), sex differences are very slight. The hen is generally smaller, and with a decidedly rounder-looking head when viewed in profile—the cock is flatter on the skull, and longer in the beak. He bears himself more boldly, too. If you have a bird clean and bright in colour, bold and sprightly in demeanour, with flattened skull, and generally well-built, it is safe to reckon it a cock. The only way to gain really helpful knowledge as to the sex distinctions, is to get a true pair and study them closely. It is the moulting season now; most small softbills will have finished by this, however. My own are all through with it. My 'Gales commence to warble as soon as they have recovered from the moult. The singing of other birds sets them going as soon as they feel fit. They are curious birds, though, and lapse suddenly into silence for days at a time for no apparent reason, then come back into song again with a similar puzzling suddenness.

Identity of Bird.

Jacko.—Your description is not a very complete one, but if the bird has a brown cap, which stands out quite distinctly from the colour of its back, then I should say it is a female Blackcap Warbler. If the brown of the head merges into a brown back, so that it can hardly be termed distinct, then the bird may be, as you assume, a Greater Whitethroat. The back of the Blackcap, both cock and hen, could hardly be termed brown, but rather ashen-grey, or slate-grey. There is yet another species, however, of which your bird may be a member, viz., the Redstart, and on second thoughts I recognise that your description tallies quite well with that of the hen. She is, broadly speaking, ashen brown in colour generally (whitish on the throat), deepening to brownish on the wings, and to russet-red on the tail, and near the root of the tail. If a hen Redstart, it would be continually flirting its tail up and down, and making graceful bows with its body, in manner not unlike that of the Robin. Neither Whitethroat nor Blackcap has this mannerism.

Thistle Heads.

Silliw.—Both of the thistle heads you send are quite alright to give to Goldfinches and other seed-eaters. I prefer the large heads myself, naturally, when I can get them, as they contain more seed; but the small heads are not to be despised—far from it. I think that in a recent issue I dealt at length with the storing, etc., of thistle heads for winter use. A simple and effective way to collect the seed is to take the thoroughly ripe heads, cut off the "fluff," and then drop the heads (opening them somewhat) into a big, strong paper bag. After you have got a suitable number inside, well shake the bag, and the ripe seed will fall out into the bottom. It can then be turned out into a suitable vessel (such as a fine sieve) and have any foreign matters gently blown from amongst it. A deep bucket will answer as well as a paper bag. By the bye, to ripen the heads (if necessary) they can be laid out in the open air during fine weather—in the sun, if you like—providing an eye be kept upon them to see they do not "blow," for if this happens, your seed is soon careering over the house tops, or causing owners of neighbouring gardens to bless you.

Some Males Wanted.

F. Pace.—If you are trying for hybrids, it is not a good plan to run two hens with one cock. In fact, if you do so one of the hens is more likely than not to get maltreated. It is, however, not at all a bad plan to run a few extra Bullfinch hens with cock Finches in an aviary, but when the latter have fixed on their mates, the surplus hens are generally best removed, for I have found unmated hens can be decidedly mischievous. Further, two Bullfinch hens can be run, eg., with a cock Goldfinch, and he will generally make a choice of one of them. When I have tried this, however, I have invariably found that should one hen be better than the other (from a breeder's standpoint) the cock bird perversely persists in bestowing his affections on the least worthy. For a hen Bullfinch either a cock Siskin, Redpoll, Goldfinch, Linnet or Greenfinch would be a suitable mate (the two former don't want an over big hen). For the Greenfinch hens, a cock Goldfinch, Siskin and Redpoll would be very suitable. For one hen Chaffinch you might try a cock Canary, and for the other a cock Bramblefinch. The size of your aviary does not commend it all to me at all. A width of two feet is not sufficient. A height of 7 feet to 8 feet would be quite enough and more convenient should you want to catch up any birds.

Brevities.

An Elder Tree (Wright Hill).—An elder tree will not be injurious to any bird, quite the opposite, in fact, I expect will prove to be the case.

Sex of Bramblefinch (R.P.).—The cock Brambletinch in summer plumage has a head and mantle of shining black, sometimes "spangled" with brownish markings (according to age). The hen, broadly speaking, is a mixture of grey and sandy tones of colour, and your bird is of a certainty of this sex.

Bramblefinch Breeding (Bramble).—I, The cock Bramblefinch has bred with the hen Chaffinch. Hybrids of this cross have won numerous prizes at the shows. I should not like to "recommend" any other hen British bird as a mate for him. One might try Canary, Greenfinch, Linnet, etc., but it would be purely experimentative. Often the cock Bramble is "rough" towards the wives one tries to find for him in a cage.

Concerning a Linnet (Poor Bird).—You certainly must not check the moult (even supposing you could), for it is the proper time of the year for birds to renew their plumage. From the particulars you now give, I advise you to dissolve in the Linnet's drinking water daily (two tablespoonfuls) a piece of citrate of iron the size of a small pea; for one week will probably be sufficient. Watch its effects on the bowels, and regulate dose accordingly.

A House Martin (E.C.).—If you have no knowledge of bird keeping, I advise you to give the bird its liberty. House Martins are a delicate insectivorous species, and require a high grade soft food, as sold for small softbills, moistened with a liberal admixture of finely minced hard-boiled egg and a little grated carrot. Live food is essential to their wellbeing; meatworms and small gentles, with flies, wasp grub, tiny beetles, live ants' eggs, etc., according to season.

Lump on Back Toe (J.B.W.).—The likeliest treatment consists in lightly painting the swelling daily with tincture of iodine. A small camel-hair brush is a good implement to put it on with. Keep the iodine off the surrounding parts.

Stock Mixture for Goldfinches (R.E.).—My own stock mixture for all-round purposes is: hemp (well seasoned) and teazle (new, well-ripened crop) four parts each, Canary three parts, linseed one part, summer rape and charlock half part each, with a slight sprinkling of safflower and sunflower. During the moult I drop the hemp, giving a little occasionally, and offering plenty of wild seeds (thistles, etc.). For newly-caught birds I add four parts of niger (which I give pretty plentifully at all times to all my Finches), or else give it mixed with maw in a separate vessel ad libitum.

In the Winter (S.W., Oldham).—You will find your birds take to the shelter alright when the rough weather comes along. I shall be astonished if they don't. You could put the food under the shelter, which would help to familiarise them with it.

Bullfinch Moulting (G.O.).—There is nothing uncommon in the fact that one Bullfinch has moulted, and the other not yet started to moult. With adult birds this frequently happens, although they are kept under precisely the same conditions. It is an unusual thing with young birds, however, and especially so in your case, seeing they both came out of the same nest. By-the-bye, it is not possible, I suppose, that one of them is a hen, which has retained the sombre tone of the youthful garb, and so misled you into thinking she has not moulted?

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Budgerigars and Lovebirds.

T. A. F.—Madagascar Lovebirds would agree with the Budgerigars. But they are shy breeders and their doing so is quite an event when it occurs. At the same time it would hardly be safe to procure them now to put outside; you must wait till spring. You could add a pair each of Cockatoels and Rosella Parakeets to your aviary, both of which would ultimately breed, but sometimes take even a couple of years to make up their minds to do so; once started they are free breeders, and but seldom fail to rear the young hatched out. They will all thrive on Canary and millet seeds and oats, with grit, green-food, cuttlefish, and also old mortar rubbish to prevent egg-binding. The Madagascars are not so hardy as Budgerigars and during very severe winters you are apt to lose the hens; on the other hand Cockatoels and Roscilas hold our worst weather in contempt.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

H. Thornley.—Your space is so small that I fear you will not succeed in breeding many birds. I do not advise you to mix Britishers and Foreigners. Start, say with three pairs; all the following would survive the winter and prove fairly interesting; they would also very probably breed:—Zebra and Ribbon Finches and Java Sparrows. On the other hand if you would like birds of the Parakeet class, one pair each of green and yellow Budgerigars would make a pretty show in your aviary, and are also very probable breeders. For the Finches and Sparrows you won't have to supply Canary white and spray millet seeds, green-food, grit and water, with a little soft food, such as is given to Canaries when they are feeding young. For the Budgerigars you would find Canary and millet seed, with a few oats, green-food, grit cuttlefish, and water sufficient to keep them in good health. You must fix up at least double the number of husks and nest boxes that you have pairs of birds. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" and "Budgerigars and Cockatoels," the former 1 1 and the latter 7d. post free, both from CAGE BIRDS office, very helpful.

Budgerigars in Soft Moult.

"Jubberwock."—I should say your birds are kept too warm and do not get sufficient exercise; try them in a cage double the size and keep them in an unheated room. Get as much grass in flower as you can, but we are getting a little frost already occasionally, and it must not be given when frosted. They cannot have too much of this. In addition to your seed diet, give one or two crusts of household bread (daily if they take to them readily), which have been dipped into a small quantity of Parrish's Chemical Food, and allowed to become almost dry before being supplied to the birds. If there should be any signs of constipation, for one day soak the crusts in Dinneford's Magnesia, instead of the Chemical Food. Though they are to be kept in an unheated room they must not be in a draught; if it is possible to so arrange, let them have a daily fly round the room, which would be a great help. Why not get "Budgerigars and Cockatoels," 7d. post free from this office?

Treatment for Young Grey.

C. A.—Always a certain how a bird has been fed by its previous owner, as sudden changes are harmful. If your bird is well on seed, diet it as follows: Seed mixture—Canary seed and oats, two parts each, wheat, dari, hemp and sunflower seeds, one part each; well mix and keep a supply continuously in cage, also give to vary the diet, ripe fruit, plain biscuits and nuts; you should also keep up a supply of grit and water till you are sure the bird will not over-drink itself. Do not leave it in cage but permit it to satisfy its thirst three or four times a day for the present; or if it is a young bird, make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine, with Parrish's Chemical Food, every other day. Keep a piece of ocean cuttlefish in its cage. If it is not yet eating dry seed or only partially doing so, you must give a little boiled maize till you find it is taking to the dry seed heartily (Note the boiled maize only keeps fresh one day), but as soon as possible get it on to the above diet. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever. Keep the bird where it will hear plenty of conversation, and also repeat to it odd words and sentences, and it will soon commence to repeat them. Keep it out of draught.

Wintering Avadavats.

Reig.—It all depends on the size and structure of the aviary; if this allows space for flight, has a weather-proof shed, and is well furnished with husks to which the birds can retire at will, they can be success fully wintered out of doors. I have so wintered and kept for years under these conditions, Avadavats, Waxbills, and most of the Australian and African Finches, and most species of Mannikins. It is too late this year for nesting arrangements; next year keep them supplied with long grass, fine and coarse hay, and they will either nest in the branches or make use of a husk; that is of course if the breeding fever is sufficiently strong upon them.

About Whydahs.

F. Collins.—The Pintail is smaller in the body than the Paradise Whydah, and his tail consists of four long narrow plumes varying from 9 to 11 inches in length. The tail of the Paradise Whydah consists of two long and two short plumes, the short ontside plumes having the shafts of the feather projecting an inch or more beyond the webbing—whence one of the dealers' names "Shaft-tailed Whydah." Pintail Whydah: Male in full colour. Top of head, chin, back and a band on each side of the chest black with a greenish sheen; wings black, with white and buff bands running across the coverts; throat, narrow band round back of neck breast abdomen and under tail coverts white; beak coral-red, legs and feet ruddy brown. Paradise Whydah: The male in breeding plumage has the whole of head, throat, back, shoulders, wing coverts, tail and thighs black; back, sides of neck and breast deep ruddy-chestnut merging into whitish-buff on the abdomen, rump white; beak black; legs and feet dark brown. The difference in beaks alone—Pintail, coral-red; Paradise, black, is a sufficient distinction to easily distinguish the species by.

The Blue Mountain Lory.

J.T.—It all depends on what it has to contend against—rarer species in equally fine conditions, of course, always stand the best chance; but except at the largest centres, where the entries are many and varied, including often very rare species, the Blue Mountains' chances of premier honours are not great. However, at most shows (if we except such as are of Crystal Palace calibre), the Blue Mountain when in fine condition stands a reasonable chance of catching the judge's eye. I can, perhaps, make myself a little more clear if I say that a Red-collared Lorrikeet, which is very similar in colouration to the Blue Mountain, but brighter and rarer, if in equal condition would be almost sure to score over it. A medium-sized Parrot cage—or a box cage with open top, the front wires being rounded off towards the back.

PARK & LAKE AVICULTURE

Doves (R. Holmes).—1, You can only tell the sex of a Dove by noting its behaviour when full-grown to others of its species, but if you happen to know the circumstances of its hatching, you will probably find that, if the younger bird of a pair of squeakers, it is a hen; if the elder, a cock. 2, Your cage ought to be big enough, but from your sketch it looks to be an awkward shape; it is more important for a cage to be long than high, especially for birds like Doves. You will do well to put the nest lower, as you intend doing. 3, The white Dove you have is merely a breed or variety of the ring-necked, cream-coloured Dove; it is more worth breeding, but as in these birds the colour usually follows that of the rock, you would have to get a white male to breed white young with. I never heard of a male Dove refusing to sit; you had better exchange yours for another one. 4, Give rock salt in the lump, and let them peck at it. Very sorry your name was overlooked in the former reply; many thanks for kind remarks about CAGE BIRDS.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 425, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (H. Benter).—Bird fever.

Canary (T. W. Fish).—Inflammation of the lungs and liver, commonly called "a severe chill."

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Show Report (W. Nolan).—Thanks for your kindness, but you will see that a report has come to hand from another source.

Selling Birds by Auction (Scottish Secretary).—It is an offence against the law for anyone to sell birds (or anything else) by auction, who is not a licensed auctioneer. The cost of the said licence is ten pounds. It is usual for societies to invite someone locally who is qualified for the post, to become "honorary auctioneer," his duties being to attend the shows and dispose of gift, class, and other exhibits which have to go up for sale.

A Naturalist's Collection (Glasgow Reader, P. R.).—We are afraid your letter is too much in the nature of an advertisement for us to publish. We should have hundreds of people claiming similar notices. Pleased to know you spent so enjoyable a time there.

Portrayal of Prize winners (F. J. Martin).—The list of shows given was intentionally made up of provincial fixtures only. It will, of course, be understood by fanciers generally that the London shows are all easily accessible.

Photos (H. Lee).—Accept our thanks. If we can find a corner for them, we certainly will.

Am I a Novice? (H. Durston).—Most societies have a rule defining what constitutes a novice, and by this the members are bound. There is no universally accepted definition. The C.B.U. has one, however, which governs open shows held under its rules. We know of several societies in which members who have won prizes with British birds are still held to be eligible to compete as novices in the Canary section. The ruling of your own society will have to govern the case.

Prize Cards, etc. (Celt).—Yes; you can get these goods in Manchester. If you turn to our show advertisement columns, you will find Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe (of the city of the damp climate) offering both prize-cards and posters.

SINGING CONTESTS.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Contest held at Prince Albert Inn, on September 20th, when 14 birds sang. 1st, Lauriman; 2nd, Farrar; 3rd, Wood. Judges, Messrs. R. Jackson and J. Clark.—W. DEAN, Sec.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon street, Sept. 20th, when some good singing was heard. Mr. H. Allen judged. Timekeeper, Mr. T. Johnson. Twenty-eight birds sang before a crowded house. 1, Hardcastle; 2, Fisher; 3, Robinson and Hardcastle shared.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Blackwood (C.B.U.).—October 15th.—Drill and Council Halls.—Judge, Mr. J. H. Payne. 11 open classes.—Nor. 2, Yorks. 2, Bord. 1, A.O.V. 1, Mule 1, Brit. 2, Sell. 2. Prizes 10/-, 5/-, and 2/6, and numerous specials. Entries close October 8th to CHRISTMAS AND SMITH, 35, Gordon-road, Blackwood, Mon.

Broughty Ferry (S.C.C., S.P.C., and S.B.B. and M.C.).—October 10th, Good Templar Hall.—Judges, Messrs. T. Allison, Jas. Strachan, Allan Chalmers, J. Patterson and P. McQuiston.—45 open classes—Scots. 8, and Sell. 2; Crest 5, and Sell. 1; Nor. 8, and Sell. 1; Cinn. 1; Bord. 6, and Sell. 1; A.O.V. 1; Mules 2; Brit. 7, and For. 2. Prizes, 10/-, 5/-, 3/-, and a good list of specials. Fee 1/6. Entries close October 5th, to ROBT. WHITTON, 2, Churchill-place, Broughty Ferry.

"Admiral Duncan" (C.B.U.).—October 3rd, "Admiral Duncan," Coalpit-lane, Nottingham.—Judge, Mr. T. Barker.—26 open classes.—Nor. 7, Crest 9, A.O.V. 1, Pairs 2, Sell. 4, Brit. 2, For. 1. Fee 1/6. Entries close October 1st to WM. HEALEY, 37, Victoria Buildings, Bath-street, Nottingham.

St. Andrews.—October 3rd.—Town Hall.—Judges, Messrs. P. McDougall, D. Hogden, J. M'Lay, and A. W. Watson.—38 open classes—Scots. 10, and Sell. 2, Nor. 4, Crest 4, Non-feds 1, Bord. 4, Yorks. 2, Common 1, and Sell. 1, Brit. 5, Mule 3, and For. 1. Prizes 10/-, 5/-, 3/-, and specials. Fee 1/6. Entries close September 29th to A. B. MCINTYRE, 31 South Street, St. Andrews.

Eastbourne (C.B.U.).—October 21st and 22nd.—Pavilion, Devonshire Park.—Judge, Mr. C. A. UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

BRADFORD WEST members and friends spent a very pleasant evening on Saturday last, the occasion being a washing exhibition, and lecture on "Preparing Birds for Exhibition," by Mr. W. A. Cowgill. A couple of birds were put through the "tubbing" process, and they came out very well, considering they were in their first feather. This was followed by an interesting exhibition of the ways and means of conditioning, etc. A hearty vote of thanks brought the meeting to a close.

TO DAY (Saturday), the Bradford City and the Bradford East Societies each hold a members' show, and keen competition is expected. At the latter show the new staging is to be tried as an experiment; the birds will be at a convenient height for visitors to see without having to handle the cages. Also, they have gift classes, the proceeds of which are to go towards providing trophies for the Unflighted Classes at the first open show, to be held this season. I have also been favoured with a syllabus for the season from the Bradford East O.S., the items in which number 15, ranging from members' shows to lectures and judging competitions.

WIBSEY Society are to have a washing exhibition on October 3rd, the gentleman officiating being Mr. W. Ormonroyd, of Great Horton. Now, ye novices who want a few hints on this subject, you will do well to attend. The Wibsey fanciers will give you a hearty welcome.

WE are getting very close to the show season; another week, and we shall be in the midst of it. The fanciers of the Bradford district will have to wait another seven days for a show near home, the first Yorkshire Union fixture, viz., Skelmanthorpe, being rather a distance away from that centre.

I HEAR that several of the Norwich enthusiasts intend to have a day out at Burnley, just to have a peep at the birds of this variety that are kept "over the Border." Perhaps they'll keep half-an-eye open for a chance to pick up some "class" stuff. There is, however, every probability that some real good Norwich will put in an appearance from the home studs, a far larger number having been bred this year than for many years past. There is every prospect of these classes filling, also a good chance of a brilliant season for the newly-formed "Open Norwich Plainhead Club."

"STRAIGHT UP."

MENAI BRIDGE.

Held in connection with the Horticultural Show, on August 22nd. Cage Birds made a grand display—104 entries in 10 classes. The Clear Yellow often described of late, won special for best in show, the Green Yorkshire taking special for the best Yorkshire. The other specials went to the first prize winners in their respective classes, a special being provided in every class, also a few extra specials. All the classes provided some very good specimens, although some were handicapped, being still in moult. Messrs. Roberts and Edwards made very good secretaries, and the awards were soon put up by practical stewards, which knew their duties, Mr. W. C. Roberts being the judge.

WILL MULES BREED?

A Correspondent Who Says Yes.

SIR,—A friend of mine had a Goldfinch Canary Mule breed this season with a hen Canary. Having no room for the hen Canary (he was repairing the cage), he put it beside the Goldfinch Mule. They had not been long together when the hen Canary commenced budding. He put in a nest for her, and she laid four eggs, and reared two youngsters out of them. They are still living, and can be seen at any time. The second nest resulted in three young; two died, and one is living yet. The last-mentioned one is almost a pure yellow. As I have heard so much about Mules not hilling eggs, I thought it might interest your readers to know of this case. I have never heard before of a cock Mule breeding. I may say that the Mule was as good a feeder as any Canary he has. You, Sir, or your readers might let me know through your paper if it is a common occurrence. A MONGREL.

HOMEGROWN CANARY SEED.

SIR,—I am sending for your inspection a sample of home-grown Canary seed, of which I should be glad to have your opinion. I think it is very fair; at any rate, the birds eat it greedily, and they should be good judges. I sowed the seed in April, and have just harvested. There was a good bit spoiled, owing to much rain, and that, I expect, would be the great drawback to anything like systematic growing such are the vagaries of our climate. I expect that such a season as we had last year, when September, in the West Midlands at any rate, was a glorious month of sunshine, would be a most suitable one, but this year, just as the ears of the corn were turning colour, the fine weather broke, and we have had a succession of wet days, with just a little fine weather in between, ever since. So I could only gather the ripest ears. It was just sown in a drill across the garden, and was an object of curiosity to most people, for no one who saw it growing guessed what it was. But wet weather or fine, I intend to plant more next year, but earlier, so that it will have the advantage of the early summer sun (if any) to help to form and ripen the corn. C. E. LEWIS.

[Judging from the samples sent our correspondent seems to have succeeded in raising seed of nice size and quality.—Ed. CAGE BIRDS.]

WILD BIRD LIFE ON THE BORDERS.

SIR,—The season of British bird life, now fast drawing to a close, has in the Borders been well up to that of former years. Owing to the close, dismal weather experienced in the beginning of the year, the outlook seemed very black; but on the first glimpse of sunshine, the migrators seemed to appear out of the ground. Our first noticeable friends and harbingers of spring-time, the Swallows, were in big force, and what struck me very forcibly this year (and I think this is open for discussion between greater authorities) was the question: Is the period of migration as great a strain on the birds as is believed? The Swallows, to my observation, had only been in the locality for two days or so and they were as busy as bees building and repairing their nests for the breeding season. Canaries and British birds in confinement undergo a special preparation as a rule for breeding purposes, but here are birds homeing thousands of miles, and after a day or so are nesting ready for parental duties. There is a bank in the locality (which faces the Tweed, and was cut and rebuilt this year), which is now honeycombed with nesting places of the Sand-Martins. Our other regular migrants have been well represented; notably the Redstart. This bird here is now getting fairly common, and his appearance is a delight in any locality. The Yellowhammer, which is a very peculiar bird to my idea, being generally located in unlikely places, has been plentiful in some districts. I saw a flock of about 150 in one high hedge lately, and in this place one can always rely on seeing a score or so at any time; but feeding material seems to be at a discount here. Greenfinches, Linnets and the commoner Finches are plentiful, while Bullfinches are, as the saying goes, as common as Sparrows. Owing to the open winters and a large amount of young plantations coming forward, these birds have been greatly on the decrease. I have seen several nests of youngsters feeding on the road-side lately. The smaller birds, such as Long-tailed Tits and Goldcrests, I have observed frequently, while Wheatears, Stonechats, Blackcaps, Tree Creepers, etc., are well represented. Thrushes and Blackbirds are here in huge numbers each season, but their numbers, I am sorry to say, are at present undergoing a reduction owing to their partiality to a little fruit, which results in their being caught in the nets in large quantities, and in many instances dying a lingering death. Albinos have been scarce this year. The only one that I know of is a Linnet with a white wing, taken from the nest. I have left what I term the rare visitors to the last, and am pleased now to say that we have had our share of them. One to make his appearance after an absence of many years is the king of Finches, the Goldfinch. Last winter, while going to work, I came across a flock of nine feeding on the road-side just at daybreak, and after disturbing them they flitted across a field (towards that fateful landmark near Coldstream, Flodden Field), and at the time I thought to myself, you are here in the winter, but we will see what the summer will do. And I have pleasure in chronicling the advent of a pair of Goldfinches feeding Greypates. However, these were in quite a different locality from that where I saw them in the winter. As regards feeding material, all I can say is that if fertile Berwickshire has not got it, there is not another place in Britain that has, as we have hill and dale, cultivated tracts and moorland in galore. Another visitor, and rare too, has been the Black Redstart, noted at Twizel Castle. I have not seen these birds, but I got this information on the good authority of an observant student of natural history. The last I have to mention is the Lesser Redpoll, which I discovered about three weeks ago whilst cycling to Jedburgh in the hills. Fortunately, I had my glasses, and made no mistake about it. They breed in Scotland, but never have nested to my knowledge here, although in the winter we are visited by large flocks of them in search of the needful. I had almost omitted my friends the Water variety, and I may state that the Wagtail family are now well to the fore. A large number of youngsters may be seen occasionally flittering about; they are principally Greys and Pieds. The Yellow variety is rather scarce here, while the king of all water birds, the Kingfisher, has been found nesting on several occasions. Last year a young man brought me no less than nine fully fledged, but we took them back again as I had not the necessary time to cater for them. The season throughout has been grand, and the weather ideal for breeding. Everything has suited our welcome friends the migrants, while the residents, I think, will be provided for with a bountiful store for the approaching winter

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

SIR,—With reference to Mr. Duigenan's letter in your issue of the 19th inst., I cannot but challenge the accuracy of his statement. For my part, I always found the "six members" (Mr. Duigenan has designated them as "one") thoroughly competent to look after the interests of the Fancy in Ireland. I consider it very bad policy, and cannot for the moment see for what purpose Mr. D. seeks to make those gentlemen adopt a hostile attitude. I do not hold a brief for any of those "six members," but I would like to know with what feeling Mr. Duigenan wrote that letter? Was it with a feeling of regret, or a sudden impulse of—well, he knows? In my own opinion it was more an act of generosity on their part to stand by for the purpose of infusing new blood into the management. Perhaps Mr. Duigenan could also inform me how it is possible (in the light of his letter stating the notoriety attained by those "six members") that each and every one of them were re-elected on the committee? However, as a result of the resignations referred to, myself and friend were elected to fill two of those vacancies on the committee, and we were resolved, as far as it lay in our power, to justify the confidence placed in us. We are, however, self-respecting enough to now re-consider our position, and take this opportunity of informing our fellow members that we hereby resign the committee of the Y.C.C. of Ireland. Thanking all those who so kindly voted in our favour.

DANL. CARROLL.
EDWARD ORR.

Alleged Extraordinary State of Affairs.

SIR,—The announcement over the names of Messrs. Sholedice, Cloake, etc., must have set the general body of members of Y.C.C. of Ireland a thinking. That Mr. Sholedice and his friends did not think it wise to give their reasons for refusing to sit on the committee as it is at present constituted is to be regretted. Had they taken the general body of the members into their confidence, however, it would perhaps have led to the washing of much dirty linen, so that, they may, after all, have adopted the proper course. But be that as it may, there can be no doubt that the Y.C.C. of Ireland is passing through the most acute crisis in its career. That the general body of the members are ignorant of the deplorable state of affairs that exists I will take for granted, for were they aware of it I feel certain they would not tolerate its continuance. As to the causes which have contributed to the bitter animosity and ill-feeling which prevail between the two sections of the Dublin members, I will say nothing; for they are of long standing, and I am but a new member. But I saw and heard enough at the last annual general meeting to convince me that unless petty differences are patched up and an amicable settlement arrived at between the parties concerned, the club itself must soon go to the wall. But something more than a reconciliation is needed if the club is to be carried on as it should be. That the Y.C.C. of Ireland is managed on very unbusinesslike lines, and in a rather slip-shod manner, cannot be denied. The way in which the annual meeting was conducted proves the truth of my assertion. Harmony among the officials of a club is much to be desired, but of what use is it if it is counter-balanced by a total disregard of the printed rules of the club and a deplorable ignorance of the rules of procedure on the proper interpretation of which the success of meetings, especially of annual meetings, depends? The way in which the election of officers for the current season was carried out furnishes a striking illustration. Rule ten lays it down that voting papers "shall be sent by the secretary with the notice convening the annual meeting, and must be returned to the Scrutineers (who shall be appointed by the committee) at least fourteen days before such meeting." Plain, undiluted English that, surely. What happened last Friday week at the annual meeting? Two scrutineers (of whom I was one) were appointed at the annual meeting. We did not even handle a ballot paper, and never in my experience did I act under similar conditions. Instead of the voting papers—each of which contained the name of the voter—being handed over to us for scrutiny, the secretary, Mr. Sholedice, took it upon himself to read out the lists to us in the hearing of the members present, who had crowded around the table. We recorded each vote as the name of the candidate was read out to us, and when we had finished our labours we found that (for the chairmanship) Mr. Devitt had secured a majority of one. On that we were both agreed; we agreed as to every total, as a matter of fact, but in two minor instances. Well, the chairman, Mr. Bray, declared Mr. Devitt duly elected, and Mr. Cloake did not demand a recount, which he would have been justified in doing in view of the small majority recorded against him. It was assumed, therefore, that the matter had ended there, but when Mr. Bersse, the newly elected secretary, went home he "looked over" the voting papers (he had taken the voting papers home with him—out of us he said, "mere curiosity") and made the important discovery that "it was a tie for the chairmanship." It transpired that Mr. Sholedice—who was as deeply interested in Mr. Cloake's election as was Mr. Bersse—had "neglected to read out Mr. Cloake's name" to us from a Mr. Dowling's voting paper! At the adjourned meeting the following Friday the voting lists were checked by Mr. Bray (so far as they concerned the chairmanship) who found that both Mr. Cloake and Mr. Devitt had secured a similar number of votes, and he (Mr. Bray) "very reluctantly" gave his casting vote in Mr. Cloake's favour! That the election of officers was illegally carried out from beginning to end, in view of the rule I have quoted and the procedure adopted at the annual meeting, I have not the least doubt. Personally, it is immaterial to me who is elected to any office so long as I know the gentleman is capable of discharging the duties, and I think, from the little I know of Mr. Cloake, that he will make a capable chairman; but I draw attention to the matter to show our country members how their interests are attended to and the club rules carried out. Then, again, two auditors should have been elected according to rule ten, but the subject of the election of auditors never was mentioned, even in the voting papers sent out, and there was no such thing as an agenda for the meeting. Rule three was also violated, inasmuch as voting papers were sent out to members whose subscriptions were in arrears; but their votes were recorded, on condition that the subscriptions were paid within fourteen days subsequent to the annual meeting! I am not certain either if the auditors' certificate was appended to the "duly audited balance-sheet" sent out (rule five) to members, for as I write I have not the balance-sheet by me. I quite forget if the auditors' certificate accompanied it. I know also, for certain, that rule four is not enforced as it should be, and if holding meetings in a fully-licensed hotel is not a violation of rule eight, I am surprised. The correct interpretation of the rules, and a fixed determination to enforce them, are absolutely essential to the success of any organisation constituted on a proper basis, and it may be that the disregard for their own rules which prevails among the Dublin members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland has contributed not a little to the present crisis. Personally, I am of opinion—novice though I am in the Fancy—that the rules of our club are not what they should be, even though they are framed on lines similar to those which obtain in some of the big English clubs.

In conclusion, I would appeal to all the "aggrieved parties" to settle any differences that may exist among them, and try to make the club what it should be, but certainly is not. Even if the rules which exist at present were rigidly enforced, we would get on much better, but I am strongly of opinion that what is required is a reconstruction of the club on a proper and workable basis, the sinking of petty differences, and a thorough appreciation of the objects for which the club was formed. Then the present much to-be-deplored state of affairs would soon come to an end. Apologising for the length of this letter, and thanking you in anticipation, I remain, etc., J. P. ROONEY.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

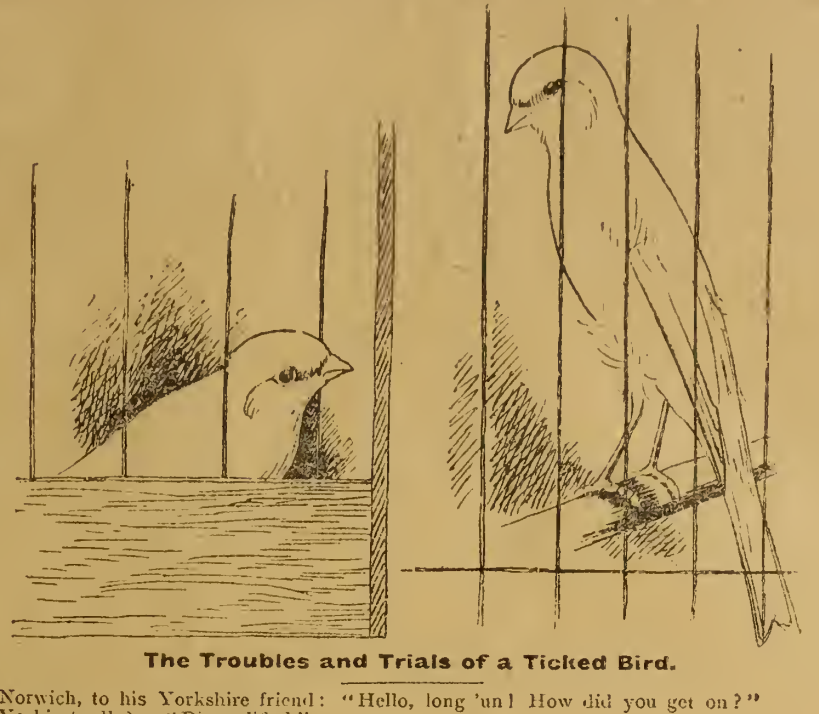
By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE BIRDS, 151, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.



SIR,—Mr. Lythgoe says Mr. Crawhall did not appeal, but rather preferred to choose the more heroic method of protesting by resigning from the societies of which he was a member. Mr. Crawhall certainly adopted the wisest and best course, as the inference to be drawn from Mr. Lythgoe's letter is that even if he had appealed to the Executive Council, his sentence of suspension would still have been confirmed, and Mr. Crawhall would have been 10s. the poorer in consequence. Mr. Lythgoe says the local district committees are in the best position to judge the merits of the cases that come before them. If this be so, then it follows that it is of no earthly use having an Executive Council as a court of appeal. If they, the Executive Council, are prepared to endorse and confirm all the business transacted by district committees, what, I ask, is to be gained by making an appeal to them. Nothing by the applicant; but 10s. more to swell the funds of the Cage Bird Union. Fellow fanciers, are we prepared to tolerate such a condition of things as this? I answer most emphatically, No. We neither do nor will appeal for justice—we demand it. Here we have a glaring miscarriage of justice carried out by a district committee, countenanced and confirmed by the Executive Council, and that, too, in the face of the unanimous protest from several large and influential societies, who requested them to reconsider the case. This I maintain to be the most flagrant act of discourtesy the Executive Council could have offered Northern Fanciers. I think it would have reflected more credit upon them if they had sent the case back to the district committee for reconsideration. The very fact of the members of this local committee unanimously expressing the hope that Mr. Crawhall would be successful in his appeal against the sentence th' had imposed upon him proves to all right-thinking and fair-minded persons that they, the district committee, had made a mistake, and were anxious to have it rectified. If the business of the Cage Bird Union is to be carried on in such a reprehensible manner, then the sooner it is ended the better it will be for the well-being of the cage bird Fancy. On the other hand, if it is to continue to exist to control the affairs of the Fancy, then I, with scores of others, demand that it be worked more on the lines of truth, justice, and brotherly love. These elements, I am sorry to say, have been conspicuous by their absence in connection with the case referred to.

JOHN CURRAH.

THE MAKING OF BIRDLIME.

SIR,—Seeing an inquiry in CAGE BIRDS anent the making of bird-lime, and seeing you give a recipe for same, I will give you my method of making it. You give no instructions as to what to do when it fires, which it is apt to do, and when pouring it out, if it is not boiled enough, it flies out of the water again, and one is liable to get his hands burned or scalded when making it if not properly instructed. I will give you the full instructions. Purchase one pint of the best raw linseed oil (be sure it is raw), and place it in a three-pint or half-gallon saucepan, that is not cracked, and get a piece of iron hooping off a tub, about 2ft. long, or anything similar, to stir it up with. Don't have anything that will catch fire, such as a piece of wood. The next thing you must have is an old piece of bagging; when doubled up four or five times, this should be large enough to cover all over the top of the saucepan. When your fire is burned through (not bright, but just beginning to burn low), place your saucepan on it, and have your piece of bagging in easy reach. Start stirring it round, when it begins to smoke, with your piece of iron. There is no knowing when it will begin to thicken. I have had it begin to thicken in just over half-an-hour, but never above an hour. You can easily tell when it is beginning to thicken, as a froth will come on the top, and soon after it will begin to rise up in the saucepan. When like this, on no account leave off stirring, for this is the time that it fires. If it fires, don't get excited, but just catch hold of your bagging and dab it over the top of your saucepan; then remove it off the fire, and allow your saucepan to cool for a few minutes, afterwards placing it on the fire again. Remove your bagging and begin to stir again. Soon after, the froth, which is of a light colour, will change to black; this is a sign that it is nearly thick enough. You can tell when it is thick enough while you are stirring it. When you see it sticking to your stirring iron, place your bagging over it again, and take it outside, where you have a bucket of water waiting. Remove your bagging and hold your saucepan at arm's length over your bucket and begin to pour it steadily. If it begins cracking and splitting, it is not boiled enough, but if boiled enough it will stick in one piece in the water. When you have poured it all out, scrape your sancepan out with your iron with one hand before you remove it from over the water, as a large quantity sticks round the sides. When you have it all out get your iron and stir it round in the water to cool it, and when cold get your two hands and start pulling it: the more you pull it the better it gets. If it is too thick, get some one to drop some Stockholm tar on it (while you are pulling it) until it is thin enough. You will notice I always put the bag over it before removing it off the fire. If you are making it in the house, I should advise you to send your wife out to tea somewhere.

The Troubles and Trials of a Ticked Bird.

Norwich, to his Yorkshire friend: "Hello, long 'un! How did you get on?"
Yorkie (sadly): "Disqualified."
Norwich: "Disqualified! How's that?"
Yorkie (with tears in his eyes): "Judge sed he cudna find t'tick. An ah'll be blowed if he hevn't left me wi' reight fine breeches. Master'll be fair capt! Hez ta done owt?"
Norwich: First and Special. Judge couldn't see the tick, but he felt certain I had one!"

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—On reading the account of the Sunderland C.B.A. meeting (under the above heading), where Mr. W. Reid gives his opinion that birds with invisible ticks or marks should be allowed to compete in clear classes, I notice his chief reason seems to be to prevent the bird from being handled by the judge, which I think is too mild an excuse; (I should think it far better to insist upon their being handled in the clear class, to see if they really are clear or not, so as to give satisfaction all round), and I am surprised to see a whole society led away by it. I agree with Mr. Reid when he says that some birds, after being handled, will sit and mope all day long, but I don't agree that they should have a prize card to mope behind, and I doubt if there are many judges who would give one. Why should these worn-out old "have beens" be placed in front of strong healthy birds? If a fancier is showing a bird that is sound and all right, he is not against its being handled by the judge to see if it is clear or not, and a bird that cannot stand this is not fit to win. If birds cannot pull themselves together within a reasonable time, but take all day to do it, they are best dead, for of what use are they? What fancier would go into a breeding-room and buy a bird of this description, as it would evidently have to be handled there? Neither could it be sent away on approval without the expectation of having it returned, and carriage to pay. I can understand if anyone had a bird of this description it would be the only means of getting rid of it to have it shown without the judge being permitted to handle it. Now, this would be all very well for the seller; but what about a young fancier claiming it? (I don't think many old ones would). Isn't it just sufficient to make him throw up the Fancy in disgust? At the very least, he would "shy" at buying another bird off the show bench. Mr. Reid says it means the more frequent washing of an exhibit than would have been necessary had the bird not been handled. Now, he must think that judges have very dirty hands, for a bird to want washing after being handled by him. Mr. Reid also seems to think it is so very simple to make these ticked birds into clears. Well, he might perhaps pluck out one or two feathers without their being missed, but he would have to be very careful how many more he did pull out, especially at the thighs, or he would soon be found out.

THE SHOWS.

HARLECH.

Held on September 12th, in connection with the annual agricultural show of the Merioneth district, one class being provided for Canaries. Mr. Birch made the awards.

CAN.: 1, J. O. Williams, an exceptionally good Yorkshire hen, nicely drawn good length and style, feathered like wax; 2, E. Edwards, a medium-sized Yorkshire, very shapely, in nice form; 3, J. E. Jones, a good-sized Crest-bred Variegated, handicapped by not being ready yet, will do better later on.

READING.

A class of Canaries and another for British birds were provided at the 10th annual show, held in the King's Meadows, on August 29th, under the auspices of the Reading Biscuit Factory Recreation Club. The exhibits in this section were up to the average in both number and quality, and received not a little attention from the visitors. The hon. secretary was Mr. C. E. Longhurst, who is deserving of much credit for his able conduct of affairs; Mr. E. Cawston judged.

CANARY (not colour-fed), 1, vhc, Giles; 2, vhc, Aldridge; 3 and r, Vickers. BRIT. SMALL: 1, 2, Aldridge (Linnets).

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

What has come to be regarded as the national gathering of young Scotch Fancy Canaries bred by members, was held in the Grand National Halls, Glasgow, on September 19th, under most favourable weather conditions. The morning opened genially, but the sun did not appear till after noon, which was to the benefit of the exhibits, seeing the building contained one entire side of windows. We have seldom seen so many very young birds to match those on exhibition for nerve and steadiness in working. In the judges' hands they were at home, and gave the impression that they had gone through a course of special training. The entries totalled over 324, and the quality was superior to that of previous years; the executive and members have just reason to be proud of bringing the cream of 1908 breeding before the public. It will be observed that the prizes were well divided, and that a lady fancier—Miss Brown, of Duns—not only gained a first in the heaviest merit class, viz., the Buff hen Piebald or Green, but had the distinguished honour of being the runner up for the cup with the same hen. Mr. McLennan, who is at home in capturing cups and medals, after a keen contest secured the cup and gold medal with a smart, compact Buff cock full of quality; it had almost all the good points that are aimed at in the breeding of the Scotch Fancy Canary. The visitors were not so numerous as they were in 1907, doubtless due to the trade depression experienced in Glasgow and other industrial centres; the interest shown, however, was very pronounced. The entire proceedings made it clear that the interest in the Scotch Fancy Canary has revived, and that it has a future before it. The judges could not have been more painstaking; they were paired as follows: Messrs. Hamilton and Watson, and Messrs. Clark and Kean. Only one referee was necessary, and that solely because two birds were so near for quality, and the other two judges confirmed the placing of the officiating judges. The president, (Mr. Wright), the vice-president (Councillor Hogg), Mr. Porteous, and the secretary (Mr. Thos. Smith) were in attendance, and had all the arrangements well carried out, rendering it a pleasure to anyone to visit the show and take part in the competition. From the platform the birds and their admirers presented a brilliant picture in the glowing sunshine.

HEN (43): The class for quality; no easy matter to win here; 1, Miss Brown, runner up for cup, large and massive, neat head, long neck, heavy shoulder, determined droop, clean front, long substantial body, closely fitting wing, greatly admired; 2, McLennan, another superior hen, neat head, fine neck and droop, solid, well-built back, grand body; 3, McLennan, rare style, erect fine head, neck and droop, good body and action; 4, Carmyllie, another beauty, erect fine head and neck, good droop; 5, 6, McMillan, pair of really typical modern hens; 7, Smith; 8, Allison; 9, Burnside.

GAERWEN.

Annual show held September 12th in connection with the horticultural, etc., event. One class was provided for cage birds only, amongst which were shown some of the best birds of North Wales, several previous 1st and special winners being amongst the carded division on account of the meagre classification. Mr. Proud made the awards.

CANARY A.V. (19): 1, vhc, J. O. Williams, Yorkshire clear buff, good quality, stands well; 2, J. O. Rowlands, Norwich, clear buff, plenty of size and quality, also shape, an old winner in good form, ought to stand higher later on; vhc, E. J. Jones, good Crest, often met, had to be contented in the carded list to-day.

WEST TARRING & DISTRICT F.A.

The cage bird section of this show, held on September 9th, was a success, and was patronised by a large number of the many visitors. Mr. H. Frost (Brighton) judged, and his awards appeared to give every satisfaction.

CANARY: 1, spl, 2, 3, vhc, Cecle, splendid Crest leading, easy winner, followed by a Buff Crest-bred, beaten to-day in condition, a nice Norwich made up a very good team; hc, Stubbs; c, Swaysland. BRIT. FINCH: 1, Swaysland, Goldfinch, splendid blaze, bars, wins; 2, hc, Hopper, Goldfinch and Bullie; the Goldie only lost on condition; Bullie not quite through moult; vhc, Stubbs, nice Greenfinch. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, Swaysland, Tit Lark, well shown and wins; vhc, hc, Hopwood.

DROGHEDA.

The Drogheda annual show and exhibition took place on September 16th and 17th at the Boys' Brigade Athletic Grounds. As usual the committee had a show of cage birds, but it was not open as in former years, being confined to Drogheda and counties of Louth and Meath. There were close on 100 entries, and some very good specimens were shown. Mr. Wm. Wall (Dublin) judged, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

YORKS. CL. CK.: 1, Gray, clear Yellow, plenty of style and quality; 2, McCullen, another good bird; vhc, Keating; hc, Miss Smith; c, Miss Tighe. The Disadvantage of it.

To assert that this system of moulting the birds in couples or trios is without a single fault would be to claim an ideal which probably is not to be found this side of the millenium. There is at least one grave danger to be faced in certain circumstances, which, however, is easily met when one is aware of it. The danger is that of the birds being quarrelsome and having the mischievous habit of plucking feathers out of their companion's.

This must be strictly guarded against when one is dealing with such a variety as the Lizard, as the loss of tail or flight feathers at the first moult might be a great detriment, and would seriously affect a bird's chances of success on the show bench.

The same remark would apply to the London Fancy, but that variety seems so rare nowadays that it is probably only to be found in the hands of a few admirers who are well aware of its peculiarity in this respect.

Both the varieties mentioned are, from an exhibitor's point of view, what a gardener would term "annuals," being one year's show birds, or at their best for show purposes for one season only, and that between the first and second moults. In these varieties, also, tailing and flighting are not only unnecessary but absolutely detrimental, and in the vast majority of cases would be quite fatal to success.

It is equally important that none of the second crop of small feathers, or, at least, no appreciable quantity should be lost from the Lizard, as there is always a greater or less risk of the feathers that will take their place coming lighter, and forming a great blemish when the bird happens to be brought into close competition.

Means of Prevention.

With such varieties as those just considered, where the consequences of plucking are always serious, it is obvious that the safest and best method of preventing the trouble arising is to moult the birds singly in separate cages. This simplifies the matter, and sweeps away all cause for anxiety at once. But when it is not carried out, one can only use the best judgment in selecting amiable and agreeable couples for placing together, and then keep a very close watch over their behaviour towards each other during the progress of the moult, and, of course, making out a writ for judicial separation immediately they begin to show signs of disagreeing with each other.

When the time comes for covering the cages or limiting the strength of the light in the room there will be rather less danger of serious dispute arising, as the birds will remain more quietly in repose when they have less light to excite them to action. And if any couple should seem a little bit quarrelsome, a light covering over the cage front in those cases where only the windows have been covered, and where a light cover has been over the cage front, a rather denser and closer covering will very often suffice to remove the trouble.

It will thus be seen that the practice of limiting the light admitted to the birds during the latter half of the moult is not only useful for preventing the natural bleaching of the colour of the new plumage, but is also indirectly of much use for preventing them plucking each other when more than one are caged together.

When Good Colour Alarms.

It is quite a common occurrence at this time to come across inexperienced hands (who are either in their first year of breeding Canaries, or are, perhaps, colour-feeding for the first time), who are extremely anxious when the new colour begins to show less it should be too "hot" for any present-day judge. Providing the colour has been given as has already been advised, this alarm will, in practically every case, prove utterly groundless.

The fact is that when the plumage is about one-half its proper length it is in every case many shades deeper and richer in tone than it will appear when it is fully developed, so that a perfectly natural-coloured specimen which had never tasted any colour food in its life will appear at this stage almost as rich in colour as one that has been tolerably well fed.

Fed birds are, of course, proportionately deep in tone at every stage, and a bird that will finish up a nice rich orange yellow will, when the new plumage is showing, appear (to use an expressive term) quite "red hot." Therefore, the novice need not be alarmed at seeing his birds apparently coming out on the ruddy side, and on no account should he withdraw the colour-food, nor reduce it until the proper time—when the end of the moult is in view. The probability is that the specimens which he thinks too hot will come out just the tint he is most anxious to get. And even if some of them do finish up too warm it is a very easy matter to tone them down by keeping them uncovered in a strong light for a few days, whereas if the general tone is not quite warm enough it is impossible to add any more depth until another moulting season.

ABERDEEN O.S.

Meeting held September 11th in the Trades Hall Buildings, Mr. Hector in the chair. The show schedule was gone over, and the classification of last year approved. Mr. John Strachan and Mr. James Milne were appointed auditors.—J. BRYSON, Sec.

TONBRIDGE AND DISTRICT F.A.

At a special general meeting held at the Red Lion Hotel, Tonbridge, on September 10, the resignation of the secretary, Mr. Kirke, was accepted, and Mr. F. J. Bingham, of 88, Barden-road, Tonbridge, was elected in his stead. Mr. Kirke has removed from Tonbridge, and consequently finds it impossible to give the affairs of the Association the necessary attention.—F. J. BINGHAM, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

The annual general meeting was held at the Dooghas Hotel, Dublin, the chair being taken by Mr. Grattan Bray. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Major Tretter; vice-presidents, J. D. Bowe, Esq., J. M. Barclay, Esq., and Grattan Bray, Esq.; Chairman, Mr. J. J. Cloke; hon. treasurer, Mr. R. F. Duigenan; hon. secretary, Mr. W. J. Birse; committee, Messrs. Gillen, Kenny, M'Kenzie, M'Donnell, Lambert, Carroll, Orr, Taylor, South, Hawkins, Thompson, O'Neill, McQuade, Mulligan, Keatinge and Devins. The Club Show will take place on the 26th and 27th November, Mr. R. Halliday, judge. All communications to be addressed to the Hon. Sec., W. J. BIRSE, 24, Clonliffe-road, Dublin.

PORTH AND DISTRICT C.B.F.S

Special general meeting held on September 12th, at headquarters, Danyr Temperance Bar, Hannah-street, Porth, Mr. J. Shepherd in the chair. Members turned up in good numbers. The chief business was the fixing up of schedule and other show business. The open classes were completed. To last year's classes for Border Fancies we have added a Green Border Class. Mr. Thomas proposed Messrs. Byard and Daniels (Treorchy), as members. These gentlemen being accepted, said they were York-lure breeders. Mr. Thomas said that he had another two new members to propose at the next meeting. Mr. A. H. C. Legg said it gave him great pleasure to see that Mr. Thomas was working so hard to get new members, and it behoved every one to try and do the same. There were plenty of young men in the Rhondda district who were bird fanciers and a little persuasion might bring them into our ranks. We trust Swansea fanciers will support the class which has been added for them. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the chairman, thus closing one of the best meetings ever held. Next meeting 8th September 26th at 7.30 p.m.—ARTHUR H. C. LEGG.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, September 5th. Mr. Chambers occupied the chair. The Rev. C. D. Farrar delivered an essay on "Foreign Birds and their Management." The lecturer first dealt with the aviaries, and the mating of different species. We must congratulate our Rev. friend on his various successes, which have been won by sheer hard work, care, and attention. The Rev. gentleman has also been a successful breeder of the Norwich Plainhead, and British Softbills he has also kept with success. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Rev. C. D. Farrar at the conclusion.—A. WILKINS, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

A meeting was held at Glossop on September 6th, fanciers being present from Oldham, Middleton, Denton, Glossop, Rawstenstall, etc. A good deal of business was gone through, and things were made shipshape for the coming season. A visit to a few of the Glossop fanciers showed us some very promising stock, and big hopes are entertained for a successful show season. Will members kindly send me their contributions as early as possible, and be in time for the opening show at Rochdale, to compete for our cups and medals? A cordial invitation to fanciers to join and help to make the club stronger is extended to all non-members.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTY BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held September 12th, Mr. W. A. Cowgill in the chair. The patronage was allotted to the following societies. It was with great that we were unable to give patronage to other societies through clashing of dates and judges. The committee will welcome applications from other societies where judges are different from those officiating at the under-named, as by rule no judge must officiate at more than one show per season where this club's specials are competed for:—York C.B.S., Oct. 30th, Mr. J. Robson; Bramley and District O.S., Nov. 7th, Mr. A. G. Davis; Bradford West, C.B.S., Nov. 21st, Mr. J. Beswick; Harrogate C.B.S., Dec. 5th, Mr. J. C. Barnes; Brighouse and District C.B.S., Dec. 18th, Mr. J. Broadley; Great Horton, Jan. 1st, Mr. H. W. Battye; and City of Wakefield, Feb. 15th, Mr. J. N. Harrison.—W. R. MYERS, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at Crown Hotel, Station-street, September 2nd, Mr. Broadhurst in the chair. Messrs. Key, Bradshaw, and Saxon were elected members. The classification for the coming show was then proceeded with. It was decided to have 23 open classes: 4 Norwich, 1 Crest, 1 Crested, 4 Yorkshire, 2 Cinnamon, 2 Mule or Hybrid, 4 British, 2 Foreign, and 3 Selling; also 10 for members only. The chairman, on behalf of the members, made a presentation to Mr. H. C. Wilkins (late hon. sec.), in recognition of his services to this society. He pointed out that we were in a much better position financially than when Mr. Wilkins first took over the secretarial duties some years ago. Mr. Wilkins, in reply, said that although he was not at present taking so active a part as hitherto, he hoped to continue his membership for a long time yet.—J. H. DE MAILLET, Hon. Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held September 3rd, when a good number of members and friends met to hear Mr. Tyson lecture on the Crested Canary. Mr. H. E. Tringham, who was in the chair, remarked with what pleasure members had anticipated this lecture. Mr. Tyson was received with much applause, and proceeded to deliver one of the most interesting lectures it has been the privilege of members to listen to. An animated discussion followed, in which the following took a prominent part Messrs. H. E. Tringham, Cunningham, Cole, Lugg, Goodwin, Norris, Cracknell, Richardson, Curtis and many others. At a late hour the chairman said that although reluctant to do so he must draw the meeting to a close, upon which Mr. Cunningham rose and proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Tyson, Mr. Lugg seconding the same, and it was carried unanimously.—W. HODSON, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

At our meeting held at Stockport on September 12th, a fair number of members turned up, Mr. J. Gainer (Hazel Grove), being the chairman. We had the pleasure of nominating two new members, namely, Messrs. Lee (Macclesfield), and Minty (Frome). It was decided to recommend at our next meeting that we purchase medals so that we can have them on view at the shows; fanciers of the Lancashires will then be able to see the advantages of joining our society, as there are six medals to be competed for. It was further decided to recommend at our next meeting that should any one desire to give a medal, that permission be given them subject to same being confined to L.C.A. members. Next meeting October 10th, at the Textile Dining Rooms, Oldham. It is hoped members will pay their subscriptions before the Rochdale O.C. show on October 23rd and 24th. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—WM. ADAMS, Sec.,

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held Sept. 12th, at the Fawcett Street Cafe, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding over a good attendance. Correspondence, including letters from the secretaries of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, Northern Norwich Club, Northern Crest Club, and several others of importance, relating to our Annual Open Show, November 20th and 21st, having been satisfactorily dealt with, the members proceeded with the business of drawing up the schedule of classes. There was an animated discussion (this discussion will be found fully reported in last week's correspondence. — ED.) on the question of "When is a clear not a Clear," and eventually Mr. W. Reid moved, Mr. T. Riseborough seconded, and Mr. F. Swan supported a proposition that the schedule should read "clear or invisible ticked," and "visible ticked, unevenly marked or variegated." This was carried unanimously. It was decided that before finally adopting the proposition, the secretaries should write to the other Northern Societies to learn whether or not they intended to take any steps in the matter, with the object of settling this vexed question once and for all. It was decided that we add a class for Self Green or Cinnamon Yorkshires, this making a total of six classes for York. The secretaries also reported that we now had the patronage of seven specialist clubs.—REID AND MADDISON, Secs.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting September 14, at Headquarters. The foreign bird classification for the annual show was reconsidered, upon the ground that the common species were always outclassed by the Tanagers; result, two extra classes. Mr. H. Robbins was thanked for guaranteeing entries. The quarterly statement of accounts, showing income £71 16s. 3d., expenditure £40 0s. 2d., and a balance of £31 16s. 1d., was adopted as read; also balance-sheet of Young Bird Show, income £11 18s. 7d., expenditure £10 11s. 0½d., with a profit of £1 7s. 6½d. A vote of thanks was accorded the "Early Birds" Cricket Club for the use of their implements at the recent match. An essay competition then took place, entitled "Birds I Have Kept," papers from the following being read by the secretary:—"Red-face," "Alario," "Small Foreigner," "Sunflower," "Fancier," and "Hawfinch." ("Devonian" arrived too late to be read.) The following were by vote declared the winners: Gold medal, "Red-face"; silver medal, "Sunflower"; bronze medal, "Hawfinch." A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the non-successful competitors, whose papers were considered of high merit. The secretary announced that Miss Brain, one of their lady members, was to be married on September 19th, and, as this was a unique event in the history of the association, begged leave to raise a subscription for a wedding present. The project met with warm approval, and was heartily supported by the chairman and Mr. Curtis, who testified to the financial and clerical services she had long rendered to the association.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

BRIGHOUSE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Members turned up in good numbers on September 15th, to hear Mr. Samuel Dean (Bradford) lecture on "Preparing Birds for Exhibition." A few friends were also present. Mr. Dean dealt with the subject in a very instructive and satisfactory manner, after which several questions were put to the lecturer and were ably answered. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Dean brought a very pleasant evening to a close. The committee have arranged for lectures, etc., during the winter months at which they hope to see fanciers also present who are not members. Ten new members have joined the society recently. Intending members will meet with a hearty welcome. Fee 4/- per annum.—F. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at ou risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

LAY IT ON THICK SOMETIMES and you will do nothing but good.

But there are occasions when you must lay it on lightly, skilfully and quickly, as, for instance, when you are soaping your birds in the wash ready for winning prizes at the shows.

How to accomplish this in irreproachable style will be found told by pen and picture in "Cage Birds Annual," which tells you also all you want to know about the Cage Bird Fancy. The "Annual" is a Marvellous Compendium of knowledge on all Birdy Matters.

See what You Get for Your Money.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

An account of some pretty and hardy species, with information on their caging and feeding.

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars or subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.
Directory to Judges of Cage-Birds.
Standards and Scales of Points for Canaries and British Birds.
Useful Postal and other Information.
Directory to the Bird Trade.
Ruled Cash Account, etc.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

APPLIANCES.

LIGHT, STRONG AND ECONOMICAL

TRAVELLING BASKETS.

Why send your birds to shows done up in a brown paper parcel? It is dangerous for the birds and a disgrace to you as the owner.

J. GILBERT & SON, 4 & 5, Arcade, Coventry, are the leading basket manufacturers in the country.

They have an inside knowledge of fanciers' requirements as their Mr. T. Gilbert is a practical breeder, Exhibitor, and Judge of Cage Birds. They are always ready and pleased to study fanciers' wishes and ideas. Baskets can be made to customer's specifications at absolutely lowest cost, and in shortest possible time.

FROM THE EDITOR

of CAGE BIRDS to the smallest customer I have one and all speak in highest terms of praise of my catching appliances. All are made from the finest materials by practical men who are not only expert net makers, but thoroughly experienced bird catchers as well. Clap nets made from 60/-, 9-ply, genuine thread, 1-inch mesh, 3 yards long, 4/- pair; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all guaranteed 5½ feet deep, and strike 4 feet. All clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up with pegs, poles, and lines, all ready for immediate use. Sparrow nets for ivy, stacks, hedges, etc., fitted on 14 feet bamboo poles, 5/6 pair; ditto, on 19 feet poles, 6/6 pair, complete. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird netting, 2-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; post free; accurate measurement guaranteed. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and most simple on the market, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each. All above have separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. The original Japanese bird lime, guaranteed absolutely stronger than any other, will not run in sun or freeze in winter, ½-lb. 6d., ¾-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. This is the ideal birdlime for bird-catching, as I guarantee it to hold a Hawk, Rook, or Fowl, and to catch every bird clean, not make them a mass of treacle. Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Round or square-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen, 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 4/-, 5/-, and 6/- dozen. All kinds cages in stock; please send stamp for wholesale prices. Solid hemp-pull lines, specially spun, without snarl or "back twist," 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Everything required by bird-catchers in stock. For full printed list send stamp. See following few testimonials, which say more for my goods than I could ever say myself. "The Gardens, Belvoir, September 5th.—Sir,—Please send following. I had a net trap from you and caught many birds with it, and was quite satisfied.—Yours, A. Barber." "18, Kelham-street, Doncaster.—Sir,—Thanks for netting promptly to hand; marvellous value. Shall want more.—Yours, T. Holton." "4, Spring-gardens, Higham Ferrers, September 15th.—Sir,—Please send ½-lb. lime. I had some very good from you last year.—Yours, R. Stokes." "Woodford Grange Cottages, Thrapston.—Sir,—Clap nets I had from you give every satisfaction. Please send following.—Yours, W. Meacock." "Newsham, Winchfield, Hants, September 18th.—Sir,—Clap nets, etc., received safely. They are quite satisfactory, and have instructed Editor to pay you deposit.—Yours, W. Cherrett" "Yew Tree Cottage, Clutton.—Sir,—Received cages safely, and am perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Hughes." "13, Milk-st., Frome, Somerset.—Sir,—Please send sample yard netting. An old friend of mine bought a pair nets from a firm in this county, and he will want some more very quick. I think you will have no difficulty in supplying me with better than he has got.—Yours, H. Rivers." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, September 19th.—Sir,—I have tried the birdlime, and found it as stated. Whenever a bird touches it, it is like a fly in a spider's web, completely helpless.—Yours, J. Farrington." "11, Plantation-row, Mansfield.—Sir,—Netting to hand, and am entirely satisfied.—Yours, J. Warsop." "25, Wellington-place, Llanwrist.—Sir,—Please send sample lime. A friend sent to ——— for some, and it wouldn't catch a fly; it was like oil.—Yours, W. Evans." "64, Hitchin-road, Luton.—Sir,—I shall always use your netting, as I think it best on the market.—Yours, H. Coote." "Gedney, Holbeach, September 4th.—Sir,—Sparrow net to hand. It is a very good one, and dirt cheap, as are all your nets.—Yours, C. Cubley" The Editor of CAGE BIRDS says the netting and hemp pull lines used in my nets are of finest quality, and should stand a great amount of wear. Thousands more testimonials open to inspection any time, therefore I have no need of making a great fuss over an isolated one like a baby over its first doll. Kindly note everything sold by me is sent on approval, either on receipt cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction is not given. All the leading catchers swear by my appliances, and swear at others. See British bird column for further advertisement.

ENGLISH GOLDFINCHES.

We have the largest stock of these beautiful birds in the kingdom at prices that cannot be equalled (neither by linnet kings, lark kings, or any such clap-trap royalty); our prices for cock Go'dfinches, all on hard seed, is 1/6 each, or three for 4/-, 12/- per dozen, or specially selected cocks at 14/- per dozen; hens, 8/- per dozen; splendid white-legged cock Go'dfinches, 2/6 and 3/6 each; selected cock brown Linnets, larger and better than any from the so-called Linnet Kings, only 8d. each, four for 2/-, all guaranteed and sent on approval. We have been patronised by English royalty.—Northern Aviaries, Ormskirk-rd., Preston.

GENUINE COCK GOLDFINCHES.

I have a splendid lot of Worcester cock Goldies, well on hard seed, some have been caged a month grand upstanding cocks, in perfect condition and feather, 2/- each, three for 4/6, six for 8/-, 15/- per dozen; a few extra good birds for moulting for exhibition or Mule breeding, good stout birds, with extra good blazes, 2/6 and 3/- each. I will send either one bird or dozens on three clear days' approval at my own risk, as I send nothing out but the best, as the repeat orders I have received clearly shows. I do not publish testimonials I receive, but anyone can see them at my residence. Inspection cordially invited as I have a grand stock, any day but Sundays; if you will give me a trial order, I will give you more than value; cash or deposit.—J. W. Ward, Carr Vale, Bolsover, Chesterfield.

such letters as I publish week after week unless my birds were what I claimed for them? The fact of the matter is this, my birds are correctly described in the advertisement, therefore my customers get what they expect, and expect what they get. I do not describe ordinary specimens as "Massive Giants," nor Irish hand-caught birds as Worcestershire netted birds. I claim to have more Worcestershire birds through my hands than all other dealers put together, and defy contradiction. I have grand stock of genuine Worcestershire netted Goldfinches in pink of health and condition at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/- Specially selected large, bold birds for exhibition, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Few grand, clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, 2/6 and 3/- each. Hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in perfect health and condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-. Specially selected cocks for show, muling or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Over 70 dozen cock Linnets in stock, and every one guaranteed red-breasted, so customers may rely upon cocks for their money, as I do not stock hens. Clean-moulted two-year-old cock Linnets, in song, 2/6 each; Redpolls, all clean moulted, three 1/3, six 2/3, twelve 3/6; cock Chaffinches, well on seed, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6; cock Greenfinches, three 1/-, six 1/6; cock Blackbirds and Thrushes, well on food, 1/6 each; hand-reared talking Magpie, 4/-; Carrion Crow, 2/6; grand lot clean moulted cock Larks, in pink of health, all big, bold birds, not half hens, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; few, guaranteed in song, 1/-, 1/6 and 2/- each. These Larks are all Worcestershire caught, not sea-coast birds, and absolutely finest lot ever seen. Young cock Canaries, in splendid song, 4/- each; hens, 1/- and 1/6 each. All birds are sent out on approval at my sole risk, either on receipt cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, and cash fully refunded if every satisfaction not given. See following few letters, and kindly note all are entirely unsolicited, and have never before been published, as I am constantly receiving similar letters, I have no need to repeat them time after time. "Pontefract, August 22nd. Sir,—Goldfinch arrived safely, and looks a fine bird. I thank you very much for the generous way you have treated me, as I had no claim on you concerning the other bird which died, and never expected you to send another in its place. I feel I have found a dealer in whom I can trust. Yours, A. L. Brattley." "51, Talbot-street, Pinxton, August 24th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch, and well satisfied with same. Yours, S. Catherall." "West Hartlepool, August 22nd. Sir,—Received Linnets quite safe, and am quite satisfied with them. Yours, W. Thayne." "18, Chambers-road, Southport, August 21st. Sir,—Received Skylark, and am well satisfied with it. Yours, H. Johnson." "7, Millyard, Harrington, September 4th. Sir,—Received the three Goldfinches, and am well satisfied, as they are three very nice birds. Yours, J. Mullen." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorkshire, September 2nd. Sir,—Please send me ¼ lime. I shall send next week for some Linnets, and hope they are as good as last year. I think it is time you called yourself a king (I don't, W. Gore), as your birds have a wide record about here, they have won more contests than any other birds, and we have a few from elsewhere, and they are not so good as the Birmingham Linnets. They are all mad about here to get your birds. Yours, C. Hart." On September 7th Mr. Hart again writes as follows:—"14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorks. Sir,—I have had Linnets from you before, not only one or two, but dozens, and they were the pride of Skinningrove for size and quality, and not only that, but for contest singing, and I must say you are as honest as the day is light. I have dealt with several through C.B., but I find you thoroughly honest and straightforward. I received birdlime and find it far superior to that I had from elsewhere. Please send me six more Linnets. There are a lot of self-styled kings, but you are the king about here, and have proved it by the birds you have sent. Yours, C. Hart." "Dunipace, Scotland, September 7th. Sir,—Thanks very much for bird you sent me. I am highly pleased with it. Yours, W. Binnie." "Chapel-row, Haswell Colliery, September 9th. Sir,—Received the six Linnets all right, and they give every satisfaction, I am well pleased with them. Yours, George Cole." "Huntly, Scotland, September 9th. Sir,—Received bird safe, and am highly delighted with bird and promptness. Yours, G. Murray." "Garston, Liverpool, September 11th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch safely, I must thank you very much, for it is the nicest Goldfinch I have ever seen. Yours, W. Bryant." "10, Sun-street, Nottingham, September 14th. Sir,—Please send six cock Goldfinches. I sent elsewhere for six cocks, and he sent me three hens and three cocks. Yours, B. Walton." "28, Halifax-street, Bolton, September 15th. Sir,—Thrush arrived safe, and I am well pleased with him. If I want any more birds I shall know where to send to, so good luck to you. J. Robinson." The above letters are from people who, apart from business transactions, are entire strangers to me. All are open to inspection in their original Government-stamped envelopes at any time, and I offer £50 to any person who can prove that I have ever, either directly or indirectly, solicited a single testimonial during the whole course of my business career. All birds sent out are guaranteed well caged and properly fed on hard seed before sent, and are sent on approval on the distinct understanding that unless birds are perfectly satisfactory, you return them, and I return money in full promptly and cheerfully, without question or comment. Can you imagine fairer terms than these? See Appliance column for further advertisement.

Kindly announce that at the annual show of the Glastonbury and Dis. F.A., to be held on November 11th, 15 open classes will be provided for cage birds, write Messrs. Cridland and Edwards, the secretaries. These will be judged by Mr. Hamilton Pauley, of Wells (formerly of Plymouth).

TWITTERINGS.

Battersea Great Show.—Have you seen a schedule? Send for one at once.—(ADVT.)

The Chichester annual members' show will be held, we are informed, on November 26th.

Fanciers should on no account overlook sending for schedule of Gt. Harwood Show.—(ADVT.)

Kindly notify my change of address from Wallwood Road, Leytonstone, writes Mr. G. B. Leclair, to 206, High Road, South Tottenham, London, N.

Bronghty Ferry Show.—Entries close October 5th. Send for your schedule at once.—(ADVT.)

We hear from the secretary, Mr. Wright, that the Polesworth and Dis. F.A. are thinking of putting on a few classes for cage-birds at their forthcoming annual show.

We hear that Mr. W. R. Miles, of Chichester, is down to judge at the Winchester show, to be held on November 26th.

We have secured the Public Hall, London Road, for our annual members' show on October 29th, writes Mr. W. Lang, junr., hon. secretary of the Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S.

The words "or Hybrid" in class 69 of our schedule, write Messrs. Reed and Calam, secretaries of the Kirbymoorside and Dis. F.S., should have been omitted. Fanciers will please take note of this.

Kindly state in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, write Messrs. C. and C. T. Parkes, breeders and exhibitors of Yorkshire Canaries, that we have removed to No. 11, Anderson Street, Sandal, Wakefield.

In noting Mr. B. Simpson's change of address from Northallerton in our last issue our printers gave it as 31, Broughton Terrace, Harehills Lane, Leeds, instead of number 3. Show secretaries and others will please note.

Kindly note that I have been appointed secretary of the South Manchester C.B.S., writes Mr. Jno. C. Spilsbury, and that all communications must be addressed to me at 2, Ansdell Road, Windmill Lane, Reddish, near Stockport.

On account of the Clapham Bird Show being held on October 1st, write Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, hon. secretaries of the Dulwich O.S., the committee meeting of our society will be held on October 8th. The committee and members will attend and patronise the Clapham show.

A very fine example of the Ortolan Bunting (Emberiza hortulana) was taken near Brighton on September 23rd, writes Mr. Walter Swaysland, the well-known naturalist, and is the first specimen recorded about here for many years.

At a recent meeting of the Gloucester Fanciers' Society, writes Mr. Richard Powell, 70, Northgate Street, Gloucester, I was unanimously elected hon. secretary and treasurer. Our annual show will be held on January 13th and 14th next, in the Public Baths, Gloucester.

It is gratifying for me to be able to inform you that the members of the United Kingdom Lizard Canary Society have consented to exhibit at our show on October 10th, when they will compete for their society's medals, writes Mr. F. Steeple, hon. secretary of the Oldham and Dis. C.B.S. I hope they will be able to muster a good number of exhibits, as I understand it is their first show of the season.

Messrs. T. L. Castree and J. Robson have been engaged to judge at the annual show of the Perth and Dis. C.B.F.S., to be held on December 2nd and 3rd, 1908, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg. Members or fancier friends wishing to give specials should send to the secretary at the earliest possible date, as the schedule will be put in the printers' hands as soon as possible. We have about thirty money specials already in.

I was very much surprised to find my Buff Norwich portrayed on the front page of CAGE BIRDS. I must say it was excellent, and reflected great credit on your artist, Mr. H. Norman. When exhibited, the bird was seldom out of the money. The following are a few of his wins:—1st Hanley, 1st Leek, 1st Horticultural Hall, 2nd Nottingham; etc. I hope the sale of CAGE BIRDS will go on increasing as of old.—W. WHETSTONE (Leek).

The Cinnamon Canary Club will hold their club show in conjunction with Sunderland Open Show, on November 20th and 21st, write Messrs. Reid and Maddison, the show secretaries. We have now the patronage of eight specialist clubs, viz.: The Open Norwich P.C., Northern Norwich P.C., Border Fancy C.C., Northern Yorks C.C., Northern B.B.M. and F.B.C., Northern Crest Club, United Kingdom Lizard Society, and the Cinnamon C.C. We shall do our very best to fulfil the requirements of fanciers and exhibitors, and we trust to meet with their hearty support when the time comes.

LEND US YOUR EAR.

Our Issue of next week will be a Special Surprise Number. Place your order for it at once, therefore, and make certain of obtaining it. There will be Something in it to Surprise and Please you.

We have only one further remark to make: Tell all your friends of what is coming.

Kindly note that exhibits for our show will be sent on from Plymouth show by Mr. Pope, the secretary of that show, writes Mr. W. H. Manley, hon. secretary of the Bristol C.B.S. They will be dispatched by the midnight mail and attended to early in the morning here before judging.

Will show secretaries please send on a few schedules and entry forms to me at 3, Devon Street, Parkinson Lane, Halifax, writes Mr. A. E. Morton, hon. secretary of the Sowerby Bridge and Dis. C.B.S., for distribution amongst our members, as our society is not in the Yorkshire Union.

Kindly state that we are hoping to have a record night on October 8th, writes Mr. W. Richinson, secretary of the Attercliffe and Dis. C.B.S., as we are then having a washing exhibition for novices. Messrs. Greenfield and Richinson will wash the birds, and we are hoping many novices will be present.

Kindly announce in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that in future the meetings of the Stockport B.F.A. will be held on Tuesdays instead of Thursdays as formerly, writes Mr. W. Stafford, the hon. secretary. Also that the members' annual show will be held on December 3rd and 4th, when Mr. A. Wellings will judge.

My advertisement under "Canaries Various," offering birds at 2s. 6d. a pair, should have read 12s. 6d. a pair, writes Mr. C. Gale (Kingsweston). This printer's error is causing me a lot of trouble, as I have had numerous applications, as well as postal orders, so would be glad if you will kindly explain in this week's CAGE BIRDS.

The Bush Hill Park F. S. Show, October 17th, is confined to members, writes Mr. A. F. Uncle, hon. secretary, 112, Fotheringham Road, Bush Hill Park, who may, however, join by sending subscription (viz., 2s. 6d.) with entry on Saturday next, October 3rd. Membership is open to amateurs (working men and women) residing within 10 miles of B.H.P. Station.

Kindly mention in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, my change of address, writes Mr. J. H. Mills, to Old Manor House, Gt. Houghton, Northants. I am having a lot of trouble with the post-office through the secretaries of shows sending schedules to my old address. I have taken your paper, I may say, since the commencement, and have all the numbers by me.

Leeds C.B.S. holds a members' table show (a preliminary to our open show), in connection with a washing exhibition given by Mr. H. Woof, on Saturday, October 3rd, writes Mr. A. Wilkins, the secretary. All entries to be made by 6.30. Entry fee, 3d. each cage; all fees given in prizes; also two good specials for most points. Mr. J. H. Mennard judges. Classes: 4 Yorks (2 unflighted), 4 Norwich (2 unflighted), 1 British, and 1 A.O.V. Canary, Mule, or Hybrid. Friends invited.

Mr. H. Norman, writes Mr. R. Smith, secretary of the Wimbledon and Dis. C.B.S., has been engaged, in conjunction with Mr. J. Robson, to judge at our annual show on November 17th and 18th.

Amongst the many testimonials published in his advertisements of British Birds, by W. Gore, of 131, Gooch Street, Birmingham, two of them published this week will be of special interest to Linnet fanciers, who on no account should miss reading them.—(ADVT.)

The Provincial Roller Canary Club will hold an open contest on January 15th and 16th, 1909, at the Coal Exchange, Market Place, Manchester, writes Mr. W. Whittaker, the hon. secretary. Seven classes will be provided, and Messrs. J. Lyons and A. Foulds will judge.

The annual show of the Accrington and Dis. C.B.A. is to be held on October 23rd and 24th, writes Mr. J. W. Philpott, secretary, in the Large Assembly Room, Central Conservative Club. This room is the best in Lancashire for exhibition purposes, and is only two minutes' walk from the main line station. It is well ventilated, free from draughts, and nicely lighted, electric lights being used at night. Schedules are now ready, and may be had of me, my address being 28, Jubilee Street, Oswaldtwistle, near Accrington, Lancs.

The September number of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—is full of interesting matter. Mr. O. Millsum contributes an article on the Black-checked or Lesser Rufous-headed Tanager, which is accompanied by an excellent coloured plate. The second of Mr. Douglas Dewar's articles on "Aviary Birds I have met in their Natural State," treats of Bulbuls, and affords instructive reading. Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A., writes on "The Nesting of the Girl Bunting," Mrs. Warren Vernon on "The Nesting of Black-headed Sibias," and Capt. A. Perreau on "The Fecundity of Yellow Budgerigars." Mr. W. F. Page, F.Z.S., also writes on "The Aviaries at Ringmore," this completing a fine issue.

The new directorate of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. are determined to make their forthcoming show the event of the season. The beautiful Town Hall, Rotherhithe, has been engaged with the whole suite of rooms attached, for three clear days. The hall is the perfection of lighting, both by day and night, and is heated by no less than 13 radiators. Arrangements are complete for recitals on the grand pianoforte during the two days of the show. Teas and other light refreshments will be obtainable in the spacious buffets. A formidable array of specials is promised. The show will be held under C.B.U. rules, and the patronage of 7 of the leading specialist clubs. Schedules will be ready shortly. W. Hodson, hon. secretary and show manager, 209, Crystal Palace Road, East Dulwich, S.E.—(ADVT.)

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity.

THE SCARLET CARDINAL (Cardinalis phœniceus).—This fine species is almost as rich in hue as a Scarlet Tanager and it is also a more shapely bird than the better known Virginian Cardinal. Two specimens of this species are at present (1908) on view in the Small Birds' House at the London Zoo. The general colour of its plumage is very difficult to describe; its areas of lighter and darker hues are similar to those of the Virginian Cardinal, but I should call the plumage a sort of transparent scarlet-vermilion, very intense in hue. I have not heard it sing.

It is a native of Venezuela, Trinidad and Colombia, and is also a species one may wait long to see on the market.

THE ROSE-BREASTED GROSBEAK (Hedymeles ludovicianus).—This handsome species enjoys a very wide range, viz., Canada, United States, Central America, Colombia, Ecuador, Cuba and Jamaica. It is hard to understand why so beautiful a species, and one with so wide a range is not frequently imported, as, though the restrictions on exportation in the United States should affect this species but little, and according to the late Dr. Russ it is annually imported into Germany, yet I cannot trace any record of its ever having been imported alive into this country. Specimens should not be difficult to procure from Colombia and Ecuador. Russ praised this bird very highly. He found it tame, confiding, a grand songster and ready to breed. It built as high up as possible in a reed basket or cage, and the young were reared on fresh ants' eocoons, egg bread, and various insects.

Description: Adult male:—Above black, with the lower back, rump, median coverts, tips of greater coverts, tips of secondaries, base of primaries, and tips of upper tail coverts white; under surface of body and inner webs of outer tail feathers also white; sides of body and flanks ashen, with black spots; fore-neck and centre of breast rose colour; beak white; legs and feet bluish.

Adult female:—Very different from the male; upper surface ochreous-brown, striated with blackish; wings and tail brownish-black; two white bands cross each wing; lores white; cheeks whitish-buff; under surface white, washed with buff on the centre of abdomen; sides of body and flanks striated with brown; beak brown, legs and feet bluish.

THE BLUE GROSBEAK (Guiraca cyanea).—This is a quiet and amiable species. The male is a beautiful bird indeed, being deep blue in colour, his somewhat sombre-clad mate being easily distinguished by her garment of deep ruddy-brown. In the aviaries of my esteemed friend Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, I recently saw a very fine pair (I have only possessed the female myself and that in uncertain plumage) which have made one or more attempts to reproduce their kind; but as yet complete success has not attended their efforts. It was a sight to be remembered to see the male flitting to and fro amid the growing greenery of a large garden aviary, his garment of glistening blue changing its hue under the varying influence of light and shade.

It is an inhabitant of Brazil, Amazonia, Guiana, Venezuela and Ecuador. It frequents hedges and thickets, but so far in the records of travellers and naturalists there appear no details of the identification of this fine species. In the bird-room of the late Dr. Russ they nested, constructing an open cup-shaped nest of stalks, shavings, moss and cotton wool; the eggs were whitish, thickly spotted with reddish-brown and four in number; incubation lasted 13 days, the female being fed on the nest by the male, and the plumage of the young was dull brown, washed with grey. The plumage of the young, as above given, agreed with that of the immature plumage of the female which I possessed for but a short time; therefore it is evident that the plumages of both sexes while immature are similar.

Description: Adult male:—Upper surface deep blue, the wing coverts and upper tail coverts washed with cobalt; median and greater coverts and quills blackish-blue, edged with blue; tail-feathers deep blackish blue; forehead and fore part of the head rich cobalt, lores and eye region, cheeks and ear coverts black, washed with blue; entire under surface deep blue, blackish on the throat and greyish on the flanks, beak blackish-horn colour; legs and feet brownish-grey. Total length 6 inches, tail 2½ inches.

This genus consists of five other species; which I can only mention in passing. They are as follows: Carulea, thriving in Southern United States, and distinguished from Cyanea by its greyish-cobalt upper surface and bright cobalt under surface; Parellina, of Mexico and the adjacent regions, by its indigo-blue upper surface, with brown edgings to many feathers; Cyanoides, of Panama, Colombia and Ecuador, by its indigo-blue upper and under surface; Concreta, of Central America from Mexico to Veragua, by its predominate colouring of blackish-indigo; Glaucocærulea, of Southern Brazil and Guiana, by its predominate colouring of greyish-blue. All the females are dissimilar the predominate colouring of the respective species being greyer or warmer browns.

The Song Sparrows.

CHINGOLO SONG-SPARROW (Zonostricha pileata).—A plainly but prettily clad species; it has a sweet but slightly monotonous little song. To call it plain, scarcely does the bird justice; brilliant colouring it certainly has not, but handsome it most certainly is. And not only is the male so, but the female also. Both are decidedly pretty birds, garbed in garments of sharply defined greys, browns and blacks.

Adult Male: Head, nape and cheeks ashen, with bold longitudinal black stripes; sides and nape of neck, reddish-brown; back and wings ruddy-brown, with sharply defined black shaft lines to most of the feathers; lower back and tail ashy-brown, tail feathers with paler borders; under parts greyish-white, washed with brown on the breast, abdomen and flanks; beak, brownish; legs and feet, pale brown.

Adult female: Slightly smaller than the male, and plumage of not quite so rich a hue; nevertheless with the variablences common to all species, the sexes apart from song are not easy to discern.

My esteemed friend, Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, has succeeded in breeding this species and records the following among the other details in the Avicultural Magazine. His birds had an enclosure to themselves: "Towards the middle of July, I noticed the hen sitting. . . . . After incubation had proceeded about a month, I examined the nest carefully, and, to my very great astonishment, found it contained four eggs, and two young birds only a few days old. I can only explain this by assuming that the hen laid three eggs, then set a fortnight, then laid three more eggs and sat another fortnight—an event which has never occurred before in my aviaries. The young birds had some whitish down on their heads and backs. They grew and feathered very rapidly, the hen doing nearly all the feeding, and taking nothing to the young but insect food."

The young were successfully reared to maturity, and still live (May, 1908). This was the first occasion on which young of this species had been reared in this country. Mixed seed, soft food, and a few live insects are about all these pleasing birds require. Most of the foreign Sparrows and Sparrows so-called, are really handsome birds, though not gorgeously clad. As yet, but few of them have been bred in captivity — a fact which makes them specially interesting to aviculturists.

A HYBRID SONG-SPARROW. (Zonotrichia leucophrys and pileata).—This Hybrid was bred by Mr. D. Seth-Smith in 1905, and duly recorded in the Avicultural Magazine, Vol. III. (new series), from which account the following facts are gathered. In the same enclosure were two females of Z. pileata, which in the previous year had occupied a joint nest; on the introduction of the male Z. leucophrys they at once commenced to fight for his possession, and one had to be removed. A nest was built of hay, lined with fine hay by the female in a clump of sticks some 8 feet from the ground. Only one young bird was hatched, which left the nest on June 7th, and was able to fend for itself in about a fortnight.

The nest was promptly repaired, and a clutch of four eggs was laid, three of which were hatched about June 22nd, and the young left the nest on July 4th, commencing to fend for themselves eleven days later.

They resembled young Reed Buntings, and were exhibited later, I think, at the Crystal Palace Show. They were reared upon live insects, but soon after leaving the nest, commenced to subsist entirely upon soft food.

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

How to Keep, Feed, Breed, Tame and Teach to Talk.

A handbook which should be on every bird-lover's book shelf. Two full-page illustrations.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT THE YORKSHIRE CANARY.

Synopsis of a Discussion held by the Members of the Leyton C.B.A. on Sept. 7.

At the annual meeting held on Sept. 7th, Mr. Williamson presiding, and after the general business (which included the nomination of several new members, and the presentation of the Committee's Special Prize to Mr. Burbidge, who won the prize at the Young Stock Show), there was a discussion on the Yorkshire Canary, each of those present drawing a question, which had to be answered. Some of the questions and the gist of the answers given by those who drew them are set out below.

Length of the Yorkshire.

Should birds over standard length be allowed to compete, and, if so, why?—This question was drawn by the President of the Association, Mr. Harrison. He was of the opinion that birds over standard length should compete. The chief aim of the Yorkshire breeder was to obtain length, he said, and it seemed hard when one bred a good bird a little over standard length that he should have it passed over on the Show Bench. He did not think, however, that many birds would be affected either way, as in his opinion there were not many Yorkshires on the Show Bench that were over length. There was considerable discussion on the question, and the general feeling was in favour of the inclusion of these birds in the show awards.

How many nests would you take off a hen in a season?—Mr. Williamson, who drew this question, said that the number depended entirely on the age of the hen. If an unflighted bird, one nest a season, in his opinion, was quite sufficient to take; in the cases of older hens, he did not think more than three nests should be taken under any circumstances.

Asked what he would do in the case of an unflighted hen laying a nest of clear eggs, he said he would not let it nest again that season. He was strongly against working birds too hard, especially in their first year.

On Double Buffing.

Do you believe in double-buffing?—This was drawn by Mr. B. F. Forse, who said he did not believe in it, as the result of so doing was invariably to bring about a superabundance of feather in the progeny. He had only tried double-buffing once, but that was quite sufficient. One naturally only double-buffed with the idea of improving certain points, but even if there were such improvement, this superabundance of feather would more than counterbalance it. Several of the members gave their experiences in double-buffing, and it was agreed that the idea was hardly worth adopting.

Do you believe in colour feeding from the nest?—Mr. A. Morris drew the question, and answered in the negative. He thought it quite unnecessary. It was only done to improve the colour of the bird for [illegible], but the competition at such shows was [illegible] ever very keen, and even if it were, the little extra colour obtained would not, in his opinion, be worth the time and trouble taken to obtain it.

Asked whether or not he would put on to colour food, at once, birds which were plucked at about the age of three or four weeks, he said he certainly would, as the feathers were not likely to be moulted again during the period of the moult, and in this case if the birds were not put on colour food as soon as they were plucked, besides being colour fed when moulting, they would quite naturally come out patchy in colour. But he would hardly call the act of colour-feeding birds at the age of three or four weeks "colour-feeding from the nest," as generally understood.

How would you attempt to breed out bad wing carriage?—Mr. A. B. Forse, in answer to this question, said he would not attempt to breed this out. To get rid of it, he would dispose of those birds with bad wing carriage, and purchase some without the defect. He would not breed with a hen with faulty wing carriage under any circumstances, as she had so much effect on the type of the progeny.

Mr. Farmer said he had bred good-headed youngsters from flat-headed parent birds, and would therefore be inclined to give a flat-headed hen a trial; if the fault appeared in the progeny, he would then discard the bird.

Questions about Pairing.

What method would you adopt for increasing size?—Mr. Roberts said that with Norwich he would pair together two tight-feathered Buffs, as double-buffing, in his opinion, tended to increase size. Mr. Harrison said he was inclined to favour the use of large hens, in preference to large cock-birds, to increase size; he thought hens had more effect on the size of the progeny. The general feeling expressed was that the reverse was the case—that the cocks had the greater effect on the size of the young.

Do you favour the use of Yellow or Buff hens?—Mr. Shankley said he thought it quite immaterial. Mr. Forse thought yellow hens the best to breed with, as they were usually more typical than Buffs, and one had to look to the hen for type.

Would you discard a bad wing-carriaged bird if bred from birds with good wing-carriage?—This question was drawn by Mr. Horsop, who said he would discard such a bird if a hen, on the principle that the hen affected the type of the progeny; but if a cock bird, he would be inclined to keep it.—Mr. Harrison did not think any harm would be done by breeding with a slightly defective bird bred from birds without this defect; the thing one had to know was the pedigree of one's birds. Breeding with birds about the antecedents of which nothing was known, was very much like groping in the dark; but when the pedigrees of the birds were known one knew what to expect and what to avoid.

Do you believe in running one cock with two hens?—Mr. Saxe said he would certainly run a cock with two hens at the beginning of the breeding season, but afterwards would keep the cock with the hen from which the best results had been obtained. Mr. B. F. Forse said he had run a cock with three hens with good results.

Flat Heads and Hinged Tails.

Which do you consider the worse defect—flat heads or hinged tails?—Drawn by Mr. Marshall, who considered that of the two defects hinged tails was by far the worse.

Which is the best method of breeding out frills?—Mr. Mills said he would not attempt to breed them out—it would take too long. He would get rid of all birds that were frilled, and purchase others that were not. This was the simplest and quickest method. To breed them out, was, he thought, a task that would take years to accomplish. Mr. Forse did not think it would take a particularly long time; he would breed from hens that were perfect in this respect, and by so doing, he did not think it would be a very lengthy task.

Which is the most difficult defect to breed out?—Mr. A. B. Forse drew this. He said that perhaps the worst were bad wing-carriage and hinged tails, the latter probably the worst, and certainly the most difficult to get rid of. He would not, however, attempt to breed out either of these, but would get rid of all birds having these defects, and would purchase others.

There were several other questions, but as time was getting on these were not answered. The next meeting will be held on October 5th, at Headquarters, when a Washing Exhibition and Competition will take place, the winner of which will be presented with a silver medal given by the Committee.—A. MORRIS.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

The Training of the Roller Canary.

Lecture delivered by Mr. Max Jacquemin before the members and friends of the Wolverhampton and District C.B.S. on Sept. 8.

It is with pleasure that I address you this evening on the subject of that "Living Musical Box," the Roller Canary. I don't pretend to be a great authority on this subject, but as a breeder of several years' standing and having had a little experience when residing in Germany, gained through contact with some of the leading breeders and exhibitors there, perhaps some here this evening will benefit by my short address; if so I shall be amply repaid.

Caging the Young Birds Off.

The breeding season is now over, and for the Roller fancier the most important part of his hobby begins. The young cocks have had their exercise in the fly cage, which has made them strong and healthy and the first nests of birds are coming nicely through their moults. I put them in single song cages generally in the first week in September; this is quite early enough as they get much stronger and twitter better when together in fly cages. Another important point is not to overcrowd them, or else they will occupy their time plucking each other's feathers instead of flying and singing.

When all are in their respective new homes they flutter about for the first few days, as the smaller cages are not to their liking at first. I found that the best way to get them used to it, is to place them close together, so that they can see each other through the wires and also so that they can easily find their seed and water. I leave them like that for two or three days, after which they are usually much quieter. Then I stack them one above another and put a board between every other cage, leaving the cages in this position for another two or three days (of course I am speaking of open song cages, not song boxes). By then I always find that my birds have settled down to their closer confinement. They generally begin then to twitter; if you have got a lot of young ones, you will find they will begin to twitter sooner than if there are only a few together.

A Difficult Period.

After this I put the last board between the cages, so that they cannot see each other at all; and each remains separate. I wait another few days and then I place them in a case (with a glass door) which holds a dozen cages and then I begin to darken their homes, but I do so gradually. It is a great mistake to cover them at once, and you will find it a greater advantage to cover them by degrees; they will soon begin to twitter again if they happen to leave off.

From now I keep them closed all day, except when I want to hear them sing or to see if they are alright and not puffed up at night. As soon as the gas is out I open the case and keep them uncovered all night. In two or three weeks' time you can hear the earlier birds twittering into a fuller song, which begins gradually to shape itself into a roll. And now is the time to keep your eyes and ears open to see that none go wrong. If a bird sings with his beak closed he promises to be a good singer as Hollow-Roll, Hollow-Bell, Bass-Roll, and Koller are all produced by closed beaks. Those young which sing steadily with well-rounded crops, place nearest their teachers. If I have one which gets noisy, I put him into a dark place near the floor, and cover him up, so that his song goes back to a twittering. Sometimes he improves; if not I remove him altogether..

It is as well to hang the Schoolmasters side by side, but they must be the same strain and have the same song—not one having one tour and the other quite a different tour.

Then and Now.

Many years ago when the darkening of Rollers was not so well known in the Hartz Mountains they had better birds than we have at the present time. The nice, long, metallic-sounding rolls have to a certain extent disappeared. The birds are more inclined to be hoarse and short in song. The conditions of the breeders' living rooms, which are often over-heated and are often too dark for their birds, have brought about this result, and the majority of breeders have only medium birds good enough for export.

You can get far superior birds outside the Hartz Mountain district and nearly all the high class birds in the leading shows are from breeders in other large towns in Germany.

Then, again, many leading breeders do not believe in covering up high-class birds, with the exception that when training such birds they put dull glass doors on the cases, so that the birds do not get wild and distracted in their song. So that here is a clear proof as to which birds are progressing most under the two methods of training.

About Feeding.

As regards feeding, I give my birds three parts rape and one part Canary seed and once a week a pinch of maw, hemp, groats and linseed—only a few seeds for each and those on the clean sand tray. Linseed is a very good seed for young birds in general, as in moulting time when they are subject to stoppage, this particular seed is a mild preventative and remedy.

I lose very few birds and mine always enjoy their weekly luxuries. In addition to these I give a small quantity of egg food once a week.

In conclusion I should like to say that those birds which I intend to put up for the show I keep closed all night, about a fortnight before the show I send them to, so that they get used to opening early in the morning; that gives the judge a better chance to hear them, without being obliged to wait a long time until the bird starts singing.

The Escaped Vultures.

I feel many of your readers will have read with regret of the massacre of the hapless escaped Vultures in East London, writes Mr. Willoughby Verner, to the "Saturday Review." All who have anything to do with these birds know how inoffensive they are, and how anybody accustomed to handling big birds could have easily recaptured them with the aid of a few pennyworth of "lights" or similar tempting food. The one requisite was that they should not be disturbed and made to fly away until such time as they became hungry, when they would have come readily to feed. Like most people who keep large birds in confinement, I have from time to time had to recapture Vultures, Eagles, and Eagle Owls, which have, either by accident or design, been at large, and provided a bird has not been alarmed by other folk, have never yet failed to secure it. Any man who has experience of taking up a trained Falcon will know what I mean and how simple a matter it is.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

HOW I COMMENCED IN THE FOREIGN BIRD HOBBY.

By W. E. Allen.

Some Other Inmates.

I have also in this aviary one pair of Red-crested Cardinals, one pair of Pekin Robins, and one pair of Java Sparrows, all of which agree very well together. The Cardinals are fine showy birds; their light grey breasts and red-crested heads make them to contrast well with their green and yellow companions. They have a pretty call which sounds very nice in the early summer mornings.

These birds have the same food as the Budgerigars, except for a few beetles, spiders, and mealworms, which they relish very much. They are also fond of a bath, and, being strong birds, make a rare splashing. I have often seen them cover the other birds with water from their wings, and although the Budgerigars do not bathe themselves, they seem nevertheless to enjoy the splashing, as they will often wait round the bath till the others are done.

The Java Sparrows are quiet birds compared with the others. The cock bird has just a little whistle when calling to his mate. I call him the water bird, as his call sounds just like dropping water. These are treated the same as the Budgerigars, except for a little paddy rice, and of course, a bath.

My Pekin Robins.

The Pekin Robins that I have are a fine pair of birds, and are about the same size as our own wild Robins. They are very quick at catching flies, of which they are very fond, preferring them alive to dead, although they will eat both. They will also eat any insects that I catch in the garden.

They are always ready, too, for them, for they will wait near the door when I am in the garden, hoping, I suppose, that I will catch some insects for them. If I do happen to catch one or two, I only have to hold it near the wire and they will take it from my hands.

They are very fond of a bath, and are always the first to go in when it is put in fresh in the morning. The cock has a very fine song, and the aviary being under my bedroom window, I can hear him to perfection. What with the singing of the Robin and Cardinals, and the chattering of the Budgerigars, one would think he was out in the country instead of in London. So my conclusion is that if anyone reading these lines has a corner in the yard or garden to spare, he cannot do better than erect an aviary. The foreign bird hobby is both instructive and entertaining.

The Sprightly Siskin.

Soon the little Siskins will be leaving their northern homes for more southern districts. Next month parties of them may be met in the fir woods, or the alders along the banks of the stream. They are as active as Titmice, and have precisely the same habit of clinging to the clusters of seeds. Position is nothing to them, and they sway to and fro in the breeze, often with head downwards or clinging with one leg in quite an acrobatic manner. Passing rapidly from tree to tree with drooping flight, uttering their low call note as they go, they are not difficult birds to watch, as they are by no means shy. A peculiarity of these pretty creatures is that they rarely settle on the ground. They are either in the slender branches or clinging to some tall weed.

Wild Birds in Action.

The rapidity of action in birds is in no way better illustrated than in the way they take to the wing from the ground. Get close to a feeding flock of any species without being detected, and then suddenly clap the hands together once. The rise of the birds appears to almost synchronise with the sound made by the hands. The rise of the birds is quick, yet graceful and easy; there is no clumsy blundering upon the wing, but just a spring into the air and they are off upon unfolded wings. In some species these actions are performed so quickly that the eye is unable to observe them separately. The rising and gliding into flight appears to be one action. Considering the size and weight of some birds, it is wonderful the way they alight; it is always done easily and gracefully, even in a good strong breeze.

THE NESTING OF BRITISH FINCHES.

Some Interesting Facts.

In a recent number of "Country Life" appeared two interesting letters dealing with the number of nests which certain species of Finches have during a season. Mr. M. J. Kelly wrote: It is not a matter for surprise to find a Bullfinch's nest as late as August 9th. Bullfinches frequently have late broods, and I have often seen them as late as the end of July or beginning of August. I found one this year with young birds (just hatched) on August 2nd. That well-known naturalist, Mr. J. Walpole Bond, wrote: I was much interested in Mr. Horace Hutchinson's note on the late nesting of the Bullfinch, which brings to mind the fact that many of our Finches are notoriously tardy with their second broods. Over and over again I have proved individual pairs of Bullfinches to be genuinely double-brooded, and on rare occasions triple-brooded. Seebohm was not correct when he stated that the eggs were generally laid in April. As a fact, such an event, even at the very end of the month, is quite a rarity. But, after May 10th, their nesting becomes general, and I have found many first clutches from that date up to May 31st. Moreover, many nests contain fresh eggs all through June; a fair percentage during July. Certainly, all those nests found after mid-June are second broods. On several occasions I have seen eggs and young in August, and, once, a nest with four eggs on September 11th. This must be regarded as an extraordinary date. The Goldfinch is another species which sometimes goes on breeding up to the end of the summer. The earliest clutches of eggs which I have ever seen were respectively on May 2nd and May 8th. But the majority have their first nests filled between May 18th and June 4th. Second nests are quite common during July; several times I have found young, only a few days old, during the first week of August. The latest fresh clutch of eggs I ever saw was on August 16th. Turning to the Greenfinch I find from my diaries that in the spring of 1894, which was a remarkably open one, I found a good many full nests between April 21st-30th. More usually, however, the laying season of the Greenfinch commences about May 9th, and quantities of nests—all first broods—are prevalent until the first week of June. After this second broods may be looked for right on till the end of July, while, though rarely, I have known fresh eggs as late as August 15th. Another conspicuously late nester is the Linnet, whose eggs I have found tolerably frequently as late as mid-August, notably two nests this very year. But these, of course, are late second or even third broods, for the Linnet's breeding year commences at the end of April, though the majority wait for May before thinking of the serious business of the year. The Lesser Redpoll, producing its first clutch of eggs from between May 20th-June 6th, sometimes, at any rate, rears a second brood during July, and the Twite occasionally does likewise. And, indeed, with the exception of the Crossbill and the Hawfinch, all our Finches rear, or occasionally rear, two and some of them three in the course of the season, though, personally, I think that genuine second broods of Tree-Sparrows and Chaffinches are nothing like so common as most observers assert. Especially is this the case with the Chaffinch. In conclusion, it should be noted how, for hardy resident species as all our Finches are, comparatively late all the Finches are (excepting the Crossbill, which is notoriously early) in starting nesting operations.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

HOW TO BREED, MANAGE AND EXHIBIT.

By H. W. Battye (President of the Yorkshire Union.) Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson.

Absolutely the very best Handbook that has ever been put on the market. It deals fully with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder of the Bird of Grace and Beauty. It contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat both health and disease.

The date fixed for the Kilsyth F.A. Open Show, writes Mr. A. D. Duncan, the hon. secretary, is December 19th, and the judge appointed, Mr. J. F. Dewar. There will be 22 open classes. The Scottish Crest Club holds one of its "Roberts" Trophy competitions here, and the Border Fancy Club gives a medal, and the Scottish B.B. and M.C. three.

The first annual open show, under the auspices of the Norwich Plainhead C.C. of Ireland, will be held in the Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Belfast, on December 18th and 19th, writes Mr. Jas. Stewart, the hon. secretary. The committee have provided about 50 classes, and the judges are: Messrs. Geo. Harland (Hull), and J. Rock (Belfast).

London Federation of C.B.S.

A meeting of delegates will be held at the "Feathers Hotel," Great Chapel Street, Westminster, on Wednesday, October 7th, at 7.30 o'clock, writes Mr. P. Adamthwaite, the hon. secretary, pro tem.

Southern Yorkshire C.C.

Will members please note that the cup and trophy competitions will be held at Gloucester, on October 28th and 29th, with Mr. Battye as judge, instead of at Cardiff; and Hastings have the novice support in the place of Bournemouth. Members wishing to compete for Messrs. Ramsden's and Easterling's tea-services should notify me at once.—J. W. Rennie, hon. secretary, The Junction Hotel, Andover.

At Ludlow (Salop).

We have formed a cage-bird society at Ludlow, Salop, writes Mr. F. H. Oakes, the hon. secretary (Globe Cottage, Ludlow), and have fixed the date of our show for December 17th. It will be under C.B.U. rules, and Mr. J. H. Payne will judge. Full prize money will be given, and we hope fanciers will support us generously at our first attempt. I shall be glad to welcome new members to the society.

OBITUARY.

MRS. C. A. HOUSE.

It is with sincere regret that we have to announce the untimely demise of the wife of our esteemed friend and representative, Mr. C. A. House. After a distressing illness covering the last six months, Mrs. House passed away quite peacefully at Walthamstow last Sunday evening, and terminated a career of much usefulness at an all too early age. The many friends our respected colleague has made during his forty years' association with Fancy matters will tender Mr. House and his only son their profound condolences, tempering their regrets by the knowledge that with the end came cessation of suffering and that peace which "passeth all understanding."

A New Nesting Material.

It was examination day, and the intelligence of the scholars was being tested by sundry "brain puzzlers." At last came the question: "What is the meaning of the word 'average'?"

Up went little Tommy's hand. "Please, sir," said he, "it's what a Sparrow lays her eggs on."

"What!" exclaimed the astonished examiner.

Tommy repeated his answer, and seeing the surprise it created, added, "It's what the book says, sir.'

On being sent to fetch the book, Tommy read out: "The hen Sparrow lays on an average four eggs each time."

Sleep Easy o' Nights.

To cage-bird fanciers, one of the most useful developments of recent years in the way of insurance is that by which they are enabled to insure their birds against both fire, burglary, and loss or damage while in transit to and from the shows, and with such a responsible institution as Lloyds. Aviaries and bird-houses can also be covered by the policy. The premiums payable are most moderate, and it will be to the interests of the greater majority of our readers to apply for particulars of this insurance scheme at once to the sole agent, Mr. H. W. Mathias, "Lucerne," Stubbington, Fareham, Hants. An advertisement from him appears on another page this week.

Kent County C.B.A. Patronage.

Our association's patronage has been given to the following societies' shows. (There may be one or two added after September 23rd.):—Canterbury, Deal, Dover F. and F.S., Folkestone, Gillingham, Plumstead, and Woolwich, Rochester, and Tonbridge. At each of these shows we are offering an 8-inch rose bowl in each of the following varieties:—Norwich Plainheads, Crests and Crestbreds, Yorkshires, Border Fancies and British Birds; also a cup each for Lizards and Mules. The first four varieties, as also Lizards, are to be competed for by birds bred in the current year by the exhibitor, Mules and British Birds any age, Mules also bred by exhibitor. An exhibitor may make as many entries in any variety as he chooses, but he must nominate only two birds in any variety for competition for bowls or cups, and send on to me the Nos. of the cage labels containing the nominated birds not later than first post on the morning of judging, and, of course, before the judging takes place.—Geo. Sanderson, hon. secretary.

FRAME FOR MAKING REMOVABLE WIRE FRONTS.

Sent by T. B. Tomlinson, 956, Walker Road, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Enclosed is rough sketch of a frame for making removable wire cage fronts. I find this a very easy and quick way. You can make any size from show cage to flight fronts in this frame, and solder every wire, except the two end ones, without any trouble. The outsides of the frame are made of 1-in. by ½-in wood; the two middle uprights are 1 in. by ¼ in. By having the two middle uprights ¼ in. thick, it allows you to get a wire at each side. The purpose of the two middle uprights is to keep the punch bars straight. The punched bars are fixed into grooves ¼ in. deep made in the frame with an ordinary hand-saw, in the edges and middle laths, according to the distance you require your punch bars to be apart. The four grooves made in the bottom rail of frame, are to allow the long wires to project ¾ in. through punch-bar; by nailing a small bit of wood under groove (as shown on sketch) it stops the long wires from coming any further than ¾ in. The sketch shows the wires fixed ready for soldering. Your wire fronts are made upside down, for this allows you to get your short wires into position over the top of the door. I stand the frame on the table, with the leg the farthest away from me, the top leaning towards me. This makes the solder run quicker, and makes a neater job of it than if it was level. The two back legs are to be kept left hand. I think this frame will be found of great service by any fancier who wishes to make his own wire fronts.—T. B. Tomlinson.

A USEFUL HOLDER.

Sent by F. Smith, 3, Torquay Villas, Rosmead Street, Hull.

I am sending you a drawing of a wire for holding drinking or other vessels on cage fronts, and which I have found very useful, as it entirely does away with any wire going inside the cage, and therefore prevents the birds injuring themselves, say by catching their claws. To make them, take a piece of wire, bend it round the vessel, then allow enough over to go round the wire of cage, and bend sharp back, with ¾ in. left to bind down on to the front rail. It will hold as firm as can be possibly desired. A dozen or more can be made at the cost of 1d. They are easy to fix, and can be removed at any time.—F. Smith.

Echoes from Edinburgh Derby Show.

That the show was a big success; that the entries would have been greater but for the closeness of date of Glasgow show; that the Buff Pied hen's owner is Mr. Thornton—may he have a round of good luck with her; that Glasgow's Derby winner dropped first place; that Mac took his defeat like a true sportsman; that the secretary knows his business; that the hon. president, Mr. C. R. Drysdale, was in good form; that his design for the gold medal was much admired; that the judges did their part well; that there was a complete absence of growlers; that it was not customary to award specials; that friends and well-wishers sent in a lot of specials, and the committee were bound to award them; that there was a fair turn-out of visitors, some from long distances; that the officials have every reason to feel proud of their first show.—Scots Fancy.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

*A Sparrow's Foster Parent.

A friend of mine caught a young Sparrow one morning, but about mid-day he said he thought it was dying. So he put it with a hen Bullfinch to see if she would feed it, which she did until it could feed itself. When the bird learned to fly, my friend let it go.—Sent by William Willis (age 14), 303, Weelsby Street, Grimsby.

*The Hedge Accentor.

The Hedge Sparrow is not a Sparrow at all; his real name is the Hedge Accentor. He gets his name Accentor from his piercing notes. He does a great deal of good, especially in the garden, by eating insects and grubs which would otherwise do a great deal of harm. As I was taking a walk along the hedgerows one day, I heard a bird uttering some piercing notes as though its nest had just been taken. On drawing near, I noticed a Hedge Sparrow. On looking carefully I discovered a nest with five bluish-green eggs. About a week after I found someone had taken the nest.—Sent by Reginald Langford (age 13), Beaulieu Schools, New Forest.

Poor Starlings!

Ever since I can remember, we have had Starlings build in the South of our house. Nearly always cats have the young before they can fly. The cat takes them when they are fat, and also when the old bird is feeding them. They are in a hole in the roof, and therefore have no means of escape. The bird that is left will find another mate and build in the same place again. I tried to stop the cats by erecting a barricade. But the cats waited their time, and the stupid Starlings went to them and got killed. But now I have put a stop to it all, so they can breed in peace.—Sent by F. Gordon Cooke (age 14), Brook House, Painswich, Gloucestershire.

CANARY QUERIES.

About an Aviary.

"Furness."—Your aviary appears to be a very desirable structure, but, candidly, unless the position in which it stands is exceptionally well suited to it, I am afraid it may prove more pretty than practical. The glass roof to the covered portion will be very apt to sweat in cold weather and make the interior very damp unless there is very free ventilation. In summer it will be proportionately hot unless the glass is covered with some shading material. And at all times it will expose the birds to panic. The top of the wall at back of flight should be inaccessible to prowling cats, as the sight of these at such close quarters may cause a panic any time. To ventilate the inner portion I should cut out a panel from each of the wooden ends near the highest point of roof about ten inches long and seven deep, so that the whole may be cut from a single board. Over the aperture nail a piece of perforated zinc outside and inside, arranging them so the perforations do not coincide with each other. This will prevent draught. Above these apertures in the angles at the highest part bore a series of six half-inch holes, triangular shape. Cut out another aperture, twelve by six inches, at the bottom of the wooden portion underneath the glass in the front, at the side of the door. Cover with perforated zinc the same as the other two, and then fit a sliding shutter over each, by which you can regulate the ventilation to suit prevailing conditions. For breeding Canaries and Mules flying loose the aviary would accommodate ten cocks and thirty hens. This would be sufficent to allow for the natural increase as the season advances.

More about Aviaries.

J.S.C.C.—The extreme variations of temperature in your aviary are the sole cause of your birds being continually dropping feathers, and also their failure to breed successfully, and the variations are due to insufficient ventilation, and, probably, to the aviary being built of single wooden walls. If the walls were double, with a little space between them, it would make the interior far less susceptible to outside changes. But if this plan is not feasible you must do the best you can by increasing the means of ventilation, and during the coldest part of the winter you can use the stove to prevent temperature dropping too much at night. A row of half-inch holes about four inches apart may be bored along top of the east and west sides. The two bottom corner panes of glass should be removed from the window on the west side, and the spaces covered with fine wire gauze, or a piece of perforated zinc nailed over on the inside and outside, arranging them so that the perforations are not opposite each other. In addition to this an aperture should be sawn out of the north and south ends, at the bottom, twelve inches long, and six inches deep, and these also covered with perforated zinc as the others, and further provided with a sliding wooden shutter which can be opened or closed to any extent. This should form a fairly efficient ventilation, and very materially improve the condition of your stock.

Hens Gone Wrong.

"Ajax."—You make your colour food a little too strong, and your feeding also is not quite correct, which probably accounts fully for the trouble. You should, however, first see that the birds are quite free from insect pests, and also from draughts; do not give cold baths whilst the birds are in their present condition. Tepid baths may be given in bright, mild weather. In making colour food add one ounce of Natal pepper, and three ounces of soft sugar to 1lb. of the tasteless pepper Give this mixture in the same way as you are now giving the tasteless pepper alone, but use four biscuits to each instead of three as now Add two good teaspoonfuls—but not over-heaped—of the mixed colour. Do not give any maw at all until the end of the year, and withhold all linseed for a few weeks. Instead of these seeds give a small teaspoonful of dry summer rape per bird twice a week. In the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea every second day until the looseness is stopped. Do not give any more of the medicine you mention, which will do more harm than good.

Makes a Squeaky Noise.

G.Y.E.—The poor bird to which you refer is undoubtedly exposed to chills or draughts, and until these causes are quite removed no kind of treatment is likely to do any permanent good A bird in such a weakened condition is also exceedingly liable to red mite attacks. Therefore examine bird and cage well, and if any insect pests are found thoroughly eradicate them Keep the bird in a comfortably warm, but not overheated, temperature which is fairly regular day and night Give only tepid baths, and withhold these in cold, wet weather, feeding and treating as follows: As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape; twice a week a few grains of hemp and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, in which mix five drops of sherry whilst the bird is ill, and three times a week a spray of green food or a little seed fruit Give these separately, and on different days, so that a different item is given each day. Keep cage clean, and strewn with gritty sand In the drinking water for the first three days give ten drops of glycerine and as much [illegible] and cover a sixpence; drop this afterwards, and give instead twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus. Shake well when giving, and repeat every second day for a week, or a fortnight if necessary. On alternate days give twenty drops of Parrish's Chemical Food If he recovers now and keeps free from wheeziness next spring you should breed with him again.

A Couple of Weaklings.

G. Beadle.—The two young birds are undoubtedly subject to epileptic seizures, and are probably constitutionally weak You ought to have said how they were fed and treated. Keep in a quiet corner of the room, but see that they are not exposed to any draughts. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape, and in addition give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake to each every second day, and on the intervening days a little green food. Keep the cage clean and well strewn with gritty sand. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water give twelve drops of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same amount of chlorate of potash, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. After this give twenty drops of chemical food every second day for another week, and pure water on the alternate days. Then begin again and repeat the two weeks' course; but with this exception: whenever a more or less severe fit occurs stop all other medicine and give as much bromide of potassium as will cover a sixpence, and twelve drops of glycerine in the water for the next two days. Then begin again with the aperient mixture, and go on as above.

Getting Yorkshires in Condition.

Beginner.—You must, in the first place, be on your guard against getting show birds too proud, or bringing them on too rapidly. As long as the birds keep quiet, healthy and active, and in good, sound condition, you may well be content to let well alone, and keep the birds on the usual stock diet, with plain Canary as a staple, until, say, a fortnight or three weeks before the advent of the show they are to appear at. For a week give a pinch of good summer rape every second day, and a pinch of maw on the alternate days, and twice during the week give a small piece of sponge cake slightly moistened with sherry. If there is another fortnight to elapse before the show, repeat this for another week, and during the last week prior to showing, give a small teaspoonful of rape every second day, and a small pinch of inga and maw on the alternate days, and also give the moistened sponge cake every second day, on the days when you are giving rape. On the last two or three days you may give a very small pinch of hemp, but you must be sparing with this, especially with birds which are already none too slenderly built. An ordinary size breeding cage is quite large enough to keep them in regularly, though a few weeks in a large flight does them good and helps to keep down their weight.

To Tell the Sex.

Geo. Sowerby.—As a beginner, your best means of judging the sex of a given bird is to hear it sing, and note that whilst singing the fore part of the neck between the beak and the breast swells out and throbs, and pulsates very plainly as the notes are produced. The external differences are too subtle for a novice to distinguish with much certainty. The cock is bolder and more defiant in bearing, has a fuller and bolder eye, and is better filled in between the lower abdomen and under-tail coverts. Some hens will make fair efforts at singing, but their performances are much more snatchy and broken. You should consult the illustrations and text describing the sexual differences in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," obtainable from the office of CAGE BIRDS at 7d., post free, which will also help you in many other ways.

Ventilating an Aviary.

Scottie.—Thanks, your last sketch is much more "understandable." But if the door faces South then you have transposed the East and West side. The side you have marked East is the West and vice versa—the West side being as you name in your letter 7ft. high. If you can manage to cut an oblong aperture through the boarded sides eighteen inches long, and six inches deep in the centre of the East and West wall, and within three inches of the top of each, cover them on both inside and outside with perforated zinc, and fit a sliding wooden shutter over each to use as required in enlarging or decreasing the aperture; it would form about the best means you could adopt. The floor being covered with tin will make it rather difficult to make an ingress in it, but if you can get over this, cut a similar aperture in the centre of the floor, and cover with strong perforated zinc which will both keep out vermin and bear walking over. If you cannot get over the difficulty of making these apertures the next best plan will be to bore a row of half-inch holes along the top of the East and West sides, at intervals of about four inches apart, and similar rows thirteen inches from the bottom of each side—i.e., just over the tin overlay. The first-named plan is much the better, as it gives you full control over the amount of ventilation admitted, which may be regulated to suit any prevailing conditions of temperature.

Colour Feeding Cinnamons.

E.W.—If your birds have already made any progress in shedding their feathers I would not advise you to risk altering the composition of your colour-feed now, or you will probably spoil the birds for exhibition altogether by bringing them out two different shades of colour. The red feed will do very nicely, but if you really wish to prepare a special feed, and the birds have not yet broken deeply into moult, you may do so by mixing four ounces of "paprika" pepper, and two of Natal with each 1 lb of tasteless red, well mixing and blending together with four ounces of soft sugar. If you prefer adding oil to the colour food an ounce of best salad oil may now be added, and again well blended together until all apparent trace of oil has disappeared.

Bird Fever.

"Bird Fever." It is quite possible for your three birds to have died from this plague, although the infection has not spread with the rapidity you expected It may be only awaiting more favourable conditions than those ruling at present to burst into flame, so to speak. Under these circumstances you cannot do better than get Dr. Clarke's handbook on the disease (7d., post free, from our managers), and study its contents well. It tells much more than is possible here There is practically no cure once the disease attacks a bird, and it would doubtless be the wisest course in the end to destroy any bird immediately it is unmistakably attacked, and cremate the body. Of course the cage and everything that has been in contact with the bird must be very thoroughly disinfected. For the present your best course will be to remove the two breeding cages in which the birds died, together with the birds that are in them to another room, where they will be quite isolated from your other birds. Keep the cages thickly strewn with sawdust, and clean out and burn it frequently. Observe the strictest cleanliness in all food and water, and cage appliances If the birds keep well for, say, a month, you may place them in clean, disinfected cages and return them to the bird-room. Then, if the cages vacated are worn ones, your best plan will be to burn them at once, as you would thus destroy the infection in its source Otherwise thoroughly overhaul and disinfect them by means which you will find set out in detail in the handbook mentioned above.

Stuck in the Moult.

A.G.R.—Your Canary has probably caught a chill which has stopped its moult prematurely Keep its cage in a fairly warm place where the heat is regular, and where it is quite free from draughts. See that it is also free from red-mites. If the usual Canary mixture, on which you say it is fed, consists of packet seeds, discontinue it, and feed as you will see advised to several others this week for a general diet. Instead of egg-food give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake three times a week, and well mix five drops of sherry in it each time. Give a spray of seedy chickweed or a few plantain stalks every second day, and on the alternate days a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half a dozen shreds of hay saffron in each two tablespoonfuls, well shaken together. Give this every day for the first three days, and every second day for a week after. On the alternate days give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. At the end of this week begin to give twenty drops of chemical food in the water daily, and continue this for a fortnight.

Lost the Power of the Feet.

Scottie.—Am afraid your bird is already beyond help. I should imagine it is in an overfed condition, and that this is the predisposing cause of its condition. Feed on a diet of plain Canary, and give separately half a teaspoonful of rape twice a week, and every second day a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry mixed in it. On the alternate days between the sponge cake give a spray of green-food. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and as much Epsom salts, every day for a week, as will cover a sixpence. After this give five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and twenty drops of chemical food on the alternate days for another week. You may then begin again and repeat the two weeks' treatment if it appears necessary.

Young in a Bad Way.

H.R.L.—There is something radically wrong in the management of these birds for them to be in such a condition. I have grave doubts of their recovery. Am inclined to think they are exposed to continual draughts in some way, and are probably also worried by red mites. Both these causes must be remedied before any treatment can be of use. Keep birds in a comfortable, but not overheated, temperature, which is not subject to great variations. Discontinue giving hemp, and add to your dietary a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry mixed in it every second day. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same amount of chlorate of potash daily for three days; after that twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, daily for a week, and every second day for another fortnight, or as long as it appears necessary. After the first fortnight you may give the first-named aperient mixture on the alternating days, with advantage. Do not give cold baths at present.

Brevities.

Yorkshire Not Moulting (J. T.).—Treat bird as advised to "A.G.R." Your feeding is not all that could be desired; vary it by making the staple mixture to consist of three parts Canary to one part rape. Give the egg-food, or a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake twice, half a teaspoonful of maw seed twice, and a spray of green-food three times a week. Alternate these items so that a different one is given each day. Give a tepid bath three or four times a week in mild weather.

Missed Reply? (Scottie).—I'm afraid it is a temporary loss of memory which makes you say you wrote me three weeks ago for advice and have had no reply. I remember your query distinctly, and replied to it with a request for certain other particulars which you promptly sent on; so how can you reconcile this? Your second letter, too, was duly replied to, but was crowded out last week.

Canary seed samples (W. W.).—No. 1 of poor quality and flavour, very small; the number of damaged grains suggests bad storage or damage by mice. No. 2 just passing fair in quality and flavour, but of small size; contains a large proportion of seed of various weeds. The price naturally varies in different localities; but for feeding valuable stock either sample is dear at any price.

Fish tailed Border (Mablue).—The cause of the tail spreading is probably a natural defect, which would tell against it in competition. I don't suppose the arrangement of perches has anything to do with it. Some birds are rather slack in feather for a short time after moulting, so it is possible your bird's defect may arise thus, in which case the defect will disappear naturally as the bird braces itself up. Give it four drops of tincture of steel every other day for a week to help it to get tight in feather.

Featherless Bullie.

R.N.S.T.—Thanks for particulars as to food. I don't think the latter sufficiently nutritious to rear any bird properly. Try giving for two or three weeks a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily, and served in a glass or pot vessel only. Or if the Bullie will still eat soft food (either egg-bread, or an insectavorous mixture such as is used for small softbills), give the chemical food on alternate days in this (seven or eight spots in a teaspoonful); plain water, of course, when doing so. Dandelion leaves are not very useful just now. You had far better offer the Bullie ripe Blackberries, haw-berries, privet-berries (when ready), with seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, plantain, dock, thistle-heads, and the like. You ask whether hard-heads are good for this bird, and the answer is yes. Give the bird a nourishing seed-mixture, too—some maw and cracked sunflower every day.

Concerning Some Mules.

Tud It is really practically impossible to glean from any written description an accurate estimate of the value of dark Mules for exhibition purposes. The birds need to be seen. For instance, what you term a "large bird," I myself might think but of average size. It all depends on the point of view, and you yourself may never have seen any of the "giants" which secure the leading prizes at our chief shows. This reminds me, too, that the best way for anyone to arrive at an estimate of the value of any bird for exhibition purposes, is to visit a good show, and look over the specimens there on view. Shinness (or "Yorkshire type") is certainly not a desirable characteristic in a dark Greenfinch Mule, though a bird on the slim side might get well among the prizes if of exceptional colour—a jonque—and quality of feather. The ideal bird is one taking after the Greenfinch in build; stout and chubby in body, and with a very bold head. A six-pointed Goldfinch Mule is a grand exhibition bird, providing it possesses size and colour, and the markings do not "run" (the eyes being a ticklish spot) and are not over-heavy. A young Mule (such as yours is), would have an "orange-coloured" blaze. In keen competition this would, of course, tell against him. He will improve much in colour and size with the next moult, when you should colour-feed him. A very pale blue is a splendid colour for the show-cage (inside and wires).

Birds Which Will Not Moult.

Lark Singer.—Skylarks are not easy birds to moult; that is to say, they often cannot be got to break into moult. Once they commence casting their feathers, they generally get through alright, providing they are being adequately fed. They seem birds, however, on which the failure to moult has little effect, for I have known many go from one autumn to the next in the same "old clothes," as it were, without any diminution of song power or apparent effect on the health. There are many dodges which will "strike" a bird (plunge it into moult), one of the best-known being a change of temperature. Thus, if a bird used to a warmed living-room is left out of doors during one or two cool days and nights (some favour wet nights), he seldom fails to drop into moult. The reverse, of course, also holds good, that is to say, if a bird from outdoors is put into a warmed room, the same result is attained. Some go to the extent of covering up the cages with a dark cloth, keeping this on day and night until the plumage is cast; or the cage is put in a dimly-lighted corner of a warm room, on a shelf (or nail) well up towards the ceiling; or it is put into the cupboard which is found at side of the fireplace in the living-room of so many homes. Out-and-out the surest and best method of dealing with cases of "stuck in the moult," and failure to moult, is, however (in my own opinion), by means of a "steam bath." This is very simply contrived. Impedimenta: A smallish bucket, a kettle of very hot water, a narrow piece of board, a small cage, all wire at top, and a heavy towel (one of the "Turkish" brand). Fill the bucket about two-thirds full of the very hot water; place the board across the top of the bucket; on the board place the cage (the bird, of course, being inside); over the whole drape the towel, and leave for about fifteen minutes. The bird must afterwards be "cooled down" gradually (keep a light cover on the cage) and draughts be carefully avoided. One "bath" is invariably sufficient to cause the plumage to be freely dropped. Its use will often save a bird's life.

About a Raven.

A.P.—A Raven makes a highly interesting and intelligent pet, providing one has proper convenience for keeping it. I do not advise you to try keeping it in a cage; a decent-sized aviary would be the only suitable "cage." For the best plan would be to clip its wing flights, and let it have the run of the garden, as you yourself suggest. I presume the bird could not get through the boundary hedges, or walls, or whatever they may be. A good shelter should be arranged in one corner, provided with a stout perch or two, and under this the food could be placed. There should be also a large pan of water. Plenty of flesh-food must be included in the bird's dietary, which should, broadly speaking, be similar to that advised an inquirer last week concerning Magpies. You will need to be careful about permitting him to get at close quarters with other birds, especially smaller and weaker brethren. He should soon get to know and take an interest in you (as his "feeder"). Down in Devonshire climatic conditions are not likely to trouble him.

Mealworms and Gentles.

Luscinia.—To tell you the truth, I really don't know "how many mealworms should be given a caged Nightingale daily." I never keep count. I have no doubt I could keep a Gale perfectly healthy without a single mealworm a day, and, on the other hand, just as healthy were I to give forty. The latitude in this matter (providing the stock food is really good) is really surprising. It also depends, too, whether other live-foods (gentles, for instance), are being provided The old-fashioned text books which prescribe so much of this and so much of the other, with "three mealworms daily," only move me to smiling. I would back one of the Nightingales I have at present to eat 20 mealworms, all fat and prime, at one "sitting down," and still look longingly for more. Only the other evening I was talking to an esteemed fancier friend of mine, and was astonished to hear him say that each of his Gales consumed over three teaspoonfuls of stock food daily. Now my own cat hardly half that quantity. But when he went on to say that his birds only had three mealworms a day each, the matter was explained; my own get quite three to four times that quantity, to say nothing of other live foods. They will show you how wide a latitude there can be in the giving of live food to Nightingales—of course, I am speaking of birds well on ordinary food. Which of us gets the longer period of song, and the stoutest singers, I wonder? The above remarks apply equally to gentles, though I never give these really freely to my birds. "Scouring," means freeing them from the offensive slime and smell attaching to them when first taken from the ollal. To put them in dry sand for a few days is about the best thing though a better is to buy them ready scoured afterwards transferring them to dry bran for a day or two before giving to the birds. Keep them (the "stock pot") in a cool, dry dark place.

A Muling Failure.

J.E.H It is really difficult to advise you. You seem to have struck up against particularly hard luck during your first season. Next year all may go along in just the reverse way. I don't think the eggs from the linnet were actually fertile—the fact that you found the yolk "stuck in a mass at one end" does not prove it, anyway. I could not venture an opinion as to the age of the hen. That she went about the house keeping business quietly and methodically does not necessarily brand her as "very old." Neither is it true that a singing hen is necessarily no good for breeding purposes. On the contrary, I have personally had several singing hens that were the best of breeders. The behaviour of your young hens is puzzling; strange neither should lay an egg or show a sign of nesting. True, some hens absolutely will not look at a British bird as a husband. I've had some, so I know, as the song says. If you winter all the birds together, I don't think you could go far wrong in giving them another chance next spring. Your feeding seems all right, so far as seeds go (I frequently dealt with this during the season just over), but you make no mention of dandelion leaves and seed, seeding chickweed, shepherd's purse, etc., invaluable things for muling couples.

Brevities.

A Couple (Mixed Lot).—1. In a place like yours, the best plan is to keep to one kind of hen, and in your case I should think hen Bullies would be best. It is always doubtful, as no doubt you know, whether any hen British bird will successfully rear her young in captivity. 2, I believe that a policeman is entitled to demand to look over a "catch," on the ground that he suspects protected birds to have been caught. State your question more fully, and address it to our legal department.

A Jackdaw (Jacko).—I do not know that there are any particular sexual distinctions in the plumage of Jackdaws. The hen is a shade the smaller, and less bright and lustrous in the black of the body, and "clean" in the grey of the neck. Why not ask those who told you it was a hen, how they arrive at this conclusion? In young birds (before moulting), I should say it is quite impossible to tell the sexes. I don't see why a hen should not turn out quite as amusing as a cock bird. A friend of mine has an undoubted hen Magpie, and she talks and mimics equal to any male I have heard.

Goldfinches in Suffolk (W.C.)—I believe the Goldfinch is protected all the year round all over Suffolk. In the adjoining county of Essex, however, it is not.

Lark's Song (Anxious).—Your bird will never get out of the "Irish" song it does—that is, imitating Sparrows, etc.—seeing that it has been doing it for years. It is more likely to get worse. Young Larks are very prone to pick up these wretched false notes, and need bringing up strictly under other good singing birds. In buying another, I should choose a steady (kind) old bird. If this did a good song, you could next year bring up some youngsters under him. You must please yourself about giving the other one its liberty.

A Young Goldfinch (J. Thomas).—Upon my word. I never before heard of anyone cutting a piece from off a Goldfinch's tongue. How on earth could doing this help him to crack hemp-seed? The marvel is that the Greypate still lives. I should like to serve the same the "fancier" who persuaded you to let him do it. Give the bird soaked seed for a time, with plenty of thistles, dandelion, maw and niger seeds in addition. It needs dissolved in the drinking water (fresh daily) a piece of citrate of iron the size of a small pea. Quantity of water, two tablespoonfuls.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Grey Parrot Not Talking.

Cardiff.—I presume you are dieting the bird as regularly advised in this column; if not do so (see recent issues). Keep the bird in your midst, where it will hear plenty of conversation; at the same time if it is not properly tamed it must not be in such close contact with you as to unduly scare it. Talk to it and constantly repeat to it such short phrases and words as you wish it to speak. Till you can get rid of the bird's being scared at your presence it will not talk much. It certainly should talk and I know very few Greys that do not. The only way to train them is by patience and kindness, on the lines indicated above.

Green Parrot Yawning.

H. C.—The yawning rather points to indigestion, but of this I cannot form any definite conclusion, as you give no idea of how you have been treating the bird. However, give 3 or 4 doses of Dinneford's Magnesia with 2 or 3 days between each—one teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water, nothing else to drink being given during the day. At the same time you must not continue the aperient if the voidings become watery loose. When not giving the aperient make the drinking-water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this for a month at least. The reaching and trying to vomit is so far as I can gather merely the natural habit of bringing the half-digested food up from the crop and enjoying it over again. Diet: Seed mixture—Canary seed, oats, wheat, dari and hemp, 2 parts each of Canary and oats and 1 part each of the others; well mix and always keep a supply in the cage. It must have regular supplies of grit, cuttlefish and water as above. Also give at intervals to vary the diet, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and a little greenfood, such as green peas, lettuce and any wholesome salad according to season. A few sunflower seeds may be given occasionally as a treat. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, buttered bread, etc., or any kind of animal food whatever. Give it plenty of fresh air, but preserve it from draught.

Budgerigars Not Breeding.

No Name.—Just leave the birds to take their own course; it is quite possible you may yet have a nest this year. But your hen is quite young enough yet and it will be all the better for her and also for her progeny if she does not nest till next season. Do not give them any sunflower seed and while they are not breeding only supply oats about twice a week. You make no mention of green food; so long as it can be procured free from frost they should have as much seeding grass (grass in flower) as they will eat. When this fails a little fresh lettuce or a piece of apple to nibble makes a good substitute. Keep the birds out of draught; at the same time they are hardy creatures, and should get all the fresh air possible. The Canaries being in view will not hinder the Budgerigars' nesting arrangements. You would find "Budgerigars and Cockateels," 6d. post free, from CAGE BIRDS office, very helpful.

Birds for an Aviary Cage.

S. G.—I presume you only want a few brightly coloured pets. You would find the following very handsome species of much interest, and though not songsters as we speak of Roller Canaries, for instance, yet keep up an almost continuous low and sweet melody. Pairs of Common Avadavats, Green Avadavats, Zebra Waxbills, St. Helena Waxbills, Orange cheek Waxbills; and cocks only of Grey and Green Singing Finches. Supply Canary, white and spray millet and green food (such as grounsel, seeding grass, little fresh lettuce, etc.), according to season; keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage, and when procurable give them a spray of some non poisonous foliage that is covered with green fly. There are occasional losses with new purchases of Foreign Birds, but the lovely little creatures named above are very hardy, and providing you keep them free from draught, should thrive and do well in the temperature of any ordinary living-room. I should advise you to fix up two or three cocoa-nut shells, which the birds will use as shelters.

Long-tailed Grassfinch.

W. R. White.—(1) The principal body colouring is fawn, lighter underneath, but merging into Vandyke-brown on the wings and rump; head silver grey; the tail is black and long and pointed; vent and under-tail coverts white; each sex is adorned with a black gorge and a band of similar colour across the base of the abdomen; beak, legs and feet red. The sexes are practically alike as to plumage, but the head of the female is usually not so broad as that of the male, and the silver-grey not so pure a hue. If you see a number together they can usually be picked out by their demeanour one to the other and the quaint, long drawn out note of the male. (2) Canary seed, white and spray millet, oats and paddy rice (rice in the husk), greenfood, such as lettuce, grass in flower, groundsel heads, etc., cuttlefish and grit. A roomy box cage is the best type, and if this gives room for exercise, artificial heat will not be necessary. (3) I have a male in my garden aviary which has been out of doors for five years, and is at the present time in exhibition condition. They are being advertised at the present time at 10/- per pair. Furnish your cages with twiggy branches for perches. Give them a 3ft. cage, and they will winter in your out-door birdroom.

What Birds are They?

"Thank you."—Sorry to note you lost your Pintails, but this is not a robust species till well established, and once Finches become troubled with growths round the beak their recovery is very doubtful. I presume it is the Chestnut-headed Bunting that is meant. I have never kept this species, and though I have with Finches, Mannikins, Waxbills, etc., five species of Bnuting in my out-door aviary, yet I should hesitate to mix them with Finches, Waxbills, etc, say within the limits of a C.P. aviary cage. They are about the size of an English Chaffinch, and require much the same treatment—mixed seeds, such as Canary, millet, rape, hemp, oats, paddy rice, green-food, few ants' eggs and an occasional meal-worm (a couple per bird daily) will certainly help to keep them robust and fit). I certainly advise you to give them these, though they will exist for a good period with any animal food. I have kept Aurora Finches with Waxbills in the out-door aviary, but should not attempt to do so in a cage. You would find my booklet "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1 post free from this office, very helpful.

Age and Sex of Parrot.

Constant Reader.—An aged bird of almost any species may be told by its heavily scaled (almost horny) legs and feet. An immature bird may be told by the iris of the eye, which is silver-grey in a young bird, changing to pale yellow as it becomes adult. The naked skin round the eye is of a round shape at the back of the eye in the female; in the male it is extended to a somewhat pear-shaped point. I am not yet convinced that this distinction is constant; nevertheless, I have never come across a male with the bare skin of the face of a round shape behind the eye. The head of the female is also rounder and smaller than that of the male, which will be seen to be comparatively flat, when an undoubted pair are available for comparison. To sum up, a large-headed, flat-crowned bird, with bare skin on the face, and pear-shaped behind the eye, is an almost certain male. Of course in a very young bird these characteristics would be much less distinct and consequently the picking out of the sexes is a very difficult matter.

Outdoor Aviary Queries.

Devonian.—Twenty-four such as Canaries, etc., not for breeding, and those you name would agree well together, providing you have two or three seed hoppers and two water vessels, and the aviary is well furnished all round the back and ends with twiggy branches (pea and bean sticks answer well). Re the Budgerigar Aviary I think two pairs would be better for the start, though it would accommodate three pairs; but this would leave it rather crowded when young were about and under the circumstances I advise either all greens or all yellows, each pair to be procured from a different source; then your young birds from the respective pairs will be unrelated. You will require double the number of husks that you have pairs of birds. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatels," 7d., both post free from this office, very helpful.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (L.R.T.).—Disease of liver, anæmia, inflammation of lungs. This state of things may be hereditary or infectious. Add half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food to two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Green-food should not be given to youngsters in the flight cages.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

No Reply (J. Edwards).—As nothing seems to have been said about any term of approval, we do not see that you have any legal redress. The moral, of course, is that when dealing with strangers, the purchase money should be deposited with us, and a satisfactory term of approval arranged. We are continually impressing this advice upon readers.

Wandsworth and District F.S. (W. Summers).—Your notice of meeting on October 1st, does not reach us in time to be of use. Obviously it would serve no purpose in our issue dated October 3rd.

Photo of Brambling (W. B. Jepson).—This photograph, we regret to say, is not suitable for reproduction in our columns. The contrast 'twixt bird and background needs to be very pronounced, not the one merging into the other.

The Norwich Plainhead (A. H. C. Legg).—We are much obliged to you for your kind letter, and will see if we can get an article concerning the question you mention. By-the-way, we should be glad if you would send your notes on larger sheets of paper; small slips are so apt to get lost at the printers. Accept our heartiest thanks for the many thoughtful deeds undertaken on behalf of CAGE BIRDS. We appreciate kindnesses of this description.

Head Holes (Wire Front).—Any cage-maker would supply them, if you send on a pattern. You should have no difficulty in getting them made in your own town. In fact you could make them yourself quite easily with a pair of pliers and a piece of hardwood to bend to wire round.

Linnets, Etc. (F. F. Amos).—You will find full information on Linnets in Part 1 (Hardbills) of the "British Bird Manual," price 1s. 1d., post free, from this office. We hope to be publishing, very shortly, a book dealing with the other matter you name.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW SOCIETY FOR KEITH (N.B.).

SIR, Will you kindly announce in your valuable paper that a Cage Bird Society is being formed in Keith? This is the first society of its kind north of Aberdeen. The first show will probably be held about the beginning of December.

DAVID D. MILNE.

60, Regent street, Keith, N.B.

WILL MULES BREED?

SIR, Seeing a letter headed "Will Mules Breed," in the correspondence columns of the 26th September, and being interested in same, I would like to ask "Mongrel" if he is really sure that it was a Mule the hen Canary was put beside? It seems to me that there must be a mistake somewhere. If not, however, I for one will be very pleased to welcome a "new breed of feathers" on the show bench. So get your friend to trot one out, "Mongrel," and let us have a look at it. Or if you will give your address (as you say they can be seen) some of the fanciers round here, Falkirk, will be pleased to give you a call. What say you, Willie Clubb? I hope "A Mongrel" will oblige, as it has all along been strongly denied that any Mule will breed.

T. R. WALLACE.

AFFAIRS AT BARNSLEY.

SIR,—For a number of years now the Society in Barnsley has had hard work to keep in existence, though it has not been a hard matter to find the cause for same. It has been brought about by so-called fanciers running from one member to another and "back-biting" those who have tried to keep the Society going. At the present time we have 30 good members who have every confidence in our president, Mr. W. H. Lindley, of Wombwell, doing that which is right, and I take this opportunty to thank him for his help and for the advice which he has always been willing to give to those that need it. My reason for writing is because someone has been trying to cause friction between Mr. Lindley and the Barnsley Society. But let me tell them that we have not only got a bit more sense, but we have got a bit more thick-skinned since we started in July last. I appealed through your paper then to these so-called fanciers to come and join us and help make the society a success. But seeing that they will not, let me ask them to at least leave the Barnsley Society and its president alone, then we shall be able to work out our own salvation, and the Barnsley Society will, as I have said before, become one of the best in Yorkshire.

ED. CARLISLE.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF IRELAND.

SIR,—The following occurs in my letter which appears in this day's issue of CAGE BIRDS:— . . . "and if holding meetings in a fully-licensed hotel is not a violation, etc." I have been informed that the hotel in question is not fully licensed, and I desire to correct my mistake at the earliest opportunity. I also desire to correct a printer's error. What I intended to convey when writing of Mr. Birse's action was that he had brought home the voting papers, "and looked over them, out of, as he said, 'mere curiosity.'" I am made to say, however, owing to the second parenthesis being misplaced, that Mr. Birse brought home the voting papers out of mere curiosity.

J. P. ROONEY.

SIR,—The letter appearing in last week's issue of your journal over the signatures of Messrs. Carroll and Orr call for an answer, otherwise I had no intention of continuing the controversy. Firstly, I would suggest to those gentlemen that in future they should read my letter they intend replying to before they attach their signaures thereto. I stated that the six signatures should read as two—not "one," as they would have me say. Secondly, I am at a loss to know how they claim to challenge the accuracy of my statement, as I confined myself to the Y.C.C. meetings in my letter, and I have been on the committee since 1904. Messrs. Carroll and Orr have never been on the committee. Where, therefore, does their knowledge come from? Mr. Carroll exhibited two birds in the novice classes last year; Mr. Orr, I think, has never exhibited a bird at our show—certainly none last year. So much for new blood. The letter further says: "It was an act of generosity on their part (Messrs. Sholedice, etc.) to stand-by for the purpose of infusing new blood." Perhaps; but I doubt it. If when the votes were first counted it had been announced that there had been a tie, we should never have had those resignations. No, the party were too hasty. The result of the poll was declared Friday, September 12, with Devitt elected. Next day the resignations were furnished to CAGE BIRDS, so that the announcement would appear on the same day as we were holding the adjourned meeting. But in the meantime (as pointed out in the able letter from Mr. Rooney) the new secretary had "looked over" the voting papers out of "curiosity," and had made his discovery. How some people must have wished they had never sent in their resignations: such heroism wasted! So much for acts of generosity. Now to another matter: Messrs. Carroll and Orr's co-option was, and is, illegal according to rules; also any vote recorded for those gentlemen was due to the fact that their names appear on the syndicate ticket, and they polled, I think, ten and seven votes respectively. I am sorry for treading on their dignity and self-respect so much as to have got them also to resign.

RICHARD F. DUIGENAN, Hon. Treasurer.

(A letter from Mr. Gratton Bray has had to be held over until next week.)

SOME INTERESTING OBSERVATIONS ON WILD BIRDS.

SIR,—Whilst spending a holiday recently on the South Coast, I have had an opportunity of watching some of the birds, and was very struck with the absence of the members of the Chat family on the furze which covers many of the Downs in the locality of the Dyke, near Brighton. The country appears to be ideal for these birds, but I could count all I saw of the Wheatears and Whinchats on the fingers of one hand. On some occasions about the same time of the year I have seen Wheatears by the score in the same places. The Stonechat is usually associated with heaths, etc., where furze abounds, but my friend, Mr. Walter Swaysland, of Brighton, pointed out to me the spot where he had found a Stonechat's nest at Portslade. It was on a small stretch of railway embankment at Portslade Station, within 3 yards of the metals where railway trucks are loaded daily and within 3 or 4 yards of the public roadway. There is not a vestige of furze near, and the only bush is a small hawthorn about 3 feet high. The spot at the present is covered with old thistles and dock weeds, and is about the last place one would expect to find a Stonechat rearing a breod. Another unusual sight to me, also to Mr. Swaysland, was a flock of Martins and Swallows settling and feeding among the furrows of a ploughed field with Wagtails, Pipits, etc. Has any other reader noticed Swallows in ploughed fields?

CAGE BIRD UNION DISTRICT COMPETITIONS.

SIR,—The Executive Council of the Union have decided to offer medals for competition in each of the districts of the Union, to be won this season, and I shall be glad if you will give publicity to the following short particulars of same. Two or three medals to be competed for in each of the twelve districts, for most points gained at any four selected shows held under C.B.U. rules. Every competitor may select any four shows he pleases in his district, at which he wishes his points to count; the points gained at these four shows only to count. A competitor may show as many birds as he pleases, but only the points gained by the four highest birds shown by him at each of the four shows shall count. The aggregate points gained at the four selected shows shall be his points for the season. Any variety of cage-birds may be exhibited—Canaries, Hybrids, British or foreign. Points to count according to the rules of the show. In case of a tie the most number of 1st prizes to take precedence; in case of further tie, the most number of 2nd prizes, and so on. The competition may commence immediately, but competitors must notify me, at least 7 days before the advertised date for closing entries, at which shows they intend their exhibits to count points. The four shows need not be notified all together. The competition is open to all members of affiliated societies, and any affiliated or licensed shows may be selected for the competition. I am sending particulars of the competition to all secretaries of C.B.U. shows.

Sec. C.B.U. G. W. F. LYTHGOE.

SKELMANTHORPE SHOW.

SIR,—I see in last week's CAGE BIRDS that "Straight 'Un" is advising the fanciers in Bradford to wait another week before sending their birds out for show, as ours at Skelmanthorpe is "rather a distance from that centre," and at the same time giving them an invitation to a washing exhibition at Wibsey. Sir, I should like to be candid with "Straight 'Un," for I think that he has not done a very gentlemanly thing writing as he did just prior to our show. We can't even reply to him before our show is upon us, and the words he has written will certainly have some influence on some people, and that means a few less entries for our show. I think the least that he could have done, seeing that we are all under one Union, was to have kept quiet, even if they are a little afraid of us. Perhaps ours does look a distance away for people who dare not leave "the centre" and go to another show. We always dispatch birds so that they may arrive home the same night, and that is something that we ourselves are not treated to by the others; for at nearly every show we have birds on road too late for our last train down at 10 p.m. That means a walk of three miles on Sunday morning, for we have no Sunday train service here. I hope show secretaries will dispatch our birds off a little sooner in future than they have usually done.

H. KAYE, Assistant Secretary of the Skelmanthorpe C.B.S.

Mr. John Lodge, the secretary of the Skelmanthorpe Society, writes us to the same purpose as Mr. Kaye. We are surprised, and at the same time exceedingly sorry, that they should consider our correspondent "Straight 'Un" intended to in any way prejudice the success of Skelmanthorpe show, and had we thought his paragraph capable of bearing any such construction, it certainly would have found no place in our columns. We venture to think, however, that Messrs. Lodge and Kaye read into "Straight 'Un's" words a meaning they were never intended to convey; and we are confirmed in our opinion by a sentence which appears in that contributor's column this week. What "Straight 'Un" wrote last week was this:—(1) "The fanciers of the Bradford district will have to wait another seven days for a show near home, the first Yorkshire Union fixture, viz., Skelmanthorpe, being rather a distance away from that centre." (2) "Now, ye novices who want a few hints on this subject (washing of birds), you will do well to attend. The Wibsey fanciers will give you a hearty welcome." We find it difficult to construe the first sentence into advice not to enter birds at Skelmanthorpe show, or the second (appearing in an entirely distinct paragraph) into an invitation to attend Wibsey's washing exhibition instead. We regret Messrs. Kaye and Lodge should view them in this light.—EDITOR.

BIRDCATCHING, AND THE PERSECUTION OF BIRD-CATCHERS.

SIR,—Being a bird-catcher myself, I congratulate Mr. G. Fenn on his pluck. I should like to know where the "roughs" come in. I am a man with a family to keep. I work on drains, buildings, and in the garden. When unable to follow this, am I to see my little ones starve? No, not while I see a shilling at bird-catching. I should myself like to see it compulsory to take out a licence for catching, and a bird-catchers' and dealers' protection society formed. As for "close seasons," there are none, not if seen into—look on a gun licence and see. I am a large Mule-breeder, and a net maker, as far as my funds will go, and for anyone to think that a bird-catcher is a lazy man is far from the truth. Let him get my address from CAGE BIRDS, and he shall have the job to carry my pack for me (about 40lbs.) nine miles there and back.

C. B.

SIR,—I was greatly pleased to read "Bird Lover's" letter in your issue of August 29, and also wish to congratulate Mr. Fenn on the stand he has made against the overbearing tactics of the police and R.S.P.C.A. Doubtless many of your readers will remember how I opened a correspondence in your columns some four years ago on this subject, but the majority of your readers did not trouble themselves on the matter, and now that things have gone from bad to worse, perhaps it is not too much to hope that they are waking up. Why not, as "Bird Lover" suggests, let bird-catching be a licensed sport, the same as many others? Neither amateur nor professional would grumble at a small fee per annum for the privilege of being allowed to pursue their sport in peace, and it would, I hope, put an end to these abominable and malicious prosecutions, which are, I consider, a disgrace. It is the old story, I am afraid, "one law for the rich and another for the poor." As "Bird Lover" and others state, the persons who execute this law are ignorant; but why should the bird-catcher be made to suffer for this ignorance? Cannot the C.B.U. take this matter up and do its best to have the law altered? I would suggest the following, viz., that the close season be one period for all counties and districts; that during the open season it should be lawful to take any manner of birds; that, in a case of a prosecution by the R.S.P.C.A. for cruelty in bracing birds, that the R.S.P.C.A. shall be compelled to prove cruelty—not to be able to do as now, simply state that the birds were braced, to secure a conviction. Now, let professionals and amateurs alike combine to have this abominable law altered—let us have no more confiscation and heavy fines, but a proper close and open season (only not "open" as it is now), and above all things, let us have, if we can, a Bird-catchers' Protection Society which can fight the R.S.P.C.A. and others to secure justice for the bird-catcher. I, for one, will willingly subscribe what little I can towards such an end.

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—Being much interested in the correspondence going on re "When is a clear not a clear?" I would like to give my views. I think we have much to thank Mr. Weston for, in opening up same. I am at one with that gentleman when he says that a tick must be visible to the eye before he will pass same as a tick. I can't see how a bird that is clear to the eye when it is passing from spar to spar can be exhibited as ticked. Mind you, I say to the eye, not to the hands or mouth, of which you have a nice sketch in this week's CAGE BIRDS, showing the result of handling and blowing. Why, some of our judges (old'uns especially) would need an extra steward along with them to keep "puffing and blowing" for them; everyone has not a pair of lungs like a pair of fanners. I would like to ask why a bird that is all clear to the eye, but has a dark mark on the upper mandible (a sure mark of green blood) and which is visible to the eye, should be allowed to compete in clear classes and a bird that is all clear to the eye on the surface when in its show-cage but with dark underflue kept out? Sir, I think that is doing an injustice. I may say that I have won in a clear yellow class with a bird marked on beak. That is the reason I am sending this note, and I hope to hear from some experienced brother fanciers, as it is by exchange of views that we keep our hobby going. So send your views along respecting dark beaks.

T. R. WALLACE.

(We have received a long letter from Mr. Reid, in reply to Mr. Woollard, which will appear next week.)

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

BRADFORD City's entries did not quite come up to the standard of the last one or two shows. Many members were complaining that they had not above one or two thoroughly fit to bring out. Bradford East had over 100 birds staged, and here the members appeared to be fairly early, a good lot of birds being in grand trim. Many fanciers turned up here to see the new staging being tried, with a view to its adoption at the open show; that is, to have the birds on high tables, so they can be seen without so much of the handling of the cages necessary when they are staged too low. Without doubt the birds will benefit by it. This staging, though new about the Bradford district, is in vogue at some of the large shows in other districts, and where societies have to provide their own trestles and tabling it would perhaps be wise to inspect the same before ordering. Bradford West and Gt. Horton Good Intent were also holding shows, and at each place some nice birds were staged, but the cry of "not ready" was heard in all directions.

THE Green Canary Association has issued the list of shows to be held under its patronage. These include two Yorkshire fixtures, viz., Leeds and Bradford West, both of which are held in the latter part of November, so that Yorkshiremen will have a chance to see the Green Canaries at their best. The G.C.A., like the Yorkshire Specialist Clubs, do not begin their competitions until well into October, therefore the birds get into good trim before the fight for the trophies begins in earnest. The Yorkshire Union trophies and prizes, however, begin at the first show, held to-day (Saturday), at Skelmanthorpe, where we hope to see a good turn-out both of birds and fanciers, and they then run through the whole season.

THE SHOWS.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

First annual exhibition of young Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries held in the Drill Hall, 30, Grindlay Street, Edinburgh, on September 26th. The weather conditions were most unfavourable, rain falling in torrents for the greater part of the day. Fortunately this did not deter the cream of the Scotch Fancy from turning out with their entries, which numbered 351. The society have a membership numbering 180, and are still adding to their numbers. The old Scottish Metropolitan had reached a stage when it was found necessary that some action be taken to put the association on more up-to-date and modern lines. The present association is the outcome of that feeling, and judging from the large response both in membership and entries the steps taken have met with general approval. All the members have worked together with one aim in view, viz., to make this their first show, the success it proved. The office-bearers are:—Hon. Sec. and Treas., Mr J. R. Meikle; acting committee, Messrs. J. Dalgleish, J. M'Lennan, and A Paterson; auditors, Messrs. G. C. T Hope, M Petrie and J. P. Thomson. The judges for the Scotch Fancies were: Messrs. D. Black (Govan), T. Braid (Kirkcaldy), D. Low (Dundee), and A. Nisbet (Galston); for Belgians, Mr. J. Kean (Edinburgh). There were 10 classes, 8 for Scotch Fancy, and two for Belgians. Every credit is due to the secretary, Mr. J. R. Meikle, and his able band of workers for the capital arrangements made for the staging of the exhibits, and for the provision made for fanciers and the general public, who patronised the show with their presence and exhibits. Many well-known faces were seen, notably Messrs. J. Smith (Coatbridge), Ronaldson (Belfast), Thornton (Drysdale), and J. B. Kerr, and we were also glad to see Mr. Harry Dougall, who is looked upon as one of the oldest fanciers in Scotland. There was grand quality in the Scotch Fancies in the different classes, the cream of this season's breeding being out. The Derby winner (cup and gold badge), was found in Miss Brown's Buff Pied hen which was first in its class recently at Glasgow, and runner up for the Glasgow cup. It was in the pink of condition to-day. The runner-up was Mr. Wm. Allans (Edinboro.), with a Buff cock, which was first in its class, the Glasgow Derby winner, belonging to Mr. M'Lennan, being to-day placed second. The Buff Pied hen, cup winner of Miss Brown's, after this show becomes the property of Mr. W. Thornton. The blue ribbon in the Belgian class was won by that well known breeder of Belgians, Mr. James Greig (Aberdeen), with a Yell cock, a perfect gem, in lovely condition, and looking a cup winner in every feather. The runner-up was a Buff Hen belonging to Geo. C. T. Hope (Edinboro.), a neat, compact hen, nicely staged. The judges in the Scotch Fancy sections had a difficult task set them, the exhibits being all round of more than ordinary merit. The same remark applies to the Belgian section. The awards throughout met with general approval. The special silver cups were the gift of Mr. Thomas Kay (Edinboro.), for the best young Scotch Fancy.

Philip. 8, Stavert.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite, it kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

WELLINGBOROUGH.

The fifth annual exhibition was held on September 30th and October 1st in the Central Hall—an ideal place for a cage bird show. We were sorry to find on entering the building that the entries had not come up to the committee's expectations. This no doubt may be chiefly accounted for by the fact that very few birds are yet well enough through the moult to allow of their being exhibited; indeed, the great majority of them are as yet only about half-way through. Some few years ago there was a certain amount of "paper grumbling" because the brothers Howe exhibited at Wellingborough, and as a natural consequence captured the cream of the prizes. To meet this difficulty the committee this year wisely appointed them as judges in their respective classes, Mr. H. J. adjudicating upon the Britishers, and Mr. F. Howe upon the Foreigners, whilst Mr. W. Vardy awarded the prizes in the Canary classes. The Canary section was fairly well filled, only one or two of the classes being cancelled. But many of the British classes, including the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Greenfinch, and several others, had the "blue pencil" put through them, notwithstanding the fact that 21s. prize money per class was offered by the committee for an entry fee of 1s. 6d. Needless to say, the committee all being genuine fanciers, the exhibits were well catered for, and the officials were ably led by the hon. secretary, Mr. W. Howe, who is deserving of great credit for his able management of affairs. Our only regret, therefore, was that they were not favoured with a bumping entry. We noticed one bird had escaped (a Redpoll), and was flying gaily about the hall, and on examining his cage found that the wires were wide enough for a Thrush's cage! The owner will certainly be lucky if he gets him home again safe and sound. The special prizes were awarded as follows:—Sandiford's cup for hottest bird was won by Mr. W. H. Howe; Hyde's special by Mr. Bateman; the L. and P.O.S. silver medal by Mr. Midgley; and their bronze medal by Mr. W. H. Howe.

SHOWS.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON C.B.S.

The South West London Cage Bird Society enters expressly for its own members, and all benefits arrived from its yearly subscription, and the specials given by donors, are for the encouragement of breeders and exhibitors in the society. Those wishing to join and to exhibit at the Autumn show of November 7th, must send their names and addresses for proposal, not later than October 8th. Write for rules and balance sheet, to LILLEY, secretary, 7, Mysore Road, Lavender Hill, London.—(Advt.)

KILSYTH F.A.

President Hardie occupied the chair at the meeting held on Sept. 19th. The Border Fancy Club, it was reported, had granted its patronage and medal; that the Scottish Cage Club was to hold one of its competitions for Roberts Trophy here on Dec. 19th; and that the Scottish B.F. and M.C. had granted three medals. Satisfaction was expressed with the result of the applications. Classification was revised, a few alterations of minor importance made, and a class for Hen Finch added.—A. D. DUNCAN, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BELFAST N.C. AND Y.C.C.

Usual monthly meeting held in the Avenue Hall, Garfield-street, on Sept. 5th, the president, Mr. Adams, in the chair. This meeting was called for the purpose of arranging the classes for our annual show. The following are the classes arranged:—One class each for Crests and Crest-breds, 12 for Norwich plain-heads (6 for cocks and 6 for hens), six for Yorkshires (3 cocks and 3 hens), one each for Mules, Linnets, and Goldfinches, one for old mule of Norwich D.H., and one for Yorkshires. Mr. T. W. Battye is the judge, this being his third time to judge at this show; evidently he gives satisfaction, as it has never happened in the history of the club for the same man to judge even twice in succession.—A. SOUTH, Assistant Secretary.

Perfectly Satisfied.

Latest Testimony from NEW ZEALAND.

Arrived September 25th, 1908. "Glenforsa," Nelson, New Zealand.—I have much pleasure in advising you of the safe arrival of the four pairs of Yorkshire Canaries, all are well, and in grand condition. Mr. Stringer, the gentleman I got them for, expresses himself well pleased with the birds, and wishes me to say that he is perfectly satisfied with the result of his importation, and thanks you for the good specimens you have sent him. G. A. Macguarie to E. Taylor.

GOOD VALUE FOR THE MONEY.

Goetra, Bangor. September 25th, 1908.—I am pleased to inform you that the Rollers I had from you last year are best songsters around here, which I considered very good for the prices paid for them. I am using one of them training young birds this year, singing from morning till night, and admired by all that hears him. I must say you gave me good value for the money. I. O. Williams to E. Taylor.

GOT A BARGAIN.

Howley Hotel, Warrington. September 24th, 1908.—Allow me to thank you for the pair of Yorkshires, they are a pair of fine birds, and all my friends and customers of the house say I have got a bargain. I shall recommend you to all my friends. J. Johnson to E. Taylor.

FROM SWITZERLAND.

3, St. Nicholas, Neuchatel, Switzerland. September 22nd, 1908.—Please send price list, etc. I have bought many birds from you, and have always been well pleased. I have been always well served, and hope to do further business on receipt of your list, etc. F. E. Walser to E. Taylor.

Readers will understand by the above few recent letters that I still continue to give satisfaction, as in the past. I have thousands of similar testimonials filed for inspection.

Remember I give a week's free trial with every bird I sell.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at on risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

WHY WASTE TIME CULTIVATING WEEDS?

FAT AND HAPPY CANARY: "Goodness gracious! What is this pigeon-chested, knock-kneed thing?

THIN AND SORROWFUL CANARY: "Bad seeds, bad food, a master who did not know how to rear and feed me—and I am the result." (Sheds bitter tears).

What a crop of weeds the gardener raises who does not know his business!

And what a crop of "weeds" the bird-lover produces and keeps who is ignorant of the art of rearing, feeding and managing his birds!

And what a "penny-wise, pound-foolish" individual he is, when by expending six coppers on "Cage Birds Annual," he could obtain those "hints" and "tips" which make the "knowing" fanciers' birds worth gold. Its pages will be found to be a

See what You Get for Your Money.
Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars of subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capehill, Birmingham.

SPRING NET TRAPS.

Strongest, cheapest, and best self acting spring net trap on the market; not cheap, worthless rubbish, but the genuine article, as supplied to Zoological Gardens, London, and all the leading catchers. CAGE BIRDS says: Is very well and strongly made, acts instantly; most convenient size, and the latest pattern. Quite simple to work. Ready baited for Finches and Softbills at one setting. Price, 1/6 each, three for 4/-, post paid. Special trap cages, best out, with partitions for call birds, only 1/- each, post paid. Full instructions.—W. Cornwall, 707, Lincoln-rd., Peterborough.

Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 1/- each; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and most simple on the market, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each: treble ditto, 1/3 each. All above have separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. The original Japanese bird lime, guaranteed absolutely stronger than any other, will not run in sun or freeze in winter, ½-lb. 6d., ¼-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. This is the ideal birdlime for bird-catching, as I guarantee it to hold a Hawk, Rook, or Fowl, and to catch every bird clean, not make them a mass of treacle. Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Round or square-topped call cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen, 27/- gross. Linnet or Goldfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 4/-, 5/-, and 6/- dozen. All kinds cages in stock; please send stamp for wholesale prices. Solid hemp pull lines, specially spun, without snarl or "back twist," 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Everything required by bird-catchers in stock. For full printed list send stamp. See following few testimonials, which say more for my goods than I could ever say myself. "The Gardens, Belvoir, September 9th.—Sir,—Please send following. I had a net trap from you and caught many birds with it, and was quite satisfied.—Yours, A. Barber." "48, Kelham-street, Doncaster.—Sir,—Thanks for netting promptly to hand; marvellous value. Shall want more.—Yours, T. Holton." "4, Spring-gardens, Higham Ferrers, September 15th.—Sir,—Please send ½-lb. lime. I had some very good from you last year.—Yours, R. Stokes." "Woodford Grange Cottages, Thrapston.—Sir,—Clap nets I had from you give every satisfaction. Please send following.—Yours, W. Meacock." "Newnham, Winchfield, Hants, September 18th.—Sir,—Clap nets, etc., received safely. They are quite satisfactory, and have instructed Editor to pay you deposit.—Yours, W. Cherrett." "Yew Tree Cottage, Clutton, —Sir,—Received cages safely, and am perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Hughes." "13, Milk-st., Frome, Somerset.—Sir,—Please send sample yard netting. An old friend of mine bought a pair nets from a firm in this county, and he will want some more very quick. I think you will have no difficulty in supplying me with better than he has got.—Yours, H. Rivers." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, September 19th.—Sir,—I have tried the birdlime, and found it as stated. Whenever a bird touches it, it is like a fly in a spider's web, completely helpless. —Yours, J. Farrington." "14, Plantation-row, Mansfield.—Sir,—Netting to hand, and am entirely satisfied.—Yours, J. Warsop." "25, Wellington-place, Llanwrist.—Sir,—Please send sample line. A friend sent to ——— for some, and it wouldn't catch a fly; it was like oil.—Yours, W. Evans." "64, Hitchin-road, Luton.—Sir,—I shall always use your netting, as I think it best on the market.—Yours, H. Coote." "Gedney, Holbeach, September 4th.—Sir,—Sparrow net to hand. It is a very good one, and dirt cheap, as are all your nets.—Yours, C. Cubley." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS says the netting and hemp pull lines used in my nets are of finest quality, and should stand a great amount of wear. Thousands more testimonials open to inspection any time, therefore I have no need of making a great fuss over an isolated one like a baby over its first doll. Kindly note everything sold by me is sent on approval, either on receipt cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and money refunded in full if perfect satisfaction is not given. All the leading catchers swear by my appliances, and swear at others. See British bird column for further advertisement.

See following few testimonials which have never before been published:—"9, Primrose Hill, Skinningrove, Yorks. September 27th. Sir,—Received the six Linnets, and have already refused 3/- for one of them. I have been singing one of your birds, which you sent last year, at 4/- the dozen, and he won two cup rounds in the Skinningrove, Loftus and District Linnet Singing Society, and several other contests. Please send me six more at 2/6. Yours, W. Hodge." Mr. Hodge again writes: "October 5th. Sir,—Received Linnets with thanks, they are the finest birds I ever had sent, or ever seen sent from you or any other dealer. Thanks for your straightforward dealing. Yours, W. Hodge." "14, Marine-terrace, Skinningrove, Yorks. October 2nd. Sir,—Received Linnets safely, and was very highly satisfied with them, they were in excellent condition, and I give you credit for quick dispatch; no waiting with you. Please send me twelve more. Yours, C. Hart." "Pleasant-street, Edmondsley, County Durham. October 3rd. Sir,—Please send me twelve Linnets at 4/-. I have won more contests than any other man in County of Durham: 34 prizes this season, 1908. Yours, F. Pullar." "30, Victoria-street, Tow Pentre, October 2nd. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived in the pink of condition, quite satisfied. Yours, T. Bird," "54, Brookmill-road, Deptford. September 30th, Sir,—Goldfinches received quite safe, very pleased with them. Yours, B. Corney." "12, King-street, Thornhill-road, Grahamstone. September 28th. Sir,—I want some Linnets, and have been advised by one of our members to try you, as he got 24 grand birds from you last season. Please send me six. Yours, T. Dougall." "18, East-road, Egremont. September 23rd. Sir,—Received the six Goldfinches safe, and I thought you had made a mistake and sent Siberians, they are so large and healthy. Yours, J. Moffatt." "56, Danby-street, Peckham. September 16. Sir.—The six Goldfinches duly arrived. I am very pleased with your selection, and have instructed Editor to pay you deposit. Yours, R. Carter." (Mr. Carter has won 80 prizes in two seasons with Exhibition Britishers.) "79, North-street, Stanground, Peterboro'. September 25th Sir,—Received Goldfinch and Linnet, they are splendid birds for the money. Yours, C. Lee." "8, Albert-street, Aldershot. September 26th. Sir,—Received Goldfinch safe. I did not expect such a bird at this time of year. He is something like a Goldfinch, and I am more than satisfied. Yours, T. Marshall." "The Gate, Clydebank. September 25th. Sir,—The six birds arrived in best of order, and I am delighted with them. Yours, W. Friend." "Cowton Station. September 16th. Sir,—Please send following. The last two Linnets I had are grand. Yours, W. Barker." "80, Godfrey-street, Nottingham. September 19th. Sir,—Many thanks for Goldfinch. I may say you are very straightforward in your dealings. Yours, W. Crook." "6, Baden Terrace, Ryhope Colliery. September 20th. Sir,—Please send 12 Linnets at 6/-; a friend of mine recommended me to you, as he had some grand birds from you last year.—Yours, J. Cope" "Harold Street, Grimsby. September 16th. Sir.—Goldfinches arrived safe; I am well satisfied with such value for money.—Yours, H. Peers." "31, Hill Street, Anderton, Glasgow. September 17th. Sir,—Received birds, and am exceedingly well pleased with them. Thanks for attention. —Yours, J. Kinloch." "146, Commercial Street, Kirkcaldy. September 22nd. Sir,—Received Goldfinch, and am very well pleased with him. Yours, H. Suttie." "3, Berry Terrace, Brynhyfryd. September 21st. Sir,—Please send following. I am proud to say the last lot of Goldfinches. I was very pleased with. I don't trouble about deposit system, as I know what sort of man you are to deal with. I was in your shop two years ago and bought a few, and have sent for more since.—Yours, S. Slocombe." "78, Whitestile Road, Brentford. Sir,—12 Goldfinches arrived all alive on Saturday. I have instructed Editor to forward you deposit. I thank you for sending birds so well, and shall require more next week, and shall forward you the money direct, as I am certain you try to deal fair.—Yours, R. Bamber." "12, Wellington Terrace, Wellington Street, Grimsby. September 22nd. Sir.—Please send me three Goldfinches. My brother got three from you last week, and when I saw them I could not help but send for some.—Yours, F. Peers." Full name and address is given with each of the above letters, so that sceptical persons may make any enquiries they like to prove bona-fides of these testimonials, and a glance at the dates thereon will show that they are not eligible for "Old Age Pensions." Kindly note all birds sent on approval on the distinct understanding that unless fully satisfactory you return them, and I return money in full. No unmentioned conditions or dodges about my method. Cash to me or deposit with CAGE BIRDS, whichever you prefer. See Appliance Columns.

Perfectly Satisfied.

Latest Testimony from NEW ZEALAND.

Arrived September 25th, 1908. "Glenforsa," Nelson, New Zealand.—I have much pleasure in advising you of the safe arrival of the four pairs of Yorkshire Canaries, all are well, and in grand condition. Mr. Stringer, the gentleman I got them for, expresses himself well pleased with the birds, and wishes me to say that he is perfectly satisfied with the result of his importation, and thanks you for the good specimens you have sent him. G. A. Macquarie to E. Taylor.

GOOD VALUE FOR THE MONEY.

Goetra, Bangor. September 25th, 1908.—I am pleased to inform you that the Rollers I had from you last year are best songsters around here, which I considered very good for the prices paid for them. I am using one of them training young birds this year, singing from morning till night, and admired by all that hears him. I must say you gave me good value for the money. I. O. Williams to E. Taylor.

GOT A BARGAIN.

Howley Hotel, Warrington. September 24th, 1908.—Allow me to thank you for the pair of Yorkshires, they are a pair of fine birds, and all my friends and customers of the house say I have got a bargain. I shall recommend you to all my friends. J. Johnson to E. Taylor.

FROM SWITZERLAND.

8, St. Nicholas, Neuchatel, Switzerland. September 22nd, 1908.—Please send price list, etc. I have bought many birds from you, and have always been well pleased. I have been always well served, and hope to do further business on receipt of your list, etc. F. E. Walser to E. Taylor.

Readers will understand hy tbe above few recent letters that I still continue to give satisfaction, as in the past. I have thousands of similar testimonia's filed for inspection.

Remember I give a week's free trial with every bird I sell.

E. Taylor's typical Yorkshires are known throughout the world, and it is an undisputed fact that more winning Yorkshires have been supplied from 3 and 7, Thornton Road, Bradford, tbese last ten years than any half-dozen aviaries in the city.

Satisfaction proved in the Month of October 1908.

Read facts of the last few days received, not October something (blank). Envelopes with post marks and original letters to prove. Following are a few out of the many:

A fact that should not be overlooked.

Tempo, Oct. 1, 1908.—The four Canarics arrived safe and give every satisfaction. I can tell you that I have been buying birds for the last 15 years, and yours are the best value yet received. Am sorry I did not know of you sooner, as it would have saved me pounds in money. I shall recommend you to anyone wanting a good bird. Please send me 2 yellow cocks and 4 buff hens, all Norwich. You can make what use you like of this.—J. Bogne, Grocer and Tea Merchant, to W. Rudd.

72, Farady Street, Dean Bank, Ferryhill. Oct. 3, 1908.—Allow me to express my thanks for the Norwich cock; it arrived in the pink of condition, and living picture. I could not wish for a better. I was surprised at the ideal way you packed it. I am sure if you charged 6d. for packing, it would just be moderate.—J. Leng to W. Rudd.

Crumlin, Mon. Oct. 1, 1908.—I received the bird quite safe, and it is satisfactory.—D. Morris to W. Rudd.

491, Wardley Lane, Swinton. Oct. 3, 1908.—The bird and cage arrived safely this afternoon, and I am pleased with same.—W. Redford to W. Rudd.

Mills Terrace, Chatham. Oct. 1, 1908.—Birds arrived quite safe; I am very pleased with them. They look a nice pair of birds.—G. F. Neve to W. Rudd.

53, Cornwall Road, Williamstown, Penygraig. Oct. 1, 1908.—Bird arrived safe. Very pleased with same; also flute.—Dd. Evans to W. Rudd.

Harrow. Oct. 1, 1908.—Have received birds safe and sound; am quite pleased with them. Shall send to you later on.—J. Sullivan to W. Rudd.

7, Cross Lanes, Newport, I. of Wight. Oct. 1, 1908.—I am writing you as to success with birds I had from you. I have several grand birds from them, all in the pink of condition, and have reared 18 from them.—A. Ralfe to W. Rudd.

20, Merrick Road, Newark. Oct. 1, 1908.—I received the birds safely, and am very pleased with them.—J. Swain to W. Rudd.

Better than expected.

5, Bank View, Hebden Bridge. Oct. 2, 1908.—Received cage. It is better than I expected; I cannot make one for the same price. When I want anything else I will give you my order.—H. Uttley to W. Rudd.

59, Orford Street, Newbury. Oct. 2, 1908.—The bird arrived safely; I am very pleased with it.—E. Pearce to W. Rudd.

2nd Coy. K.R.R., Winchester. Oct. 2, 1908.—Received bird quite safe this day; everything correct; thank you.—W. F. Wild to W. Rudd.

Stockton-on-Tees. Oct. 3, 1908.—Bird arrived safe and gives every satisfaction.—H. Hughes to W. Rudd.

Sutton Lane, Broughton, Astley, Rugby. Oct. 3, 1908.—Bird arrived safely, and gives every satisfaction. I hope I shall do well with him.—T. W. Dobbs to W. Rudd.

Mill Road, Bathgate, N.B. Oct. 1, 1908.—The Goldfinch I got from you has given me every satisfaction. I should like to do further business with you.—J. Drake to W. Rudd.

To Foreign Buyers.

Ontario, Canada.—Sept., 1908.—Just a few lines to say I received the birds (Yorkshires), and all are doing well. I am well pleased with them. I want you to send me another catalogue, as I have given the other away to a bird man in Toronto.—P. A—— to W. Rudd.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

An extraordinary meeting was held in Lockhart's Cafe, Grainger-street, on September 17tb. Mr. Currah presided, and there was a good attendance. A letter was read from the secretaries of the Sunderland Society relative to the question of "Ticked Birds." After a good deal of discussion, in which Messrs. Macdonald, Maddison, Lowery, and Robson took part, it was finally agreed that it was not a question for this society to settle, but one which should be settled by the Norwich Plainhead specialist clubs. The secretaries were instructed to inform Messrs. Reid and Maddison of the decision. The meeting then proceeded with the show business. The number of specials given by members present left no doubt as to our forthcoming show excelling those of past years. We shall be able to give 10s. 6d. for best bird in each section, and our president has promised a guinea for best bird in the British and Foreign bird sections. Mr. F. F. Hawkins will give a beautiful marble timepiece for most points gained throughout members' classes, and 10s. 6d. for most points in novice members' classes (confined to members residing within a radius of 10 miles of Newcastle). Fanciers will look out for our schedule; in the event of any fanciernot getting one, don't forget to write the secretaries, who will be pleased to forward one.—CURRY and HUTCHINSON, Secs., 60, Grosvenor-gardens, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CLUB REPORTS.

HEYWOOD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held September 22nd, Mr. James Perry in the chair. Mr. J. Raynes gave a lecture on "The Norwich Plainhead." The lecturer's advice was to purchase pairs properly matched from a breeder one can rely on. Tell him, he said, the amount of money you are prepared to pay, and ask him to let you have as good a pair as he possibly can for your money. The way some fanciers commenced was to send to one place for a Buff cock and to another for a Yellow hen, and then think they had a matched pair for breeding. He followed these remarks with others on the breeding and rearing of young birds. Afterwards he dealt with the moulting and colour-feeding. This part of the lecture aroused a good deal of discussion, in which a number of members took part. All the questions were ably answered by Mr. Raynes, the last question dealt with being the most popular one: "What constitutes a Tick?" On the proposition of Mr. J. W. Howarth, seconded by Mr. R. D. McMurdo, the lecturer was thanked for his services. At the meeting held afterwards, it was decided to hold our back end show on November 28th.

REIGATE F.A.

A lecture was given by Mr. Lugg, of Lewisham, on "British Birds," at Mutton's Hotel, High-street, Redhill, on Sept. 14th. There were a good number of members present, and they greatly enjoyed the treat. The lecturer dealt with the subject of birds in sections, and suggested that questions might be asked at the end of each. Section 1 consisted of Jays, Missel Thrushes, Blackbirds, Starlings, and Nightingales. He dealt with the feeding and preparing of them for exhibition. Section 2, Larks, Wheatears, Whinchats, Pipits, and Wagtails. Section 3, Goldfinches, Chaffinches, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, Siskins Twites, and Linnets. Great credit is due to Mr. Lugg for the able way in which he spoke of the different birds, which showed that neither time nor trouble had been spared to make the lecture both instructive and interesting, and we had a very good time. In Mr. Lugg the Fancy has a man whose heart and soul is in the keeping of cage birds. Mr. A. J. Kilby, of Caterham, proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer, and Mr. A. W. Bacon seconded it. Mr. Lugg briefly responded by saying that he was only too pleased to be of service to any other brother fancier, and he thought that it was a very good thing to exchange views on any subject.—A. W. BACON.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held September 24th at headquarters, 147, East India Dock-road. We were favoured by a visit from Mr. Jones, of Leyton, who kindly gave us a washing exhibition, which proved very interesting and instructive. The operations of washing were gone through very thoroughly by the exhibitor, who took great pains to explain matters. He also gave an opportunity for some of the members to try their hand at washing. Messrs. J. Hunt, H. W. Cook, and R. Pinder availed themselves of the opportunity. They were, of course, not so successful as Mr. Jones, but their efforts were attended without fatality, and they did very well. The exhibition was very much appreciated by those present, being all novices, and new to this kind of thing; it was especially interesting for the reason that nearly all present would be doing the same thing very shortly, in anticipation of our annual show, which takes place on 14th November next. At the close a very hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. T. G. Hunt, seconded by Mr. F Barber, and carried unanimously. The question of joining the Federation of Cage Birds Societies for London was discussed at great length, and it was decided to elect three volunteers to attend the next delegates' meeting of this society, with a view to ascertaining the benefits to be derived by joining the Federation, and the report of the three volunteers should be placed before the next meeting. It was further decided that the entry fees for the annual show should be 1s. for the first cage, and 6d. for every cage thereafter. This was put to the vote, and carried by a large majority. Twenty-five members signed the attendance book, and the meeting closed at 10.45.—H. W. COOK, Hon. Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTIES O.A.

A very fair attendance of members and friends met at headquarters on September 15th to witness a demonstration of washing and staging Canaries and British birds for the show bench by Messrs. Tringham and Adamthwaite. Unfortunately, at the last moment by unforeseen circumstances the latter was prevented from attending. The preliminary business having been dealt with, including a report of the Committee meeting in which it was decided to join the proposed Federation of London Societies, Mr. Thorpe, the president, called upon Mr. Tringham for his demonstration, stating that he, as well as the members were delighted to witness Mr. Tringham, with his usual kindness, not only to the members, but to the Fancy at large, giving such a useful demonstration. Mr. Tringham then commenced upon a clear buff Yorkshire, explaining his methods as he proceeded. An important thing, he said, was to keep the bird's head free from soap and water until the last possible moment, as nothing caused a bird more suffering and distress than to have its eyes and nostrils filled with soap suds. Afterwards he proceeded to wrap the bird in a cloth and laid it in front of a fire; the reason for this, he explained, was to thoroughly absorb all moisture. After washing another in a much quicker style and while the drying process was proceeding, many questions were asked and a short discussion took place upon various other methods of drying. The President said he never rolled a bird; he thought that by drying them thoroughly with a soft cloth and putting them straight into a cage afterwards they recovered much quicker and were sooner on the perch, and did not suffer so much from fright. Mr. J. A. Simpson who also tried his hand expressed his opinion that with rolling he got a certain amount of heat, and that they came out much better. The birds now having dried were handed round for inspection, and Mr. Tringham in explaining the finishing off process recommended a slight spraying now and again, so that the birds were induced to plume themselves. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Tringham for the able demonstration and was unanimously carried, as was a similar vote to Mr. Simpson. Mr. Tringham replying, said it always gave him great pleasure to help a novice, and that they had only to ask and he would be always ready to give them or the Fancy the benefit of his experience. A vote of thanks to the President closed the meeting.—R. J. PRETTY, Hon. Sec.

WEST BROMWICH & DIST. C.B.S.

A very instructive meeting was held on September 15th. Among other interesting items we tried an experiment writing questions on slips of paper. Each member wrote one question and folded it up. The questions were then put into a hat, shaken up, and handed round, each member to answer the question picked. It was decided to continue with the questions at other meetings. Several things that some of the members were in doubt about were thoroughly thrashed out.—T. DUFFIELD, Sec.

BRADFORD WEST C.B.A.

Mr. W. A. Cowgill gave a washing exhibition and a lecture on the staging of birds at shows at the last meeting held at the Red Lion Hotel, Girlington. He washed two birds, and was eagerly watched by the novice members present. A few questions were asked. Mr. Cowgill referred to the training of young birds from the time of their leaving the old ones up to the time of their being staged on the show bench. A very pleasant evening was spent, which closed with a vote of thanks to the lecturer. H. CLEGG, Secretary.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting held on September 8th. A translation from one of the German papers was read by Mr. J. Schluter, on the "Roller, Glucke, and Flute." This proved to be a very interesting lecture, and at the close numerous questions were asked, especially regarding the notes of the Nightingale, and what effect they had on the song of the Roller. The secretary promised to read a paper on the Nightingale song, taken from a leading German authority, at the next meeting. At the close of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. J. Schluter for his kindness in translating and reading the lecture.—J. W. NORRIS, Hon. Sec.

ORMSKIRK O.S.

At the headquarters of the above new society on Sept. 15th, the following election of officers took place:—Mr. Richard Hunter, Chairman; Mr. W. Withington, Vice-Chairman; Mr. F. Foster, 10, Sunny Fields, Wigan-road, Hon. Secretary; Mr. R. Gardner, Hon. Treasurer; Messrs. J. B. Tasker and W. Withington, Auditors. Meetings are held at the Horse Shoe Inn, the proprietor of which is a fancier of forty years' standing and a Manchester and Palace exhibitor. His two sons are also ardent supporters of our society. Twenty-two members are on the books, fourteen having paid quarterly contributions. At Skelmersdale and Bunscough lectures and recruiting propaganda will shortly take place, with table shows. Over a dozen of our members are "wheelers," and the "rambles" on wheels will be looked forward to, and will assist in welding together the good feeling which exists in this new "birdie" organisation.—FLETCHER FOSTER, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held September 26th, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. There was a very large attendance. A letter from the secretary of the United Kingdom Lizard Society intimated that we had been granted their patronage for our open show, and that their four medals would be competed for on that occasion. This makes eight specialist clubs that have granted us their patronage. The secretary of the Cinnamon Canary Club wrote stating that they had decided to hold the Cinnamon Canary Club show in conjunction with our annual open show, November 20th and 21st, and as we are giving ten classes for Cinnamons, six for Champions and four for Novices, we trust that all Cinnamon breeders will support us. The secretary of the South Shields C.B.A., wrote that at their last meeting their members had unanimously decided to adopt the proposition of the Sunderland Society in regard to the question of clear and ticked birds, and that they had worded their schedule accordingly. A favourable reply was also received from the secretary of the Morpeth Society, although they cannot do anything this year in the matter, as they are having no clear classes alone. We also decided to continue the novice class for Goldfinch or Linnet and Canary Mule only, this making 60 open classes at our annual show, which, with 30 members classes, makes a total of 90 classes.—REID and MADDISON, Hon. Secs.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C B.S.

Sixteen members and friends met at Horton Bank Top on Sept. 13th, for a ramble over the Ogden Moors. Owing to the morning being very wet, the attendance was not as large as was expected, but those who were there were on pleasure bent, and a very enjoyable ramble was commenced at 1.30 p.m. Tram was taken to the "Stag's Head" at Queensbury; from here the party proceeded along the road through mountain to the "Old Raggalds." After leaving the "Old Raggalds," the party took to the moorlands, and travelled over the "Swillings" to "Toil Hill" and down into "Causeway Foot." From the latter place the party entered the moor owned and used as a reservoir by the Halifax Corporation, and proceeded to climb up to the top of "Withins," passing on the way through the Golf Links. Going up the hill two or three heavy weights got to the front, and caused some amusement by saying they were breaking the rather strong wind so that none of the party would be blown away; but it was not pleasant for the man who could not get his wind owing to their stopping the draught. On reaching the Withins Hotel, all the party were ready for a lunch, and a big pile of sandwiches was quickly put out of sight. Who was it had four pockets' full of sandwiches, and emptied them before he left? After half-an-hour's stay here, the party proceeded over the moors past the "Loose Pulley," a small hotel standing in the middle of the moors, and bearing the name of the "Delvers Arms." Then they "dropped down" into Oxenhope for tea, and those two heavy weights knew how to walk when one of them wanted to view the landscape over the wall. On reaching Oxenhope tea was taken at the "Bay Horse Inn," and the party left at seven o'clock to walk to Thornton, with their hands full of heather. Thornton was reached at nine o'clock, and the party, after a short stay at headquarters of the Denholme and Thornton Society, arrived in Bradford at ten o'clock, and went their various ways, tired, but well pleased with a very pleasant afternoon's ramble.—E. W. JOHNSON, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

The following are the shows at which our silver bowls are to be offered: Kelso, October 21st; Wallsend, November 13th and 14th; Berwick, November 19th; Sunderland, November 20th and 21st; and Gateshead, December 11th and 12th. Other shows receiving patronage are South Shields, October 30th and 31st, and Jarrow, November 27th and 28th. 5s. cash, or medal, will be given to winner of bowl, 5s. cash, or medal, to novice gaining most points in bowl contest, and 2s. 6d. for novice gaining second most points. A novice is not to have won a first prize in open competition up to now. The above are extra specials. All members' fees to be paid at once to make members eligible to compete for club specials; fee, 2s. 6d., payable to ANTHONY HAY, 30, Main-road Tweedmouth, Berwick-on-Tweed.

SCOTTISH CREST CLUB.

Committee meeting held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on Sept. 26th. Mr. McLay presided over a fair attendance. A small committee was appointed to select medals for Club Show. Messrs. Andrew Duncan (Shettleston), Wm. Paul (Uphall), Chas. Low (Broughty Ferry), and Jas. McGeachin (Glasgow) were admitted to membership.—R. ADAMSON, Hon. Sec.

WORCESTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Black Horse Hotel, Lowesmoor, on Sept. 17th, when Mr. W. D. Johnson, of Malvern, took the chair. All the necessary business for our open show was soon well in hand. Three new members were proposed and accepted. A hearty vote of thanks to our worthy chairman brought our meeting to a close.—A. E. BISHOP, Hon. Sec.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

Meeting held at Chapel-street Congregational Hall, Salford, on Sept. 28th. Mr. S. Dean, Secretary of the Yorkshire Union, lectured on "Preparing for Exhibition," before a large number of fanciers and friends. The lecturer spoke for nearly an hour, after which he was asked a good number of questions, which he answered. A vote of thanks to the lecturer brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.—Mr. Bladon, President of the C.B.U., was present.—W. JACKSON, Hon. Sec.

PLUMSTEAD AND WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at Holy Trinity Schools, on September 17th. It was agreed that a letter of condolence be sent to Mrs. Hampton. Mr. Newnham was then elected chairman for the evening. Mr. Newnham called on Mr. Meades to give his promised lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. A hearty vote of thanks was given to him at the close for his interesting remarks. Mr. Meades having replied, a vote of thanks to the chairman was passed.—W. PAWLEY, Hon. Sec.

SHIELDS C.B.S.

At our monthly meeting we considered the much-discussed question of "When is a Clear not a Clear?" and we were pleased to have a letter from the energetic Sunderland secretaries dealing with their society's decision on the point. It was unanimously decided to word our schedule this year on the same lines as that recommended, viz., "Clear or Invisible Ticked," and "Visible Ticked or Variegated." This we think will be a boon to fanciers, to know that their birds will not need to be handled by the judge. We have decided to make no reduction in the price of catalogues this year—they will be 6d. both days. We have 56 open classes and schedules will be ready shortly.—WM. DUKE, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN B.B.M AND F.B.C.

Special meeting held at 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle, on September 24th, to consider allocation of cups for competition by the members, and the resignation of the secretary. After a short discussion it was agreed to accept Mr. Slack's resignation, and Mr. J. Bertram being elected, now holds the office of secretary and treasurer combined. It was decided to compete for the following cups for most points gained by a member's three highest birds in the Mule section, British bird section, and the Foreign bird section respectively. All points gained by members at the following shows to count, viz., Newcastle, October 23rd and 24th; South Shields, October 30th and 31st; Wallsend, November 13th and 14th; Sunderland, November 20th and 21st; Gateshead, December 11th and 12th; and Jarrow. Members' subscriptions are now due and must be paid by October 23rd and 24th to enable them to compete for club's cups and medals. Anyone desirous of becoming a member please send name and address to the secretary. Subscription 2/6.—J. BERTRAM, secretary, 95, Gainsbro Grove, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, Spencer Hall, on Sep 25th, Mr. G. Gardner in the chair. A new member was elected, and another nominated. An instructive washing exhibition was given by the noted expert, Mr. W. Shakespeare. The exhibition was very instructive. Mr. Shakespeare washed the first bird very slowly, drawing attention to the principal points as he proceeded. The second bird he washed as it should be done, and in record time, afterwards "capping" all by washing the third bird while blindfolded. The drying cage used by Mr. Shakespeare was of his own workmanship, and was very much admired by all who saw it. Many questions were asked, and Mr. Shakespeare answered them. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer and the chairman brought a very enjoyable meeting to a close. At our next meeting there will be a washing competition for members, and silver medals will be given in each section; Mr. Shakespeare will act as judge. Fanciers and friends are welcomed. Nominations for membership received by next meeting will allow those nominated to compete at annual shows.—GEO. H. NEAL, Hon. Sec.
